[illegible] times we pay any [illegible] to insinuations or attempts at [illegible] so frequently hurled at [illegible] the Patriot, [illegible] and generally their force is spent before they have left the press room at that office. Again we remember from whence these come and the old adage "a person that is thoroughly dishonest himself believes everyone else dishonest," comes up before us. Without any supernatural exertion of the mental vision we see this illustrated in the following article taken from last week's Patriot:

> "Last week we promptly called attention to the fact that the Washington letter published in that issue in the columns of the Fulton Times differed in portions from the Washington letter published in the Adams Journal of the day before so that it was certain "Our Regular Correspondent" did not copy the whole of it from the Journal. But this amendment was only temporary. This week it copies the whole thing word for word, just as it appears in the Journal of the day before. Of course such news is valuable and the people must be very anxious to get it and if anybody can't wait until the Times gets it copied, if they will come into the Patriot office the evening before the Times is printed we shall take pleasure in showing them the "newsy" Washington letter from "Its own Regular Correspondent," in the columns of the Adams Journal. Such enterprise and energy on the part of the Times can not be too highly commended, and really the honesty of the thing is most refreshing,"

In the sentence, "This week it copies the whole thing, word for word, just as it appears in the Journal of the day before," does the editor of the Patriot mean to say that we copied it from the Journal? If so, someone has lied, as the Journal was not received by persons who live in Fulton until Thursday afternoon. But to facts. We thought that the Patriot was deviating considerably from the truth in order to make a point, and although we knew it was a characteristic of the Patriot to do this, we felt that it would be well to have proof of it and consequently wrote to the publisher of the Journal and received in return the following:

ADAMS, N. Y., Sept. 10th '87.

J. R. FAIRGRIEVE, Ed. TIMES, Fulton, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

The Journals are usually sent to Fulton Tuesday evening, but this week they were not sent until Wednesday, think on the 10:38 a. m. train.

Yours truly,

W. J. ALLEN, Publisher.

Now, no mail is received here from Jefferson county except at 8:30 a. m. and 3:30 p. m., so we are informed by our deputy postmaster. The Journal could not have reached here by 8:30 a. m., as it did not leave Adams until 10:38 a. m. and we had our whole edition run off by 3:30 p. m. Again, we do not believe that anyone will be able to see the Washington letter mentioned if they go around to the "Patriot office the evening before THE TIMES is published." If anyone is interested they can go around to the Patriot office on any Tuesday evening and try, but if they expect to see the Washington letter that will appear in THE TIMES on the following day, they will get woefully left. So au revoir brother Bennett. But if you prevaricate in small things like this, it will not tend to increase your reputation for veracity and ultimately people may think that everything you may say on politics or water works for instance is not "The gospel truth."

"How," "Why" and by What Means Was the Hon. H. C. Howe Beaten for State Delegate in the late District Convention?

The Patriot asks the above pertinent questions in its last issue and then in nearly a two column tirade mistates facts, abuses Messrs. Place and Sloan as common thieves and finally ends his "tempest in a teapot" threatening to nullify a written agreement that he and his five compeers would in future caucuses confine themselves to decent tactics and conduct themselves as gentlemen. As he most signally failed to answer the above interrogations, perhaps he will permit me to amend and I will move the previous question.

1. How was Howe Beaten?

By moving to disagree with the report of the committee in so far as the name of H. C. Howe is concerned and in his stead sucstitute the name of H. H. Merriam as state delegate. The amendment was carried nearly two to one, after a free parliamentary contest.

2. Why was Howe beaten?

For being the boss caucus boodler of the town of Volney, for duplicity and double dealing in being nominated and elected as the pronounced friend of Warner Miller and in the day of battle being found in the Hiscock camp on his way to join Morton's forces. For 25 years of political uncertainty for one-fourth of a century of broken promises and a reputation unsavory by reason of the same.

3. By what means was Howe beaten?

"Hoisted on his own petard" "Haman hanged on his own gibet." Traded everything for State delegate, and the Convention didn't deliver the goods.

Couldn't steal a District Convention as easy as a Volney Caucus. These in [illegible] are the chief reasons, and all the [illegible] pleading of his man "Friday" [illegible] to cloud the issue or can now [illegible] result.

And in conclusion permit me to say [illegible] the Patriot to publish in full [illegible] that written compact, or perhaps [illegible] "Articles of Capitulation" [illegible]

[illegible] George [illegible]

The platform of the Labor Party as adopted at Syracuse contains as the most suggestive of its planks, a specific and definite demand for the abolition of all taxes at present assessed and the substitution of a tax upon land valued alone, irrespective of the improvements to the land. It becomes manifestly proper for Mr. George to explain this new departure. It is a subject of so general interest that it deserves to be discussed in this letter, and give in substance the article published in Mr. George's paper. He starts with the fact that land is the only thing which is not produced by the labor of man. That from it by the labor of man the wealth of the world is obtained. He then adds that taxes are assessed for two purposes, to support the government and to repress that which is hurtful to society. He then concludes that to tax what is produced by labor is to repress the creation of wealth, and that by the taxing of land value—the value of the property being fixed by the surrounding circumstances—no repressing of the world's wealth is brought about.

He holds that by this system these results will follow:

Economy in governmental affairs; a great increase of wealth; a greater distribution of wealth.

In the discussion of the first of these claims, he asserts that having but the one tax to collect a vast array of men now employed in gathering the many forms of taxes, direct and indirect, would be done away; thus a great saving in the actual work of administering the affairs of the nation.

It is evident that Mr. George is a most radical free trader for he claims that whatever additional wages the wage-worker obtains by reason of a protective tariff, it is more than compensated by the increased cost of living and by the tendency it gives to a violation of conscience in evading the payment of tariff dues.

He admits that so far as this new system affects the farmer, it would bring additional burden to him, but this burden would, when the system had reached its further development find a compensation in the absence of tax upon his improvements and the increased value and quantity of the productions of his farm.

In discussing the third claim, he avers that unimproved property being made to bear an equal share of the public burdens as the improved, the tendency would be toward improvement of property, or the disposal to some other person who could improve it. This improvement would bring about the employment of a much larger number of workmen than now and make labor at a premium where now it is a drug in the market. Increased pay to the wage-earner would be the result of the lack of supply; and in the accumulation of wealth by the laborer would come the ownership of land by the mechanics and other bread winners. Where as now one man wins his house and lot, in the Utopia of Mr. George every thrifty man would be similarly fortunate.

These are in substance the ideas on which the Labor Party expect to fight during the coming six weeks. It is these which made the Socialists objectionable to the Syracuse delegates and which lead to their expulsion. It is these which are to be used on perhaps half a thousand stumps, particularly in the farming districts, to show wherein the solution of the labor problem lies. THE TIMES reader can form his own conclusions.

We are having our share of foreign potentates, dukes and what not to spend their money at our hotels and be fawned upon by a lot of Anglomaniacs who regard the truly American as some strange unsightly thing to be shunned and avoided. The most of these visitors have left for the fashionable seaside resorts. The Newport season always hangs on later than other fashionable watering places and most of these titled persons have left our city for that place. Perhaps the most noteworthy of these arrivals was Marlborough. Marlborough is not a man whose escapades from a moral standpoint will bear a great deal of inspection. As a matter of fact he has figured as co-respondent in several divorce suits which develop a rather foul smelling social condition. Despite all these he comes here and finds in Newport, some of New York's society leaders ready to receive him with open arms. He devoted two days of his valuable time to our town, but strange to say, he did not get much attention from our sensible business men whose pedigree is as old as this noble reprobate, and whose character for honor and virtue is beyond reproach. We have had as honored guests many foreign noblemen who have behaved like gentlemen. Then too, our citizens have visited Europe, conscious of the fact that they were Americans and behaved with proper dignity but we have a class whose sole aim is to copy the manners of the old world and become positively disgusting in their street attitude.

Proposal to Parties Keeping Summer Boarders.

The following notice is issued by the N. Y. O. & W. Ry:

To Hotel and Boarding House Keepers in Orange, Ulster and Delaware counties.

As the "Summer Homes" along the line of the New York, Ontario & Western Railway are not sufficient in number to accommodate the large increase of boarders from the city, who now avail themselves of the improved railway facilities, to seek summer homes in the mountanous region along the line of this company's railway, notice is hereby given that this company will, upon application to the undersigned, make special arrangements for the transportation of men and material necessary to erect new hotels or boarding houses, for the accommodation of summer boarders.

Applications should be made in writing, stating the proposed locality of the hotel or boarding house, number to be accommodated, and the established cost of the building.

H. C. Beals has in a window of his photograph gallery a large picture of Andersonville prison, which attracts much attention. It was drawn from memory by private Thomas O'Dea of a Maine regiment and we are informed by persons that were there, that it is a very correct representation. It depicts many scenes that are terrible to contemplate.

The large prison with its 35,000 inmates occupies a large part of the sheet while at the top and on the sides are views which represent scenes that were common to this dreadful prison life. Among those who suffered in this pestilent den were the following from this village: H. C. Beals, R. B. McCully, Henry Kendall, William Gore, Albert Miller and Peter Youngs. Frank Sweets formerly of this village now in New Jersey, was also a prisoner there.

In [illegible], with her husband and children she came to America, and settled in Fulton, Oswego county, N.Y. In 1877 they removed to Virginia in the hope of improving Mr. Wright's health. There he died and after taking the remains to Fulton N. Y., for burial she came to Charlott, where she has since made her home with her youngest daughter Miss Carrie Wright. Although not able to take a very active part in church work, yet her devotion was none the less, and she was always ready to donate liberally of her means to the support of the gospel. She raised a family of seven daughters, four of whom were present at the funeral. Her remains were taken to Fulton to be placed beside those of her husband.

More Hotels and Boarding House Wanted.

The New York, Ontario & Western Railway company offers special facilities in the way of transportation of men and materials, to any person who will erect a new hotel or boarding house along the line of its railway, for the accommodation of summer boarders.

Owing to the large increase of boarders from the city, who now avail themselves of the improved railway facilities to seek summer homes in the mountainous region on the line of the Company's railway, the summer homes and hotels have proved insufficient to accommodate this great influx of boarders, and as the company has every reason to expect a much greater increase next season, they hope to provide further facilities in the way of hotels and boarding houses.

Applications should be made in writing to the General Manager of the Railway Company stating the proposed location of the hotel or boarding house, the number to be accommodated and the estimated cost of the building.

[illegible]

[illegible] He renews the recommendation of his predecessor, that the patent office be provided more space and better facilities, and that the model hall and the library room be enlarged and repaired.

The partial report of Senator Cockrell's investigating committee shows that in a number of cases the work in the executive departments is far behind. In the war department it will take four or five years to adjust the claims under the act of July 5, 1884. Congress having imposed extra work on this department should supply additional clerical force, as a matter of justice, and the same claim holds good in the Pension Office, except that the clerks in that Bureau, by laboring longer hours, without increased pay, have caught up with their work.

After working five years, the architect announces the completion of the Pension Building, at a cost of $900,000. It has been occupied two years in an unfinished condition, but is now one of the most spacious, well lighted, ventilated and fully equipped public buildings in the world, having all the latest appliances and improvements for the comfort and convenience of its occupants. The galleries are two-thirds of a mile in length and the record room is sixty-two feet above the hall, and for the purpose of conveying baskets of heavy documents these long distances, an elevated railroad track has been provided which will be very useful.

Of the thirty-six millions of the trade dollars coined, only about eight millions have been presented for redemption, and of these half a million have been re-coined, mostly into dimes; the period for redemption having expired on the third inst, no more can be redeemed.

A late statement prepared by the Treasury shows that during the month of August there was a decrease of $737,870 in the total circulation and an increase of $10,216,200 in the total cash in the Treasury.

President Cleveland, Secretary Fairchild, and Congressmen Carlisle, Mills, and Scott are engaged at Oakview in preparing a tariff reform bill, which is designed to command the unanimous support of the dominant party, though it is understood that Ex-Speaker Randall, who is in the city, was not invited to the consultation. It is believed by well informed persons here that the administration will stake its whole influence upon the fate of the proposed measure.

The International Medical Congress has been in session all this week, opening Monday with President Cleveland and Secretary Bayard officiating and making brief addresses of welcome, both distinguished gentlemen being greeted with generous applause. At night the doctors were honored with a great ball and banquet at the Pension Office, followed the next night by a reception by the President and his wife, at which they are said to have shaken hands with 6,000 people.

Each day the Congress meets in sections and listens to learned essays on the most subtile diseases of the human system and the best methods of treatment in such difficult cases, while the evenings are generally devoted to social festivities, which seem to be thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated by the city's guests, each of whom bears upon his breast a medal and a blue rosette, as a distinguishing mark.

Ex-Governor Porter of Tenn., First Assistant Secretary of State, has resigned his office unexpectedly, assigning the failing health of his wife as the cause, but the real reason is said to be a serious dispute with Secretary Bayard in regard to the Canadian fisheries controversy. Mr. Porter, when questioned upon the subject, did not deny the supposition stated above.

The papers have been filed by Mr. Thobe in his contest for Mr. Carlisle's seat in the fiftieth Congress, and it is noted as a remarkable circumstance, that the Ex-Speaker makes no response.

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Sept. 12.

Salesmen were for a time afraid that there would be no price for cheese to-day, but finally the quotation stated at 10¾c., and gradually crept up until 11¼c. was reached. The bulk of the fine cheese was taken at the latter price, a few small sizes going at ⅛c. higher. Those factorymen who were inclined to hold over, concluded finally to sell at the prices they could get. The general belief seems to be that August cheese will not be any higher, inasmuch as shippers are thoroughly stocked up with the earlier make, and don't want to buy until they have marketed this in order to be ready for Septembers. One factory to-day sold all of its August make, but we learned of no other in the same position. It will take at least another week to market the August cheese. We hear that Canadian cows are being brought here and sold at $20 to $30 a head. The season has been so dry that the Canadians have not the feed necessary to winter them, and after the factories there close many more will be for sale. Following is the list of sales for the day:

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 12.

Cheese—Judging from apperance and the drift of conversation as one mingled with both salesmen and buyers, the market to-day has been an extremely satisfactory one to all parties. Buyers would not give any evidence, save in two or three instances, of a desire to secure cheese, and were apparently indifferent as to whether the salesmen accepted the offers placed on the stock. On the other hand, the buyers were just as unconcerned and expressed themselves as ready to hold their goods, unless they secured prices that approximated at least their ideas of the value. Following table gives the transactions for the day.

Lots	Boxes	Price

Dr. Spencer's Lecture.

A most interesting and instructive lecture was delivered on Monday evening in the parlors of the Presbyterian church, by Dr. DeMarsan Spencer, now stopping in Fulton. Dr. Spencer is a leading authority on everything pertaining to the health and the voice and he set before his hearers in plain and simple language the great necessity of preserving both, not alone for persona comfort and long life, but for the pleasure and delight that a cultivated voice gives our friends.

Dr. Spencer showed forcibly that anyone, at any age, can improve his or her voice if they will. He graphically illustrated on the blackboard the three grand divisions of tone and the ease with which anyone can acquire them. He dwelt at some length on the value of a sound body and a sound mind and illustrated his teaching to the primary [illegible]

[illegible] Dilts and Redhead implored Judge Nutting to intercede for them and if possible affect a compromise". Nothing could be further from the truth. Mr. Redhead during the short hour he remained stated that, he wished it distinctly understood that we wanted no compromise, or any favors shown, beyond a simple recognition of our rights and after giving a statement of the actual facts as regards the caucus, said, if this entitles our delegation to admission we ask you and your Republican friends in Oswego to use your influence to that end. The same thing was tersly stated by Mr. Dilts. This compromise did not spring from any words or desire on the part of those representing the 350 majority caucus. Some other parties had already visited the Head and chief of the Howe faction in Oswego for council, for on Friday previous to the visit of the gentlemen in question to the office of Judge Nutting, the writer called upon Hon. Thos. Mott who upon being asked what was going to be done with Volney said "I told the Fulton folk sthey would have to divide and let in half of each delegation."—No, these never was a wish expressed to be a "half-delegate" by any one attending the conventions. The Patriot says, the subsequent complection of the committee in the District convention shows the Howe faction would have been admitted, and their subsequent action shows just the reverse. On the vote of substituting Mr. Merriam for Mr. Howe it stood 6½ to 7½ against, while a motion to reconsider was afterwards passed by one majority. In the con vention the vote was nearly two to one in favor of substituting Mr. Merriam, in place of Mr. Howe.

It may not be known that the Granby committee-man, made so by the defection of a Merriam delegate, was instructed to vote for either two delegates in Volney or none, and his course in the committee was such as to have given the Case delegation a strong lead in the convention.—It is the general opinion that the delegations elected by ballot would have been admitted to both conventions. It is not true that the nominees were opposed to their admission. There were two sides to this question as the Patriot editor must by this time have learned. But whatever of disappointment or grief may have to be borne, the blame can in no way be charged to bad faith on the part of the Case faction in Fulton, nor is there any excuse to declare that the compromise made and entered into to secure honest caucuses in Volney is void and will not be carried out. The effort to do so will certainly be attempted at the first opportunity. Honesty is the best policy—every time.

The Annual Review.

The annual review of the Fulton Fire Department occurred last Thursday afternoon. The boys turned out about 120 strong under the charge of Chief F. G. Mosher, 1st Assistant O. F. More and 2d Assistant C. G. Hewes and presented a fine appearance.

No parade was made this year. The members of the village Board reviewed the firemen about 3:30 p.m. on First street in front of the engine house after which headed by the Fulton Band, they proceeded down first street to the canal in the following order:

Hook & Ladder Co, A. Tooley,	Foreman;
Steamer No. 1, N. Sykes,	"
Mutual Hose, M. M. Williams	"
Steamer No. 2, W. J. Lovejoy,	"
Johnson Hose, W. T. Mosher,	"
Sharp Hose, L. Goman,	"
Osgood Hose, G. Vanlinder,	"

On reaching the canal below the bridge, a test of the steamers was made of which O. S. Hammond is engineer of No. 1 and Daniel Roach of No. 2. No. 2 threw a stream in six minutes and ten seconds, No. 1 in six minutes and twelve seconds. Although the latter started her pump first by a few seconds it failed to throw water. Protection Hook and Ladder Company gave a fine exhibition of their work, raising their extension ladder in two minutes, fifty-five seconds. The following is from President Waugh concerning the review:

The annual review of Fulton Fire Department, which took place on the afternoon of September 8, 1887, was a success. Everything was clean and in good order. The boys when in line and on march did credit to themselves and to the village. The test of the steamers to see which would throw first water was won by No. 2 in six minutes, ten seconds; No. 1, in six minutes, twelve seconds. Although No. 1 started first, the pump failed to throw for a few seconds. The Hook and Ladder boys did well in putting up ladders, climbing, etc., which showed they understood their business.

Mutual Hose Co. No. 1, Johnson Hose Co. No. 2, Sharp Hose Co. No. 3 and Osgood Hose Co. No. 4, all deserve much credit for their fine apppearance and gentlemanly conduct which shows that Chief Mosher and his assistants understand their business. In behalf of the Village of Fulton I take the liberty of thanking them for their gentlemanly conduct toward the Trustees and myself, who were invited to review them upon this occasion.

A Dwelling House Burned.

Last Thursday morning about nine o'clock, fire was discovered in the house occupied by A. W. Laws at the corner of Fifth street and Broadway.

A telephone message was sent down town and the fire alarm sounded, which called out the whole Fire Department but before the hose could be laid from the steamers which were stationed behind the Stove Works, the building was completely destroyed.

The fire originated in the upper part of the ell of the house from a defective chimney and when discovered was beyond redemption. The house was the property of Mr. Laws' two daughters, and it is said that there was no insurance. A part of the furniture was saved.

Fulton Enselage and Fodder Co.

Efforts are now being made to organize a stock company under the above title for the manufacture of Enselage and Foder cutters (the Kentrick patent) with a capital stock of $20,000. Negotiations for a lot 60 feet front by 124 deep at the corner of First and State streets have been made on which it is proposed to erect a brick building 36 x 100 feet, two stories and an attic at a cost of $3,500. The shares sell at $100 each and $11,000 worth have already been subscribed for. Samples of the cutters are on exhibition at the fair this week.

Our New Directory.

As mentioned in THE TIMES a few weeks since a new directory will soon be issued of Fulton and Oswego Falls. Mr. Samuel Parsons a protical man of eight years experience in this work is the publisher and is now canvassing the two villages himself and is meeting with much encouragement in his work. In addition to the general and classified directories which were previously mentioned, the directory will contain an outline map of the villages. The subscription price is $2.50 and it will be well worth the money.

Another Version of It.

The "perpendicular knolls" in the bed of the river are said to be the post holes to which the eel pots are anchored during the season. The smoothness of the sides of the holes are made by eels becoming imprisoned in them at low water. The bones of the eels had in instances been ground to impalpable powder by the action of the water on stones that had fallen in the holes. Your correspondent has some of the powder, which an analysis shows to be 90 per cent of calcarea carbonate.—Cor. Oswego Times.

The race wall below the falls moves slowly along down the river. A curious feature in the bed of the river is noticed since the water was turned off. Innumerable holes are found running Perpendicularly into the rock, varying in size from four to eight inches in diameter, with the sides as smooth as marble. In each hole a single stone is found worn round and smooth by the constant action of the water. It is believed that these holes have been forming and deepening for ages, being first stated by the eddies formed by the falls, Some of these cavities are urn shaped, but generally of uniform diameter. They are quite a curiosity and have already been visited by many people.—Fulton Cor. to Standard.

"A large number of these stones are labeled and used as paper weights at different places in the village.

THE MAIN BUILDING.

On entering the building from the north, the first stand to the right is that of the new firm of Dixon & Collins, of Oswego Falls with a line of ready made clothing. Next comes Schilling of Oswego with a display of musical instruments. Then comes the stand of M. M. Williams the popular Oneida street druggist with a very fine exhibit. On the left the enterprising firm of Ney & Allen show samples of the goods that can be found at the Boston Bazaar and M. V. Connell with a superior line of boots, shoes, slippers, &c.

At the east entrance the well-known First street merchant occupies all the space on the right and vies with competitors from Syracuse and Oswego and successfully too in his elaborate display of dry and fancy goods. Draper is directly opposite and is surpassed by none in his exhibit of crockery from his well-filled store in this village.

On the west side can be found an excellent display of musical-instruments from Bristol's. Monuments manufactured by J. R. Blanchard of Baldwinsville and on the opposite side is an exceedingly large exhibit of the stock that is carried by the well-known firm of Merriam & Sibbitt, Arcade Block, Oswego.

The whole of the south-east part down stairs is occupied by Kingsford of Oswego, with dry goods, &c., While opposite is C. R. Nichols, the Oneida street jeweler and optician, where a person can almost tell the time of day with their eyes shut, so numerous are the clocks, watches, &c. before him. Dey Brothers of Syracuse have an exhibit for the first time and it is needless to say that what they show is the best that can be found in their line.

Up stairs, Mrs. F K. Jones, Mrs. Emerick, Mrs. L. B. Babcock and Mrs. H. S. Gardner of Fulton and Mrs. Soule of Syracuse all have stands for the display of their fancy work while many other ladies in this vicinity contribute to this interesting department.

Hayden of Oswego shows a line of crockery and china ware. F. A. Thomas of Mexico has a general museum with many thousand relics and specimens. Cabel Green of Oswego, wall paper. Samuel Green, candies, many of which are of his own make and too well-known to need special mention. These and many others have articles on exhibit that cannot fail to attract as well as please.

The exhibition of all kinds of farmers' impliments in different parts of the grounds is also good.

Green rye is growing in favor among dairymen as a forage crop for milk cows. It not only causes an increase in the quantity of milk but the quality of cream and butter are said to be improved by its use.

"The essence of good butter-making is that the period of time between the milking of the cow and the making of the butter should be minimized" This is the testimony of Mr. Hudson, a great English butter expert.

Cows need light, not only for their own health and comfort, but because good butter can not be make from milk of cows kept in dark stables. Air, light, cleanliness and warmth are four essentials of a cow stable where cows are kept for a profit.

It is said that if eggs are packed with the small end downward, and in layers, without touching each other, with plenty of wheat or corn as a packing material, they will keep for hatching purposes for two months.

Remember that the greatest enemy a plant can have is another plant of the same kind growing by its side, as both feed on the same material. Remove the weaker plants and leave the stronger. One good plant will yield more than two plants under unfavorable conditions.

A Would-be Farmer.

"Brick" Pomeroy tell in his Advance Thought what he would do if he were a farmer, as follows:

Sleep on an old packed straw bed when there was clean, bright straw to be had.

Spend even one hour idly in town till we had wood and kindling cut and piled near the kitchen stove to last at least six weeks ahead as a foundation, below which the woodpile should not drop.

Compel our children to eat from soiled dishes, and thus educate them to slovenliness.

Break our backs on feats of strength to see which neighbor could lift the most, then grunt for a month and let our wife lug a swillpail to and fro.

Borrow any tool or other articles unless the owner would agree to come for them and take them home after we were through with them.

Pile or hang soiled clothes in a bedroom till it smelt like sheep washing.

Let the calf chew harness except it belonged to a visitor we never wished to see again.

Spend more for beer than for books, or more for tobacco than for newspapers.

Never give a note to any man if we could help it and never sign a contract with a stranger.

Drop tools, etc., where they were used, and thus spend an hour or a day in hunting for them.

Never ask or expect children to cut wood, hoe, mow, or do any kind of farm work except with the best of tools in good order, least they tire of farm life and go to the devil across lots.

Would have no more land to cultivate than we could keep entirely free from weeds.

Never leave a horse standing in a storm or out in the cold while we are in town.

Never have more animals than we have good shelter for.

Never breed other than the best of animals we could obtain for stock purposes.

Never neglect to vote, and this according to your judgment, without regard to prejudice.

Never sell the best and keep the poorest, but would have everything from wife, children, cattle, barn, wood-shed, stables, furniture and food, the best that could be produced, even if all we had could be loaded in one wheelbarrow.

Would envy no man, but so live that others might envy us.

Nor would we ever permit the cellar to be a dirt filled disease breeder.

Proper Food For Work Horses.

It is the habit of most American farmers to use corn almost exclusively [illegible] for work horses, the same as [illegible] for fattening animals. Notable Prisoners at Sing Sing.

An Albany man who was down at Sing Sing a few days ago on a visit to Keeper Conaughton, formerly of Albany, was afforded an opportunity of seeing the prisoners on Sunday. Among them he saw Ferdinand Ward, the financier, Jaehne, McQuade and O'Neil, the boodle alderman, Crowley, the New York ex-police sergeant doing 18 years for an assault, and other notable prisoners. Crowley he describes as one of the finest looking men in the prison, and in conversation the ex-sargeant of police said that he did not expect to be confined much longer. Ward wears a white necktie to service in the chapel. He seems to have carried business methods into prison life, and where he formerly went for the dollars and let the cents look out for themselves, he now goes for the pennies utterly regardless of dollars. Ward does not use tobacco but he gets his allowance the same as other prisoners and can do what he likes with it. "And what do you suppose he does?" inquired the keeper of the Albany visitor. "Don't know." "Well, he will sell it to those who run short for 10 cents. But if while negotiating the sale another man comes along and offers him 11 cents the 11 cent man will get the tobacco." Ward is now in the printing office, printing the tags used on goods shipped from the prison. The boodle aldermen all looked well and contented.—Albany Journal.

"And you would fain bear her off to some woodbine cottage?"

"That is what I would fainest, sir."

"Ah—um! What's your salary?"

"Seven dollars a week, sir."

"Jess so; take her. I was afraid you couldn't support us all on your wages, but its all right, Hurry up things and get into the the family in time to pay the next month's rent. You don't know what a relief it will be to us old folks to have some one to support us.—Detroit Free Press.

Looking for His Scalp.

A sullen-looking man with a horsewhip entered a Nebraska newspaper office and asked the boy where the editor was. The boy "Sized him up" and answered:

"Gone to Ohio; won't be back for six months."

"Where's the foreman?"

"He's gone to Washington with an invitation to the President. Won't be back 'fore cold weather. What do you want—want to paralyze 'em?"

"No, no; I owe $4 and I thought I'd pay up."

"That so? Hold on a second; perhaps the editor hasn't started yet."

He whistled, a long, dark form crawled out of the wood box and the editor was ready for business.—Nebraska State Journal.

"Laura," said he, "it is sad that we are prevented by poverty from uniting our fates, is it not?"

"It is, indeed; yet if papa would let me use my money——"

"Have you got any money?" he inquired eagerly.

"Yes," she replied, coyly. "I had some, but I am pretty hard pressed now."

He readily perceived the truth of her statement.—Merchant Traveler.

VOLUME 20—[illegible]

[illegible] we'll scamper out,
[illegible] of day,
[illegible] a' whistlin' gall,
[illegible] day,
[illegible] feedin' th' hay,
[illegible]
[illegible] at a tip top seat,
[illegible] m to town.
An' I don't know how my heart'd thump.
[illegible] they made,
[illegible] into line,
[illegible] parade;
I think how we'd all fall in behind,
An' follow 'em all aroun',
Till my heart beat fast as it used to do
When the circus come to town.

I kin see the ring on the village green,
With the sawdust roun' inside,
An' th' house on top o' th' elephant's back,
Where the 'hammedans used to ride;
I kin hear th' crack o' the master's whip,
An' th' shriek o' th' striped clown,
As we sat on th' highest seat an' laff'd,
While the circus cum to town.

I'm growin' old, an' don't git roun'
As well as I used to do;
But I've had my share o' th' sweets o' life,
And also my share o' th' bitter too,
An' whenever I see 'em a pastin' up
Them posters all roun',
My heart beats just as it used to do,
When the circus cum to town.

There are some who contend that a circus would Old Satan himself degrade;
But I've noticed they're allus right on hand
For the daily street parade;
An' there's some a preachin' agin it now.
An' tryin' to run it down,
Who cried like sin, cause it raised all day,
When the circus cum to town.

The Difference.

We sat together on the shore,
Close wrapped in one big shawl;
I pressed her hand, and blindly swore
She was my life, my all.

For hours we sat beneath the moon
Regardless of time's flight,
Both quite content to sit and spoon
Like that the live-long night.

But now, alas! we never sit
Close wrapped in one big shawl,
And that is not the whole of it—
We don't spoon now at all.

For that was quite five years ago—
It seems as if 'twere ten;
How soft we were! Besides, you know,
We were not married then.

—Journal of Education.

Wreck of the Thunderbolt.

For full six weeks the hen had sat
On two corncobs and a small brickbat,
And she looked at the storm, that fierce old fowl,
With a tragic cluck and a wrathful scowl.
The clouds grew black and a lightning shaft
Struck the old hen directly aft.
High, high above the thunder then
Arose the shriek of the maddened hen.
For with savage peck she had met the shock,
This sturdy, tough old Plymouth Rock,
And bounding back with awful jolt
Went the ghastly wreck of a thunderbolt.

THEY MET HALF-WAY.

"There goes another button!" I exclaimed, angirly. "I do wish you would learn how to button shoes, Charlie."

"I wish you would buy shoes that are large enough for you," he said, good naturedly.

The six footer who made this remark was my husband, and he was getting very red in the face trying to button my shoes. I was going away to visit my step-father, who was a man of means in New York, and I was very nervous least I should miss the train.

As it looked like rain I asked my husband to help me get out my alpaca dress, so that I could wear it.

Charlie went to work at the straps and lock, and it proved stubborn. He grasped, and twisted until his breath was gone, but the catch would not yield. Bang! He brought it down at last, and the lid flew up with a snap, but Charlie uttered a howl of pain; the corner of the trunk had crushed his foot.

"Confound it," he muttered "do get out what you need and be done with it."

I hauled out the alpaca, a good deal tumbled and somewhat the worse for wear. Charlie seized upon my nicely ironed linen almost before I was out of it, crushed it into the trunk, which he locked and shouldered, and then he went jumping down stairs.

"Dear me, Jo, what an irritable man your husband is!" said mamma. Why, child that must be your old alpaca."

"To be sure it is, mamma," I answered, smoothing out the wrinkles.

Mamma sighed profoundly and shook her head. She did not like Charles and, always regretted that I had refused a wealthy offer and taken up with a poor clerk. I had just got the dress on when I heard him shout out that it was time to go to the train.

Mamma dropped the brush and ran down and I followed, putting in my enameled cuff buttons as I went. One slipped from my nervous fingers and into the hall under Charlie's feet. Of course he made a step and smashed it.

"Oh, see what you have done now!" I cried out, and tears, so long restrained, broke forth.

"I am always putting my foot in it, it seems," said Charlie, stiffly.

I lingered a moment, hoping he might make some advances toward a reconciliation and give me an excuse for taking back all the unkind words I had uttered, but he only said, carelessly:

"You had better get your breakfast," and strode away whistling a shriller pitch than ever.

I followed mamma into the breakfast room and scalded my mouth with some hot coffee, and a few minutes later we were off, rattling away under the leaden sky toward the depot.

"I hope we are in time," said mamma.

Then silence fell. I glanced at my husband; he was gazing out of the window and still whistling under his breath. In ten minutes we should part and never meet again perhaps. The last thought was too much for me.

"Oh, Charlie!" I whispered, and slid my hand into his.

His fingers lay passive in the grasp of mine. He did not even turn his eyes toward me.

The carriage stopped; we were at the station.

"Hurry up, there's not a second to lose," said Charlie, and before I could get my breath we were out on the train.

"Good-by, Charlie," I gasped, my heart in my eyes.

"Good-by Midget," he responded, softening at the last moment. "Don't worry about me. I shall a jolly lark while you're away."

"Oh, Charlie."

The idea of talking about a "jolly lark" and my heart ready to break. But the train was gone, leaving Charlie on the platform, kissing the tips of his fingers.

"Dear me, Jo, what an absurd man your husband is" remarked mamma in a severe whisper; "he has attracted everybody's attention. And you—surely are not crying, Jo?"

I was crying like a baby, and would have given the round world to have escaped from mamma and gone back to Charlie.

Such a miserable journey as it was, and such a miserable night as followed, although mamma did her best to make me comfortable in her stylish city home. I could think of nothing but Charlie. I had parted from him in anger, and I must go back to ask his forgiveness. Life was such an uncertain thing, a day, an hour might be too late.

Bright and early the next morning I was off. Mamma was very angry and said a great deal, but all that does not matter. I gave up my visit and started home to Charlie. The flying train seemed to creep. I was in a fever of remorse and impatience.

Toward noon we came to the Relay House and got off to exchange trains. I felt exceedingly lonely and down hearted [illegible] up my belongings and [illegible] dreary miles lay [illegible]

[illegible] timidly [illegible] strong hand [illegible]

"Why, Jo!"

[illegible] off and hurried [illegible]

"And I was coming to you," he said, his voice unsteadily. "I might [illegible] my mind not to stand another night like the last one. Jo, I was a brute to treat you as I did, but."—

"Hush, hush!" I said "the fault was all with me, but I will never be cross to to you again while I live—I never will, Charlie!"

"Well, now, which way do we travel?" questioned Charlie when it was all over; "hadn't you better go back to mamma, my dear and have your visit out."

"No, Charlie, I want to go with you; there is no place in the world like our little home."

Charlie's face spoke whole libraries; and home we went hand in hand, so to speak.

Years have come and gone since that happy, happy day when Charlie and I met each other half way, we have had our share of care and sorrow; but no shadow or doubt or anger or indefference has ever since dimmed the sunshine of our wedded bliss.

Peculiar People.

The dudish young man who is mashed on his shape.

The "saphead" that always agrees to everything you say.

The person who attempts to change seats in a rowboat loaded with passengers.

The garrulous and lofty individual who persists in using big words of which he does not know the meaning.

The hale fellow well met who thinks it funny to slap you familiarly on the back with sufficient force to knock a lung out.

The too too young person who esteems it the "propah capah" to say "gotten" for got.

The impecunious acquaintance who "strikes" you for a loan.

The beery individual who insists on telling you a long story.

The man who is always bemoaning his fate.

The person who persists in perpetuating puns.

The irascible man who snaps you up without cause or provocation.

The confidential whisperer who eats raw onions.

The man who says "I told you so."

The fool friend, who while wishing you well, is constantly predicting direful disaster and disappointment.

The imperturbable person who is never surprised at anything.

The action of Carter's Little Liver Pills is pleasant, mild and natural. They gently stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels, but do not purge. They are sure to please.

Bright Sayings.

Baby was riding out one day, and met a wee baby in its carriage. All babies he dearly loves. After critically contemplating this one, he remarked meditatively: "I dess dat baby's as tunning a lickle Hebrew Moses.

Our little three-year old, who had listened attentively to the story of Aaron's rod, was buttoning her shoe when suddenly she said: "Father, if I should throw this button-hook on the floor, and behold! it became a serpent, would it be an angle-worm?"

Georgiana, being refused the privilege of inviting a playmate from over over the way felt decidedly lonesome. "I wish I had been made in two parts" she said, "Then I could go out and run up and down, and play with myself."

A light rain which had fallen during the night had frozen the trees, and they gleamed and glittered in the morning sun. Molly, who had crawled out of her crib to look out of the window, came running back to her mother, calling excitedly: "O mamma, mamma! dress me quick. The trees have all turned to candy."

Every nervous person should try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. They are made specially for nervous and dyspeptic men and women, and are just the medicine needed by all persons, who, from any cause do not sleep well and who fail to get proper strength from their food. Cases of weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia, nervous and sick headache, &c., yield to the use of Little Nerve Pills, particularly if combined with Carter's Little Liver Pills. In vials at 25 cents.

A Brief Respite.

"Well, Smith, I'm glad to see you out at last. You've had an awful long pull of it, haven't you?"

"Yes, that's so, and I'm grateful enough to that medical congress in Washington for giving me a lift."

"Medical congress! Why, you haven't been to Washington to be treated, have you?"

"No, but my doctor has been down there for nearly a week, and I'm feeling first rate."—Springfield Union.

[illegible] & Co., druggists, of [illegible], N. Y., say: [illegible]

[illegible]

"While I was out riding last evening" said a Dakota woman who was visiting friends in Chicago, "I saw another one of those street fakirs standing on a box and making a great noise in selling something. I can't bear them—one of them was the cause of the death of my late husband."

"Indeed," said a gentleman who had just made her acquaintance, "in what way?"

"One evening while my husband was at the court house, one of the traveling quack doctors got up in a wagon on the next corner and began trying to sell some sort of condition powders, or something and of course made a great noise. My husband hearing someone making such a yelling rushed out with no hat, took a cold, which brought on pneumonia and finally killed him."

"Ah, your husband was sheriff I suppose, and ran down to see if anybody was disturbing the peace."

"Oh, no, he was circuit judge and was holding an evening session of court. He adjourned it as soon as he heard the noise and went out on a run. You see, he thought from the hollering that it was one of the boys from Pizen creek ranch trying to lick the city marshall, and he wanted to see the fun. The judge used to boast that he had been on the bench eleven years in Dakota and he never missed a fight during the whole time. Poor John had a kind of a bad fist himself; he put it all over the county attorney two or three times when he got too fresh."—F. H. Carruth formerly of the Dakota Bell.

The biggest thing out is what the druggists term Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; its sale is enormous and it has never been known to fail. Price 25 cents.

It is well to remember that the oldest cases of rheumatism and neuralgia have been speedily cured by Salvation Oil. Price 25 cents a bottle.

Colorow Bounced.

The St. Louis Republican tells how Gen. McCook bounced Colorow:

Colorow, the leader of the hostile Indians in the present disturbances, is what frontiersmen call "a bad Indian." He has always hated the whites venomously, and it is only fear of their overwhelming numbers that has kept him from being always on the warpath. As it is, he has for years past been annoying the settlers in every way he can plan, destroying the grass so there can be no pasturage for cattle anywhere near the reservation, driving off mining prospectors whenever in his wanderings with his band he came across them, no matter how far off the Indian lands may be, and setting fire in every direction to the timber. Years ago he was the chief of the White River Utes, but was deposed from that position for an exhibition of cowardice. The story of his deposition runs that during the term of Gov. McCook in Colorado, Colorow and a band of Utes came to Denver and camped on the outskirts of the city. One day Colorow sent word that he wanted a new tent. McCook despatched an agent to see in what condition Colorow's tent was, and the report was that he did not need a new tent, and McCook accordingly refused him. In the afternoon while the governor was in his office, Colorow came in half drunk, with a revolver in his hand, and came over where McCook was writing and sat down. The governor took in the situation at a glance, but did not look up.

"McCook liar!" said Colorow.

The governor went on writing.

"McCook —— liar!" repeated the chief.

Still McCook continued with his work.

"McCook —— —— liar!" asid Colorow, reaching a climax.

Nevertheless McCook would not look at him.

By this time Colorow had concluded that there was no fight in the governor, and allow the hand containing the revolver to drop to his side. The move was a fatal one. In an instant McCook seized his wrist, knocked the weapon away from him, and, catching the astonished Indian by the neck, kicked him down stairs and out into the street, where there were a number of Utes standing about. With great tact McCook pointed to the prostrate and humiliated form of Colorow and, turning to the Utes, said: "No man to lead braves. Colorow an old wowan. Get a man for a chief." Then turning on his heel he walked up stairs. The next day the mortified Utes deposed Colorow.

A new counterfeit silver dollar is in circulation, look out for them. They are somewhat lighter in color than the genuine, having a clean soapy appearance and feeling. The lines of the engraving are not sharp, and the coin is noticably thicker and the diameter slightly shorter. When dropped it does not ring like silver coin, or drop flat like lead, but emits a sharp metalic sound. In the word "pluribus" the 's' is imperfect, and the casting of the letters in the motto, "In God we trust," is bad. The counterfeit is softer than the genuine coin.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try that successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which we sell on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Why He Didn't Go In.

A young man who was about to enter a drinking saloon suddenly stopped, and with a set look upon his face walked rapidly away. "Sir," said an old gentleman who had observed his movements, "you fill my heart with joy. You have resolved never to enter that accursed place again?" "I won't at present, at least sir," responded the youth; "you see, it suddenly occurred to me that I owe the proprietor seventy five cents."—Tid-Bits.

12 Pounds of Tumor

Is a hideous thing to have attached to a human frame, yet Mr. [illegible], of Upper Stillwater (part of Old Town, Me.) had one in his groin which he carried for about ten years. It began to form about fourteen years ago being at first hardly larger than a pea. Mr. [illegible], in his sworn statement before ex-Governor D. F. Davis of Maine, says:

"At first it did not trouble me much but as it grew larger it was accompanied by severe darting pains. Food did not digest; had attacks of dizziness; roaring sounds in ears and passed sleepless nights. In 1880, tumor weighed several pounds and extended to knee. Now least exertion caused intense, tearing pain like sticking of needles in flesh. Abandoned hope and took to bed. Physicians declined to cut it out, saying I was too old and weak to survive. Am [illegible] years of age. Some one recommended Brown's Sarsaparilla. I experienced immediate change for better. Appetite returned; food ceased to trouble me; ringing noises left my head, and best of all tumor began to shrivel up and disappear. It is now [illegible] has for some time been entirely gone. Can and do do good day's work. I say God bless the man who invented this medicine. He should wear a crown. I mean always to keep by me a bottle of Brown's Sarsaparilla while I live."

With this statement we have paper signed by postmaster, druggist as well as seven of the town officials stating they know the above to be true, and ex-Gov. Davis also adds his evidence. There is no case of Blood disease which cannot be cured by [illegible] decision of the supreme court of [illegible] is that the the Anarchists of [illegible] must suffer the death penalty. [illegible] are August Spies, Samuel Fielden, A. R. An attempt will be made to appeal the case to the United States Supreme court but it is not probable that it will prevail. The sentence is that is that they be hanged on November 11th.

The Great G. A. R. Re-Union at St Louis.

The Grand Army of the Republic will hold their annual encampment at St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26th, to October 1st, 1887, and it is expected that it will be the most interesting and largely attended meeting that this great organization has ever held.

Prominent citizens both civic and military will be present from all parts of the Union, and join with the citizens of St. Louis in doing honor to the brave defenders of our country.

Feeling assured that members of the G. A. R. Posts along the line of this road would desire to meet their old comrades at this grand re-union has prompted the Ontario & Western to offer special inducements in transportation.

Round trip tickets will be sold from all stations to members of the G. A. R. and their families, also to members of the Women's Relief Corps to St. Louis and return for $20.50.

[illegible] Burdell [illegible] was committed to the dust in Greenwood. The history is worthy of a repetition.

Dr. Burdell was a dentist whose practice was chiefly among the people of wealth and fashion. He had an office in Bond street, then the fashionable and bon ton street of this city. The great Appleton publishing house now stands on the site of the Burdell mansion. The doctor occupied the parlor floor of the building and the remainder was rented to a Mrs. Cunningham who with her two very presentable and refined appearing daughters kept a fashionable boarding house. The Dr. and his landlady were more or less friendly; while the fact that he was known to be worth from $75,000 to $100,000 and a bachelor, too, made him a desirable "catch" in the circle of fashion among which his patients were mostly found.

On the night of the last day of January, 1857, the family of Mrs. Cunningham, with the other inmates of the house were known to be holding a high carnival of fun and merriment. The next morning the dentist doctor was found stark dead in the hall of the house with a dagger piercing his heart. The landlady, Mrs. Cunningham, was instantly arrested. Her prosecution was conducted by A. Oakley Hall, then not thirty years old. Her defense was conducted by John Graham, who had then begun to show those abilities which made him afterwards so famous as a criminal lawyer and which culminated in his masterly though unsuccessful defense of Boss Tweed. The evidence was wholly circumstantial and the jury failed to convict. The general opinion, however, was that she was guilty.

Not content with this result, Mrs. Cunningham proclaimed herself the wife of Dr. Burdell and instituted proceedings in the Surrogate's court for the estate, large for those times, of which the doctor died possessed. In support of her claim she produced a posthumous child and a certificate of marriage. The whole thing was cleverly proved a perjury by the District Attorney, Oakley Hall. Absurdly imagining that the next thing Mrs. Cunningham would do would be to lay claim to the property as the wife of Dr. Burdell, he so arranged matters that this posthumous child could be readily obtained from Bellevue Hospital through the connivance of a Dr. Uhl and an attendant nurse. Mrs. Cunningham fell into the trap and on the trial before the Surrogate, the District Attorney very neatly turned the tables on her by making her supposed witness prove what was really done. So she lost her case. From this city she went to California, married a miner named Williams, who when he learned the character of his wife quietly gathered his belongings and left for parts unknown. His wife took what property he had left, came to this city and lived quietly under the name of Mrs. Williams, till death came to her at the ripe age of 80. How far she was guilty of Dr. Burdell's murder only the Judgment Day will show. It is a mystery to be classed with that of the murder of Helen Jewett, or the Nathan murder. It somewhat leads to questioning the ancient saying, "Murder will out."

The decision of the Illinois Supreme Court in the Chicago Anarchists' case has revived the Socialistic and Anarchistic circles to a new measure of life. The imprisonment of Johann Most on Blackwell's Island had a tendency to cool the ardor of these blood-thirsty gentlemen down to a point not far from zero, but the coming of Most and the Illinois decision are acting as a warning against.

Anarchism and Socialism are far more prevalent on the east side than anywhere else in this city. Its chief abode is in the neighborhood of Tompkins Square. The man who wants an "experience," can have it by endeavoring to obtain admission to an Anarchists meeting. Usually it is held in a room, remote from the street, over or in the rear of a beer saloon. The windows are doubly guarded with blinds, shades and blankets. Its doors are watched by sentinel and doorman, and he who desires to enter must show by manner and dress his absolute right to be there. A meeting of these gentlemen who who would paint the world a sanguinary color is worth seeing. The audience is a collection of men unkempt, unwashed, unshaven and unshorn, wild-eyed, blonde or swart complexioned; fierce men these. They look like a congregation of men who, sitting on insulated stools, were being shocked successively with a galvanic machine. Each separate hair of head and beard stands in a repellant attitude to its neighbor. My own impression in looking at a dozen the other day was that of a congregation of animated window brushes. In their meetings they discuss revolutionary plans, their horror of constituted laws, their repugnance to those little arts of civilization which separate the savage from civilized. There used to be a general aspect of timidity but Most, with his newspaper The Freheit has given them new courage. In fact, they seem to have forgotten the distressing fact that Herr Most sought refuge under a bed from the officers of the law. Its a singular gathering. The benches of Tompkins Square contain active groups of men of this stamp whose sole occupation is the discussion of plans for the furtherance of their schemes.

[illegible] times as [illegible] Senator Conkling [illegible] did Cregan [illegible] by becoming a pall-bearer [illegible] Cregan was one of the "306" of the Chicago convention of '80; and in the recent so-called reform methods was sacrificed to the so-called harmony now in force between the Stalwart and the Half-breed wings of local Republicanism. As I said before, Cregan was a type of an American only possible here, and of his class the best possible representative.

Wall street is excited over two things: the visit of Jay Gould to Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, the specialist on nervous diseases and the return of Henry Villard of the Northern Pacific management. Of the first event, it appears Gould has been suffering from neuralgia. He supposed his brain to be affected. Dr. Hammond adjusted the newly invented cranial thermopile, found the right side of the little magician's had the proper temperature as compared with the left and assured Jay he was all right. Of the second event, many friends of Mr. Villard are happy. Two years ago he left the head of the Northern Pacific a poor man. Just previously he had driven the golden spike, completing the road. A few months ago he came to Wall street with plenty of financial backing. He so adjusted matters by his connection with the Oregon Transcontinental railroad that he practically named the new directory of the N. P. He has the control of over 400,000 shares. It is one of the events of Wall street and it is perhaps a godsend to the N. P. that Mr. Villard is thus returned to its control.

So goes the wheel of fortune. To-day on top; to-morrow, where?

Deafness Can't Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

[illegible] The great event of the fair was on Wednesday when Governor Hill was present and delivered an address from manuscript which contained a brief history of Oswego county and its standing in agriculture and manufactures as compared with other counties in the State. The address contained many excellent points and was attentively listened to by the vast concourse present.

The reception of the Governor into Fulton was a matter of much interest and was well carried out. A committee consisting of representative citizens of Oswego, Fulton and Phœnix went to Syracuse by special train. On their return they were met at the depot by the 29th and 36th separate companies of Oswego, Kingsford's and the Fulton bands and escorted in carriages to the fair grounds. After his address, Gov. Hill held an informal reception in the main building, where a large crowd passed through and took him by the hand.

The racing was not up to the general standard of the society. In the free for all the purse was for $200, divided $100, $50, $30, and $20 and distributed as follows:

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

UTICA, N. Y. Sept. 19.

Factorymen evidenty thought this a good day to unload cheese, and they did it with a will. Looking back through the record, we can find no such transactions before as these at this time of the year. Salesmen shook out their August stock in a lively manner, and are now in good shape to hold September stock if there should be a reaction for a week or two. The only explanation of those prices is that those who are interested in the market are bound to support it, and make higher prices for September stock if they can. Every buyer on the board felt dubious about the prices paid to-day, and was inclined to anticipate a loss on his purchases. We trust, however, that they may be mistakened. Home trade must soon become an important factor in the business, and will help to absorb a considerable portion of the stock. An occurrence took place on the board which was never known to happen before. Buyers and sellers were both so busy making bargains about the time for the western train to depart, that they forgot themselves and got left until the later train. Sales were as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
16	1,450	11
6	512	11¼
73	6,867	11¼
8	612	11⅜
41	3,105	11⅝
17	1,386	11⅝
16	2,287	11¾
3	370	p. t
180	16,589
	687	Com.
Total	17,276

Ruling price, 11¼c. Transactions one year ago 12,708 boxes; ruling price, 9¾c. Two years ago, 10,920, ruling 7¾c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 19.

Cheese.—A little more activity has been exhibited on the market to-day than for a few weeks, and prices have advanced ¼c. over those of last week. Buyers continue to draw the line sharply between white and colored stock, and will not pay for the former within ¼c. the price on colored. There was quite an effort on the part of sales men to force the prices above those paid, and a few of them went away without selling.

Following is our usual table giving the transactions of the day:

Lots	Boxes	Price
2	102	11
11	761	11¼
50	3,481	11½
1	120	11⅝
33	3,293	11¾

150 Pair of Men's Auburn Calf and Veal Calf Button, Congress and Lace Shoes, $1.75 worth $2.50 an F. E. Goodjon's.

[illegible] When the body was found Casler had on his trousers and shoes. He had got up and partly dressed. His shoes were not laced and his suspender was down. The door was unlocked and the key in the inside. It was at first thought that he had died from heart disease, as no blood could be seen, but when the body was raised up a little clot of blood was found on the floor. On examining the clothing a bullet hole was found on the left side over the heart.

The shooting must have been done at short range as there were marks of burned powder on Casler's shirt. As yet no developments have occurred to fasten the crime on any person, although rumors are abundant.

Detectives are busily at word on the case and are in possession of some circumstances that may eventually prove of importance in unraveling the mystery. A coroner's jury considered the matter Monday, but owing to the fact that no evidence had yet been obtained of a criminating character, implicating any person, the coroner decided to adjourn the case again until Monday of next week, trusting that some developments may be obtained in the meantime.

The body of Casler was taken to Liverpool on Friday where it was buried.

"The Rivals."

This superb old comedy by Sheridan is the second of Dr. Spencer's course of recitals. It will be given at the Armory hall instead of the Opera House as previously announced on Tuesday evening, Sept. 27th. The play is full of fun from beginning to end and Dr. Spencer was the first who ever gave it in a recital. It is often played by old actors. This will be a very attractive performance, showing the reader as a comedian, in which role, the Boston Gazette says he is most happy. He is very droll and quaint in this play.

The only PUZZLE we have to give is one which does not affect our customers one iota. It is in the fact that our Competitors are puzzled over the knowledge that we are offering our goods at such 'ruinously low prices' as they say. They can't understand how we can afford it and that's what bothers them. We've got an awful small store now and we know it better than anyone else, but we have lots of goods and the low prices at which we are throwing them out tells.

It is said that "many wheat farms in the north-west are gradually being converted into dairy farms. Butter and cheese are more remunerative than wheat at present prices. Again darying means a better system of farming than wheat culture alone."

Flies do not bite so viciously in the dark, and the eagerness with which a cow will rush in the shade of a tree on a hot day shows how she appreciates this fact. During the very hottest weather, keeping a cow in a darkened stable is not only humane, but good policy as well. It is altogether the cheapest and easiest mode of increasing the milk supply.

A New England journal says: "From what we hear, in barley-growing sections the average quality of barley this year is generally poor there was first an excess of hot, dry, weather, pinching the grain while it was filling. Following there was a rainy spell, lasting through the harvest time. Those who have bright, plump barley this season ought to get a good price for it."

It is said that "the strong odor of gas tar mixted with water is repellant to potato bugs. By many farmers this is preferred to Paris green as being safer to handle. It is not certain how this works. It does not kill the bugs for none are found dead under the vines. It is quite likely that it disguises the potatoe so that the beetle does not recognize it as the natural food of its offspring."

The following is said to be a good receipt for curing fowls from egg-eating: "Boil an egg, and remove as small a piece of the shell as may be necessary to extract the inside, fill the space either with mustard or cayenne pepper, and neatly paste a piece of white paper over the opening. Remove all the eggs from the nest and leave this prepared egg for 'biddy' to eat; one dose will generally to cure her of the desire."

Best Time for Harvesting Crops.

In harvesting, important principles are involved. While we allow root crops to grow as long as they can, and harvest them before frost damages them, grains, wheat, barley, oats, etc., need to be cut before perfectly ripe, if we would secure the largest amount of starch in the kernal, which improves the quality of the flour, the value for malting, etc., while, at the same time, the strap is better for feeding. Indian corn is very sensitive to frost. Sorghum should be cut when the grain is fully ripe to secure also the largest quantity of sugar in the stalk.

Grass when cut before it is in blossom is innutritious, and dries out greatly in making hay. When cut in full blossom, or when just out of blossom, it is in full flavor, in its highest degree of nutritious value, and loses far less in drying. When cut after the seed has formed, much of the foliage will have turned brown and dried, the stems will be woody, and, though it dries with comparatively little loss of weight, yet it is far less relished by cattle, and is less nutritious, while in very few grasses does the seed make good the damage to the rest of the plant. The same general principles apply to clover and other forage crops. Thus corn for ensiloing or for drying for course fodder should be cut up after the ears are well formed, and before they are fully ripe, for then the stalk is richer in sugar, has more foliage, and less woody fiber.—American Agriculturist.

Speculation in New York City.

The Ives bankruptcy being now before the courts will receive a full investigament, and perhaps Ives may share the fate of other reckless speculators who have had a taste of state prison life. Speculation brings the same fruit in all ages, and we find the present day repeating the lessons of the Mississippi scheme in Paris and also of the South sea bubble in London. Ives on the one hand and Ferdinand Ward on the other are but the reproductions of the wild and reckless speculation of a past age. The first prominent speculator that made a sensation in Wall street was Jacob Barker, who eventually lost everything and went to New Orleans to renew his fortune, but only found a grave. Later on, the same history was repeated by Jim Fisk, the Jeromes, Ned Ketchum, and then came Ward, whose convictions seem to have had no effect on Ives, though he may yet share the same fate. Ives seems to have taken Jim Fisk as a model. The latter helped to steal the [illegible] road, and Ives in the same manner [illegible] an Ohio road. Another point in [illegible] ambition was to steal the Equitable [illegible] insurance company—as he said the [illegible] of the latter were so great that [illegible] make a nice thing. He [illegible] well, however, even without [illegible], which he may reserve [illegible] conquest.—Herald.

"You can't get Christianity into a fool any more than you can get bologna sausage from a rattlesnake."

"Do you think that a man with a chew of tobacco in his mouth and a bottle of whisky in his pocket is a fit temple for the spirit of God?"

"I would try to get into heaven just to keep out of the company there is in hell, if for no other reason."

Illegal Fishing.

This summer fishing in Oneida lake has been uncommonly good, large strings of pike and bass being brought in almost every day. About eighty rods from shore opposite the lower end of Cleveland is a sandbar, where most of the fish are caught. Recently very few fish could be caught which induced fishermen to try all parts of the bar, and in moving about Saturday, September 10, a net was discovered and located, and a sufficient force secured to raise it in small boats, which was done the following day, but instead of one net two large nets were found set entirely across the bar, so that it was about impossible for a fish to go over the bar and escape. The nets contained 180 pike, 17 bass, 165 perch, 30 bullheads, 25 sunfish and one large eel. To whom the nets belong is a mystery; but that they should be set right under our noses, in a place as frequented as that is, shows great boldness. They certainly were not put there by any Clevelanders. It is believed here that there are plenty of these nets on the opposite shore from here.

One Hundred and Forty-Eight Miles Without a Stop.

The longest run ever made by a train without stoping is between Troy and New York on the New York Central and Hudson River railroad, distance 148 This feat is accomplished by the use of what is known as "track tanks" and locomotives esceciaily designed for the purpose. "The "track tank" is a narrow trough laid on the ties between the rails and is made of strong boiler iron. It is about one-quarter of a mile in length and is kept full of water by means of a steam pump. Attached to the water tank of the locomotive under the tender is a spout, one end of which is dropped into the trough, and the train in going at full speed, forces the water into the tank. These troughs may be seen from the train at a point about one mile south of Catskill station, and again at Montrose, about two and one-half miles south of Peekskill.

She Didn't Know Them.

Miss Esmeralda Longcoffin has not enjoyed the advantages of a good education. Not long since Gus De Smith came to her breathlessly at a ball they were attending at the gubernatorial mansion.

"My dear Miss Esmeralda, I've been hunting for you all over the grounds, I asked where you were, and I was sent from Pilate to Pontius and from Pontius to Pilate until I found you."

"I am not personally acquainted with either of the gentlemen you mention, but will be pleased to make their acquaintance whenever you feel like introducing them, if they are personal friends of yours," replied Esmeralda, with stately dignity.—Texas Siftings.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing,' Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at R. E. Phillips's Drug Store.

A Verdict that Seemed to Fit.

A man in a western town hanged himself to a bed-post by his suspenders. The coroner's jury were some time in coming to a decision in the case, but the foreman, who was a native of Erin, finally announced that the "deceased came to his death by coming home drunk and mistaking himself for his pants."—Washington Critic.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

The Ruling Passion.

"My dear," said a husband, gently rousing his wife—the lady was dangerously ill—"Mrs. DeHobson called a little while ago and left her love and sympathy for you. She seemed deeply affected."

"John," said the sick lady in a very weak tone of voice, as she slowly unclosed her eyes, "What did she have on?"—N. Y. Sun.

October.

October is the month that seems
All woven with midsummer dreams;
She brings for us the golden days
That fill the air with smoky haze,
She brings for us the lisping breeze
And wakes the gossips in the trees,
Who whisper near the vacant nest
Forsaken by its feathered guest.
Now half the birds forget to sing,
And half of them have taken wing,
Before their pathway shall be lost
Beneath the gossamer of frost;
Now one by one the gay leaves fly
Zigzag across the yellow sky;
They rustle here and flutter there,
Until the bough hangs chill and bare.
What joy for us,—what happiness
Shall cheer the day, the night shall bless?
'Tis Hallow e'en, the very last
Shall keep for us remembrance fast,
When every child shall duck the head
To find the precious pippin red!

—F. D. Sherman, in St. Nicholas.

How Lord Lovell Got Left.

Lord Lovell he stood at his own front door,
Seeking the hole for the key:
His hat was wrecked and his trousers bore
A rent across either knee,
When down came the beautious Lady Jane
In fair white draperee.

"I am not drunk, Lady Shane," he said,
"And so late it cannot be;
The clock struck one as I entered—
I heard it two times or three:
It must be the salmon on which I fed
Has been too many for me."

"Go tell your tale, Lord Lovell," she said,
To the maratime cavalree,
To your grandam of the hoary head—
To any one but me.
The door is not used to be opened
With a cigarette for a key."

—Toronto News.

Getting Even.

"Ah! good morning!" he saluted across the aisle of the car.

"Good morning, sir," stiffly replied the lady addressed.

"Did you enjoy your trip to the Bay?"

"What—when?"

"Last week, ma'am."

"Why! I wasn't down there!"

"No! But I saw your husband down there and the register of the hotel bore the names of——"

"Sh!" whispered a man beside him, at the same time giving his sleeve a pull.

"Bore what names?" sharply quired the woman as her fingers clenched.

But the two men stalked out of the front door and dropped off. She looked after them, shut her teeth hard together, and was out on the platform ready to alight before the car was within a square of her street.

"Did you see him down there?" asked the friend as they got away from the car.

"Naw! Of course not!"

"What did you talk it for?"

"Her husband black-balled me in a society, and I've been laying for him for three-years."—Detroit Free Press.

There is nothing in existence that will equal Salvation Oil in curing pains in the joints and muscles or spinal affections. Price 25 cents.

A preacher, who had been annoyed by incessant "hacking" of members of his congregation, recommended such to try Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

An Exclusive Dog.

There is a citizen of Detroit who possesses a very handsome, intelligent greyhound. This dog will never make any friendly advances to any one until he has been regularly introduced.

A few days ago his master met a lady whom he knew on Woodward avenue and stopped for a chat.

"That's a very fine dog," observed the lady, who is a connoisseur; "how do you do sir?"

But the dog stared indifferently into space and made no sign that he heard her.

"Major," said his owner gravely, "this lady is a friend of mine."

That was enough. Major frisked up to the lady, poked his long nose into her hand, rubbed his head affectionately on her dress, and showed at once that he accepted her as the friend of his master.—Detroit Free Press.

Love and Business

"And is this to be the end?" said the deeply enamored traveling man to the beautiful young lady who kept the books for one of his regular customers in the little island town.

"It is, Mr. McThompson," she replied; "I can never be anything to you but a friend."

"Then," said the drummer with a tremulous voice and a face of ashy paleness, "it only remains for me to say farewell. I shall be here again," he continued consulting his memorandum book with rapidly recovering self-possession, "in thirty days with a full line of samples in millinery and dress goods. Save your orders please. Good afternoon.—Chicago Tribune.

Clever Dry Goods Men.

I have seen wholesale "buyers" in the New York custom-house, before what is called the Board of Re-appraisement,—a sort of court where testimony is taken as to the value of goods on which duty is to be paid,—and I do not know of a brighter, keener set of men. Their quickness and ability to judge of the quality and value of goods is almost phenomenal. They will examine a whole row of silks, for instance, in a few minutes, testing them by the touch, and sometimes examining them through a small magnifying glass; nine times out of ten they will tell, within the smallest fraction of a cent, what the cost price of every piece of silk is in Europe. A wholesale buyer commands a large salary, say from $5,000 to $10,000 a year, with frequent trips to Europe, on which all his expenses are paid.—George J. Manson, in St. Nicholas.

Don't Forget.

That anxiety is easier to bear than sorrow.

That talent is sometimes hid in napkins, audacity never.

That good brains are often kept in a poor looding vessel.

That the time to bury a hatchet is before blood is found upon it.

That mistakes are often bought at a big price and sold at a small one.

That if it were not for emergencies, there would be but little progress made in the world.

That it is often better to go a good ways round than to take a short cut across lots.

That the statement so often made in print that "rest makes rust," is the veriest rot.

That tears shed upon a coffin will not blot out the stains that may have been cast in life upon the stilled heart within it.

That many a man sets up a carrage only to find less of enjoyment in it than he has had from holding the ribbons from his "one hoss shay."

That if we do more for others while we may, we should have less regrets, when too late, that more had not been done when "it might have been."—Good Housekeeping.

A Mean Trick.

Gus de Smith one of those fellows who fairly revel in historical reminiscences. Anything that relates to early history gits away with him entirely. Tuesday Gilhooley introduced Gus to a venerable old gentleman, whom he represented as one of the framers of the Texas Constitution.

Of course Gus was nearly tickled to death. He squeezed the old man's hand, asking a thousand questions about Sam Houston and San Jacinto. The old man's answers were rather confused, and as he hobbled on, Gilhooly said:

"What in the world did you mean Gus by asking that old man such foolish questions?"

"He is an old veteran, ain't he? He framed that Texas Constitution.

"Well, suppose he did frame the Constitution of Texas. He is a carpenter and that's his trade to make frames and the like. The man who hired him to frame the Constitution paid him for the glass and the frame and his work. Why do you go raking up past grievances and throwing it up to the old man that he is a carpenter? He has only been in Texas about a year.—Siftings.

Mr. Smith's Delicacy.

"Uncle James," said Miss Penelope Waldo of Boston, who is visiting in the coutry, "I was out walking this morning, and young Mr. Smith, who was with me, killed a snake. When I asked him what kind of a snake it was he seemed embarrassed and changed the subject."

"The only kind of snakes we have here, Penelope,' said her uncle James, "is garter snakes."

Then Miss Waldo realized the inate delicacy of young Mr. Smith, and was deeply grateful to him.—Puck.

The First Stage of Intoxication.

Robinson—Have you seen Dumley, Brown?

Brown—Yes, I saw him to-day. He was walking down Broadway with an erect an soldierly bearing that would put many a Seventh regiment second lieutenant to shame.

Robinson—Poor Dumley? He's drinking again.—N. Y. Sun.

Pretty Cousin—I fail to see how he could shave anything else but down, Charley—N. Y. Sun.

A Poor Excuse is Better Than None.

Jack—Ethel, I am ashamed of you. I saw that Frenchman in the coservatory kissing you repeatedly. Why didn't you tell him to stop?

Ethel—I couldn't, Jack.

Jack—You couldn't. Why not?

Ethel—I can't speak French.—Judge.

The new combination of Smart Weed and Belladonna, as used in Caster's Backache Plasters has proved to be one of the best that could be made. Try one of these popular plasters in any case of weak or lame back, backache, rheumatism, neuralgia, soreness of the chest or lungs, &c., and you will be surprised and pleased by the prompt relief. In bad cases of chronic dyspepsia, a plaster over the pit of the stomach stops the pain at once. Ask for Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Backache Plasters. Price 25 cts.

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

Husband—"Hattie, why don't you go down-town to-day and buy you a new dress? You have worn that one so long that everybody knows it by heart."

Wife—"So much the better. It would be a pity to disguise myself by appearing in public with a new one."

"But it begins to look shabby."

"I don't mind that. It's neat and clean; and what more should a body desire? Besides, I'd rather have you spend your money on yourself."

"Why, I had a new suit only two months ago."

"And are you never to have another? Come, I like to see a man well dressed. And you see so many people you know."

"That reminds me. I have been thinking Miss Lusher out to ride. She's one of my old flames, you know."

"Yes, I remember. Carrie is a dear sweet girl. Take her by all means. I wouldn't be so mean as to want to monopolize my husband all to myself. And that settles the new suit too. You must have it. I don't want my husband looking seedy when he's out driving with a young lady. It would mortify Carrie awfully."—Boston Transcript.

Wedding Trips in Fall River.

A couple who hadn't been married more than ten minutes, and who were as obvious to the world as the newly married usually are, furnished sport for passengers on a Globe Village horse car yesterday. They were making their wedding journey, and the street railway was the line which they patronized.

The bride was clad in a blush and white dress, and used her back to conceal the groom's right arm, while she amused herself by playfully trying on his gloves. The husband had occasion to converse with his wife in a whisper, and every time he whispered he left a kiss on her neck. Finally the conductor became nervous, and stopped the car with a jerk. Somebody said "rats," and all hands got off, that is, all except the two who had been made one. They went to the end of the route, gave another nickel, and rode back again.—Fall River Globe.

The weary and woe-begone expressien of the dyspeptic is soon changed into one of health and hilarity by using Laxador. It only costs 25 cents.

When your child is suffering give it Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, which will at once relieve and permanently cure by its soothing action. Price 25 cents.

Not His Style.

Tramp—Madam, it is an old story to you, I know, but I have had nothing to eat to day.

Housewife—Willing to practice with saw awhile?

Tramp—Most happy, madame. But a sandwich first would sustain me greatly. Ah, thanks. Yum, yum. Now where is the saw?

Housewife—You will find it in the rear.

Tramp—And the ice pond?

Housewife—Ice pond? Why, the thermometer stands at 98 degrees.

Tramp—True, true. But you should have thought of that before. I trust, madame, you have not taken me to be a common wood sawyer. My business is ice sawing. Good day, madame.—Omaha Herald.

She: "Charley, that was awfully brave in you to stop the runaway team. Why, mamma might have been killed."

He: "So she might, by George! I never thought of that."

She: "What in the world do you mean?"

He: "Why, only—that is, I—"

She: "Good night, sir." — Omaha World.

The hot weather of last week left its impression upon the little boy, who wrote to his mother as follows: "Dear Ma: It's hot as fire here. My 10-cent piece melted yesterday. So that's hot, ain't it? Please send me a dollar so it won't melt. Been in swimming nineteen times to-day. We get bully ice cream here for 1 cent a glass, Don't forget the dollar."—The Epoch.

An Old Friend of His Brother.

A Texas gentleman traveling in a Pullman Palace car in Pennsylvania happened to say that he was from the Lone Star State.

"Do you live in the western portion of the state?" asked a man opposite.

"I do."

"In Tom Green county?"

"That's my county."

"Live near Carson?"

"That's my town."

"Perhaps you know my brother, William Henry Jones?"

"Know him? Gimme your hand stranger. I helped hang William Henry the night before I left. He was a horse-thief, but a good one."—Texas Siftings.

Simply Bewildering.

A—Excuse me sir, are you the son of my old friend Peterson?

B—No, I am not related to him at all.

A—I knew it as soon as I laid eyes on you. I was struck at once with your marvelous lack of resemblance to him. The way you don't look like him is simply bewildering.—Texas Siftings.

A Beggar on Very High Horseback.

A gentleman was accosted in the Alameda by a sturdy beggar. "In heaven's name, give me aid!" he ejaculated. "Aren't you ashamed to beg, a great, strong, healthy fellow like you?" "Senor, I asked you for alms, not for advice."—City of Mexico Two Republics.

LITERARY NOTES.

LIPPINCOTT'S.

The complete novel in Lippincott's Magazine for October is "Apple Seed and Brier Thorn," a pleasantly told story by Louise Stockton. Josiah Allen's Wife contributes a bit of satire on the mania for extravagant funerals, in a short story entitled "Abel Perry's Funeral." A story of a different sort is "Zobeide, the Snake Charmer," by Annie Robertson Noxon. L. R. McCabe, a friend of W. D. Howell's who made the latter's acquaintance during his obscure and struggling youth, writes of that period under the title "Literary and Social Recollections of W. D. Howell's." In "The Lesson of Practicality," Junius Henri Browne gives some of his biography, and tells how he came to look upon literature as a means of getting bread and other things that money will buy, rather than an outlet for the inspiration of genius. J. H. E. Whitney gives a sketch of his professional career as a wood engraver. "The Government and the Public Works, by L. R. Haupt, is an able criticism of the present management of the bureau of civil works, with suggestions for its reorganization. Social life at Williams college is described by James R. McDonald of the class of '89. The poetry, monthly gossip, etc., are as usual, good.

AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

In the American Magazine for October. Arthur Howard Noll has an elaborate description of Popocatepetl, "the mountain that smokes," including an account of an ascent of the mountain, by no means a trifling achievement. Charles Ledyard Norton writes about "A Pot Hunter's Paradise," part of the quaint region along the Delaware, prequented by reed birds and other market game. C. B. Adams tells the experience of a party of Americans traveling in China. Oscar Foote gives the history of "The Washington National Monument." All of these articles are illustrated, as is also the installment of Edgar Faucett's serial, "Olivia Delaplaine," Anna B. McMahan discusses some new factors in social evolution, espicially those influencing particularly the progress of women. "My Lares and Penates," by Grant Allen, is a description of his home and the articles that adorn it, most of which are intimately associated with his work as an author. Perhaps the most valuable, as certainly the most practical paper of the number, is that by Z. L. White, "Pittsburg's Invisible Fuel." It shows very clearly the rapid increase of wealth and prosperity brought about by the use of natural gas for heating purposes. "At Lac Eternite," Fannie Aymar Mathews, and "The Twins of Weasel Branch," by Tobe Hodge, are very readable short stories. The poems of the number are by Hamlin Garland, Kate Putnam Osgood, Maurice Thompson and Laura F. Hindsdale.

ST NICHOLAS.

St. Nicholas for October opens with a story, "An Ivy Spray," by that favorite among writers for young people, Louisa M. Alcott. It is illustrated by the frontispiece and three drawings by Albert E. Sterner. Alice Wellington Rollins describes Queen Victoria's jubilee cake, which weighed a thousand pounds and took four months in the making and baking. Frances Courtenay Baylor's serial, "Juan and Juanita," is concluded by the happy return of the children to their home and their mother's arms. Frank R. Stockton describes "The Low Countries and the Rhine," the paper having twelve excellent illustrations. William H. Ridwig writes about "The Babyhood of John Greenleaf Whittier,' General Adam Badeau continues his series of papers on the civil war by "General Grant at Vicksburg." Professor Boyesen's pathetic story, "Fiddle-John's Family," is brought to a conclusion with joy for all concerned in Fiddle-John's fortunes. The remaining stories, verses, and the like are excellent, as always. A new volume begins with the November number.

Harsh purgative remedies are fast giving way to the gentle action and mild effects of Carter's Little Liver Pills. If you try them, they will certainly please you.

A French anthropologist enumerates 21 characteristic forms of the human nose.

A Big Agricultural Fair.

"I understand you are going to have a big agricultural fair up your way."

"Yes; or rather we did intend having one, but we've been disappointed."

"Disappointed? In what way?"

"Why, you see we got the race course all laid out, and the base ball field fixed up nice and handy, and everything was going on splendidly, when we found that we had no room for "go as you please" pedestrian races."

"You don't say so!"

"Yes, and that isn't the worst of it. There's a lot of old fossils who want to exhibit cattle, vegetables and all that sort o' stuff."—Boston Transcript.

Punch Brothers! Punch!

The following is punched from the "Life Boat" published at Utica, N. Y., and ought to be punched into the heads of all who read it: "Hot Punch"? Yes—correctly named, it will punch the vitality from your stomach, the color from your cheek, the sparkle from your eye. "Rum Punch"? Aye, it will punch the money out of your pocket, punch the clothes from your back, punch happiness from your home, your wife and children into the poorhouse, it will punch your body into a drunkard's grave, and punch your soul into hell. Beware of "Hot Punch."

12 Pounds of Tumor

is a hideous thing to have attached to a human frame, yet Mr. Reuben Severance, of Upper Stillwater, (part of Old Town, Me.) had one in his groin which he carried for about ten years. It began to form about fourteen years ago being at first hardly larger than a pea. Mr. Severance, in his sworn statement before ex-Governor D. F. Davis of Maine, says:

"At first it did not trouble me much but as it grew inside it was accompanied by severe darting pains. Food did not digest; had attacks of dizziness; roaring sounds in ears and passed sleepless nights. In 1885 tumor weighed several pounds and extended to knee. Now least exertion caused intense, tearing pain like sticking of needles in flesh. Abandoned hope and took to bed. Physicians declined to cut it out, saying I was too old and weak to survive. Am 78 years of age. Some one recommended Brown's Sarsaparilla. I experienced immediate change for better. Appetite returned; food ceased to trouble me; ringing noises left my head, and best of all tumor began to shrivel up and disappear. It is now and has for some time been entirely gone. Can and do do good day's work. I say God bless the man who invented this medicine. He should wear a crown. I mean always to keep by me a bottle of Brown's Sarsaparilla while I live."

With this statement we have paper signed by postmaster, druggist as well as seven of the town officials stating they know the above to be true, and ex-Gov. Davis also adds his evidence. There is no case of Blood disease which cannot be cured by

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office for moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

I can't help telling the Truth as I view it and describing what I see. To describe it otherwise than it seems to me would be falsehood in that calling in which it has pleased Heaven to place me.

[illegible]

The question [illegible] explosives like nitro-glycerine, dynamite, pyroxyline and others of that class could be successfully used in modern warfare has been actively discussed for some years and received its practical demonstration last week. Lieut Zalinski of the U. S. A. has been at work for years on what is known as a pneumatic gun for vessels of war. Congress recently appropriated sufficient money for a war vessel to carry four of these guns and the practical test, before Secretary Whitney was the occasion of last week's experiments.

A condemned schooner of 200 tons burden was anchored at a distance of a mile or more from Fort Hamilton, one of the defenses to the harbor at the Narrows. The object was to so place the cartridge of dynamite that its explosion would destroy the vessel. The gun in question is a cylinder of metal, upwards of thirty feet long and has an internal diameter of eight inches. At the breech part is suitable apparatus for holding the air, which being compressed by proper machinery is suddenly permitted to expand without shock or concussion against the cartridge containing the dynamite. In the trials at Fort Hamilton fifty-five pounds of dynamite was encased in an oblong cylinder or projectile and placed into the gun. The air was thus compressed to a density of 600 pounds to the square inch. The gun was then fired, and at a distance of some 1,900 yards the cartridge struck the water just behind the schooner, and exploded, apparently beneath her bottom. The effect was something tremendous. The entire vessel was lifted from the water, broken in parts and scattered on the surface of the bay a shapeless mass. The second shot struck this mass and made kindling wood of it. It may be worthy of note to refer to the method of exploding the shell. The immense explosive energy of dynamite makes it especially unpleasant for it to explode in the gun, so some means must be derived for it to do its work after having reached the object intended to be destroyed. To effect this a small battery is placed within the cartridge, and protected from falling out during its aerial passage by a piece of thick blotting paper. At the end of the cartridge is a percussion cap. In the case of the projectile striking the water the blotting paper becoming watered gives the electrical energy to the battery and the fulmination contained within is exploded and then the dynamite. On the other hand in the event of the cartridge striking the deck or other solid portions of the ship, the percussion cap is fired and thus the dynamite. It was demonstrated that even should the projectile fall short or go beyond its mark, its explosion within a limited distance of the ship would work a vast deal of damage to the vessel.

This new engine of war becomes of absolute value in coast defenses. The breech pressure of 600 pounds is not by any means the maximum pressure. Two or three times that amount could be generated and the projectile could be sent proportionally further. Of course, the use of compressed air is not the sole means for the firing of the projectile. Some genius will find a way to use gun powder, which giving as it does, under ordinary circumstances, a breech pressure of from four to six tons, would make dynamite as destructive at the greatest distances now attained by the more approved heavy ordnance of the world. The beauty of this thing is it is really a peace preserver, so to speak. Such terribly destructive weapons would render war the measure of very last resort.

We are on the eve of the great International race between the Thistle and Volunteer. Many thousand dollars are wagered on the result. Many columns of speculative matter have been written. As a matter of fact the Scotch yacht Thistle is the most powerful opponent that has opposed itself to any American yacht. But in the same way is the Volunteer much the superior of any American yacht that has appeared in later years. The fact is a little remarkable and though I have mentioned it before it will bear repetition, that these defenders of the American cup have been boats of Mr. Edward Burgess's design. Thousands whose curiosity was intensified by the successful effort of the World's diver in finding out the Thistle's shape beneath the water-line, visited the dry dock of South Brooklyn when the Thistle was taken there for final cleaning. I doubt if there ever was so peculiar a vessel in this harbor. From the broadside view, the profile of her bottom is not unlike that of a clamshell. She is deepest and has her most weight aft, very much so. The tendency is to throw the bow down when forced rapidly through the water by a fierce breeze. To my own idea the Thistle will prove a very tough match for the Volunteer should the wind be light; but on the other hand the demonstrated ability to carry a large spread of canvas on the part of the Volunteer in a heavy gale of strong, steady breeze will set the minds of all at rest should the wind on the days of the race prove to be strong.

The cost of these races is something worthy of note. Each of the competitors have from thirty to forty men—sailors—to handle the vessel. The preparations for a race—the best of carpenters, sailmakers, riggers, the cost of docking, scraping, painting would bring the sum total of a yacht race of this character up to the fine sum of $25,000. Then the steamboats that accompany the vessels over the course, the spectators passage rates and all this would put a $100,000 to shame.

There's a good deal of interest in this race. It's the talk of the hotels, the exchanges and of the clubs. I saw four of a party of men I know to be wonderfully unenthusiastic the other day, and they were full of yacht race.

I will give THE TIMES readers a full account of the race, for it's a national matter. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] the Volunteer. This feeling was shared to a greater extent among the betting men who have large sums of money invested in the result of the contest. When the news reached the ear of Mr. Bell he seemed greatly surprised and somewhat indignant that any thought should be indulged that he desired anything but a fair and square race. He said: "Owing to the great overhang of the Thistle fore and aft, it was very difficult to get an accurate measurement, and designer Watson had stated that his yacht would be "about" 85 feet on the water line, but for this increased water line length, he had received a decreased time allowance; so that instead of a minute and more as expected, he received only five seconds.

Your correspondent learned from those who claimed to know that on account of the general criticism of the Thistle's peculiar build, claiming she would not be able to stand up before a heavy breeze, much weight of lead had been placed for ballast and this is what had borne her down, increasing her water line as originally intended from 85 to 86½ feet. It is of course, understood that the Scottish racer is built after the style of the modern cutter, without centre board, while the Volunteer is of the sloop order with centre board, and a much heavier, stronger built yacht.

Both have been put in the best possible trim, while the bottom and sides of the Thistle, fairly shine with a fresh coat of the patent "electroid" just applied. And it is a mortifying fact that on a careful survey of the two boats as they lie at dry dock, our builders have not made nearly so smooth a job as did our rival makers. So if the Yankee boat wins, it will be from superior curves lines in the make up. We cannot claim superior sailing qualities as the Scottish sailor is noted the world over. The Thistle's sails are made of the finest and best linen and every inch will be spread. It is a beautiful boat and may win the race. On the other hand the Volunteer has elements of success, she easily beat the Mayflower in the trial race and is pronounced by all a powerful, splendid, speedy boat. We bet on the Volunteer. If nothing happens the first one of three races will have been tried before your readers will have read these lines and whichever wins the the first heat, the excitment will be intense.

While sailing about Staton Island we were led to visit the dead millionaire's tomb, the late Wm. H. Vanderbilt's situated on high ground, overlooking old ocean, a full mile from the water's edge, and less than one mile from New Drop Station, on the belt line railroad. The location is a most beautiful one, and not far distant from his early home, which is still standing, a plain country looking residence in the midst of a farm of hundreds of acres. At the present time a large force of men and teams are engaged grading the rough hillside and completing a large circle wall which more nearly encloses the vast tomb. But a small portion of this beautiful and costly mausoleum can be seen by the visitor. The fine cut marble in the interior extends more than 100 feet back in the hill side. On top are two octogonal tombs, designed as breathing places for the deep caverns. Heavily bared plated glass windows admit light, also a limited view of the interior. On one of these was noticed a time lock in which must be placed a key every fifteen minutes by one of the four Pinkerton detectives who are in constant service night and day. Any failure to climb this hill and insert the key on the moment is made known in New York.

This tomb has several compartments, capable of holding the remains of all the family relatives. There has already expended upwards of half a million of dollars. The present grading contract done is $40,000. Fine sodding, rare shrubs and plants, and flowers are to follow. The plot embraces some fifteen acres and although somewhat difficult of access will be visited by many people. On the old farm road, extending for nearly a mile to the ocean beach is the residence of his brother, Cornelius. It is mainly rich meadow land, hundreds of tons of hay being shipped from this dock to the New York market. There is no other adornment than a long stretch of maple trees, planted many years ago.

While I am convinced that the Funny man's work is very serious, I think that if, after the hours I labored on these unprotected jokes they should fail to reach the eye of the reading public, I should exclaim, "Ungrateful!" Young Queerboy had been in California just three months when he wrote his father he was coming home. Said the country was too healthy for him, as he had gained eighty-five pounds in the three months' stay. The night he arrived the whole family went up to welcome him and to see how he carried the increase in weight. As the train rolled in Queerboy swung lightly to the platform just as slim as ever, and was closely followed by a dainty little lady. "Nuther one of his lies," said the father. "What did you write that letter for?" thundered the old man. "Why, Pop! I was right, I did gain eighty-five pounds. Here it is! This is my wife." A call was sent from the Grand Central Depot for three ambulances.

On the other hand, the attention of the older residents of the Federal city is just now centered upon the benefactor whose happy fortune it was to deliver them from the curse of mud and dust, and made Washington the most charming of capitals and the most beautiful of Americal cities. Ex-Governor Alex. R. Sheperd is the man who accomplished this wonderful undertaking, and the thankful people of the city, now that he once more favors them with his presence, after an absence of seven years in Mexico, where he seeks to rebuild his shattered fortunes, are devising various plans to give fitting expressions of their great gratitude and admiration for the man who wrought such good work. It is proposed to give the Ex-Governor a grand popular reception and have the civic and military organizations of the city parade in his honor. The general interest felt in the matter, insures that the ceremonies, which will take place early next month, will be of a most imposing and memorable character, worthy alike of the city and of one who might be termed its second founder. It is designed, if possible, to make the occasion a general holiday in the city and district.

The hasty action of the Treasury in proposing to buy fourteen millions of four and four and a half per cent bonds tells more tersely and eloquently than words, of the financial straits in which the country is involved by its present fiscal policy, and sounds a note of warning that those in power would do well to heed before it is too late, if they would prevent a general crash, in the commercial world. OBITUARY.

Mrs. Hiram Miller died very suddenly at her home on Cayuga street Saturday afternoon, Sept. 24, 1887 of heart disease.

The deceased was born at Watertown Aug 12th, 1835. At an early age her parents moved to Parish, where her father died. Then with her grand parents she came thirty-five years ago to Fulton, where she has since resided, with the exception of seven years in Michigan. She leaves a husband and two sons. The funeral services were held Tuesday at 2 p.m., from her late residence. Rev. W. Dempster Chase officiating.

Thomas Smith died at his home in this village Saturday, September 24th, 1887, in the seventy-sixth year of his age.

Mr. Smith was born in England and came to this country many years ago. He has lived in Fulton for over thirty years, during most of that time he has been in the employment of Wm. Pryne as harness maker. The funeral services conducted by the Rev. W. Dempster Chase, were held at his late residence on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. William Wyles died at the home of Mr. James Hill, corner of Fifth and Ontario streets, Monday, September 26, at the age of 84 years and 11 months. The deceased was the wife of the late William Wyles, who for many years was constable of Oswego and was a resident of that city for over 40 years. Mrs. Wyles came to Fulton about six years ago. Funeral services were held, from her late residence to-day and the remains were taken to Mt. Pleasant for burial.

Fred Gorman's Horrible Death.

As was briefly mentioned in last week's TIMES, Fred Gorman of Oswego Falls was killed. His remains reached here on Wednesday afternoon in charge of his two brothers. Funeral services were held Thursday forenoon at the church of the Immaculate Conception, Rev. Father Earley officiating. The following is the account of his terrible death taken from the Toledo (O.) Blade of Sept. 20, a marked copy of which was sent us.

"Yesterday, while the tug Pathfinder was coming down the Detroit river, Mr. Fred Gorman, one of the firemen, went down to give the tug some coal. It was his watch off, but he determined to go down and relieve the other fireman. The tug was running pretty fast at the time he began to coal up, but Captain Crandall says the engine suddenly stopped. He supposed that this was on account of the tug getting warm and that the engineer had checked her. He looked out of the pilot house and saw the engineer coming out of the engine room crying. Capt. Crandall asked him what was the matter, and he was told that Fred was in the crank pit.

The captain ran down and found the young man stretched out in the pit, mangled and lifeless. He was at once taken out. It was found that the crank key on the lower connection had cut his left hand terribly, and that his face was badly cut and his scull, arm and three ribs broken. The engine must have run a full minute before Gorman was discovered. It seems almost impossible that a man of his size could have been driven into so small a place as the crank pit. It will ever remain a mystery how he fell on the crank pit, but it is believed he was about to throw in a shovelful of coal, slipped on a piece of coal and fell. The shovel was half filled with coal when it was discovered that he was dead.

The remains were brought to the city and taken to Cauldwell's undertaking establishment.

He was about 31 years old, and his home was at Fulton, N. Y., at which place his mother and sister live. His two brothers, Peter and Edward, work on the dredge Meade, at this port for Capt. French. They will start for Fulton at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon.

To-day the tug Pathfinder is laid up and is draped with black, as is also Enright & Hardy's tug office.

Capt. Crandall, the engineer, and all on board the tug at the time of the accident are broken down with grief, as they all liked Gorman, who was a kind, generous and industrious young man.

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

UTICA, N. Y. Sept. 26.

There was little or no change in our market today. In the early afternoon prices offered were somewhat lower, but many dairymen declared that they would hold over rather than sell September cheese cheaper than August, and toward the close prices were raised to the former level. Even then some salesmen concluded to hold and try for 12c. a week or two later. Only a few did this, however. There was more direct buying for home trade than at any time this summer or fall. The sales were nearly all Septembers, and the home trade is anxious to get hold of this class of goods. There were rumors that 12c. had been paid, but if so they did not materialize in the shape of quotations. Factorymen claim that cheese were never finer than at present. Following is a table of quotations.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 26.

Cheese—The market was rather quiet today, although the transactions show a good business done. The stock sold is largely September make, prices for which are not quite meeting expectations. It now looks as though the difference in price between hot weather cheese and the fine September goods will be considerably less than usual. The ruling price is one-fourth cent above that of last week, and the quantity sold is about 2,000 boxes less, showning that factorymen are not selling quite as freely. Colored stock is still preferred to white, the difference in price being ¼c. Following are the sales:

AT FULTON.

Quite an effort was made Monday evening by salesmen to force the price of cheese beyond what buyers are willing to pay. Colored cheese the buyers did not want, and it will be sent on commission. Some salesmen chose to hold over their white cheese. The offerings were from twenty-four factories with 1,621 boxes and sales were made at 11¼ to 11¾ cents. The price one year ago, 11 cents, and two years ago 8½ cents.

[illegible] Spencer takes the different parts in the comedy is wonderful and all the characters are brought vividly before the mental vision of the listener. His rendering of Macbeth last week and the The Rivals last evening show that he is a master in this particular line as everyone who has heard him will attest.

The next in his series of recitals is "An Evening with Dickens", when the following selections will be read:

Mr. Pickwick's Adventure with the Lady in yellow curl papers. The Re-Capture of Little Oliver, introducing Fagin, Bill Sykes, Nancy and others. Bob Crachit's Christmas Dinner. Dr. Blimber's School, with the Famous Dinner Scene. Mr. and Mrs. Dowler, and Mr. Winkle's Adventure, with the Sedan Chair.

A rare treat is in store for all lovers of Dickens who attend.

A New Departure.

F. E. Bacon has all of his new goods on sale this week. He will during the next two weeks show many new styles in Dry Goods at special prices every second day and one week from this week Friday and Saturday, will show the winter styles in Millinery. These sales will take the place of our winter opening. Our beautiful display at the fair was convincing proof that our stock was even better than any previous season. The weather being so cool our trade has demanded the new goods so that we have had to throw them to the breeze. From now until January 1st. we shall give our patrons a series of bargains.

Respectfully,

F. E. Bacon.

Communicated.

To the Editor of The Fulton Times:

It was my privilege to be present at the recital of "The Rivals" last evening by Dr. Spencer and in my judgment no entertainment so refined and powerful has been given the people of Fulton in years. All the mimic characters appeared before us in their "true garb and fashion," while we had quite forgotten the Doctor's presence, so perfectly did he fit himself into the characters of Sheridan's fine old comedy.

An Important Case.

In June last James E. Elder, a dealer in malt liquors, was arrested on complaint of another Fulton dealer named James McDonough, on the charge of selling malt liquors in larger quantities than the law allowed, Elder holding only a retail stamp, and therefore not permitted to sell in quantities of five gallons or over. Mr. Elder was brought before Commissioner Getty of this city and that official held him for trial before the United States court which has been in session at Buffalo during the present week. On the examination before Commissioner Getty, Elder produced a contract to the effect that he was acting as agent for the manufacturer. Commissioner Getty held that the contract was not a a valid authorization for the sales made by Elder, and United States District Attorney Lockwood of Buffalo also decided that the contract was a mere subterfuge to evade the law. The warrant for Elder's arrest was made returnable before Judge Coxe at Buffalo. Before the trial the commissioner of internal revenue at Washington was furnished with a copy of the contract. That official instructed United States District Attorney Lockwood to dismiss the case, and therefore it was not brought to trial in the United States court.—Oswego Times.

Will It Result in a Boom.

Experts from Bradford, Pa. arrived in Fulton on Monday also all the tools necessary for drilling purposes. Everything is now in readiness and the work will be pushed. Calculations are made to drill over 2,000 feet if necessary. Those directly interested are sanguine that they will strike gas or oil but at what quantities they do not know. We hope it will be in quantities sufficiently large to knock Findley out of sight.

Another Gas Boom

While drilling for water in Rutland, seven miles from Watertown, gas was found in large quantities on the farm of of Geo. T. Hamlin. When ignited the gas caused a flame six feet in heighs and two and one half feet width. It burned steadily for twelve hours and was then put out. The air in that locality is impregnated with gas, and it is thought an important vein has been struck.

Those who have had the benefit of a classical education, will find it pleasant to review much they have previously learned, while those who have never had liberal advantages will find this course of systematic reading wonderfully helpful and instructive and make of them more appreciative and intelligent readers and listeners, if nothing more. No one will long give grudgingly the few moments which are required each day for this reading of literary and scientific subjects; it will soon be looked forward to as the pleasantest hour of the day, and the satisfaction of feeling that one is progressing instead of retrograding, and becoming rusty is sufficient stimulus to improve the moments that might be less profitably employed.

Fulton has already nearly thirty graduates and we hope to have many new names for the class of '91, of which Mary A. Livermore has just become a member. Again we invite one and all to meet with us on Wednesday evening.

Twice Afire.

On Friday last, after the 3:39 P. M. train on the Phœnix road had left Fulton station on its way to Oswego, one of the brakemen discovered the trestle a short distance below here to be on fire. After crossing the trestle the train was stopped and the flames, which had gained only a slight headway, were extinguished. This is one of the most dangerous places on this road, being near a sharp curve, from which the train emerges on the trestle. The trains on this road run very fast and this is the second time within two weeks that this trestle has taken fire."—Cor. Syracuse Herald.

About two weeks ago while Job Bennett and C.C. Hewes were returning in a boat from the VanBuren farm, they discovered the same trestle on fire. They repaired immediately to the spot and succeeded in quenching the flames before much damage was done. The fact of this trestle having been found afire twice within so short a time has a somewhat suspicious appearance and the place will bear watching.

Rev. W. Southworth.

Rev. W. Southworth, after three years labor as pastor of the Free Methodist church in this village, has commenced his labor as pastor of the Free Methodist church in Fulton.

During his residence in this village he has endeared himself to the people of this charge and many deeply regret that his labors are now closed in this village. While our people deeply regret to have the beloved pastor leave them, we know that it is with sadness that the pastor leaves this charge, for during his stay here he had become endeared to the people and while he held up the Gospel banner and pointed the way that leads from earth to Heaven the people have kindly sustained him in his efforts.

He will be long and kindly remembered by the people here, and those who were the most intimately acquainted with him best knew how much he felt for the spiritual prosperity of the church and the conversion of the people. Those who have so often met him during the past three years, will be glad to meet him at any time should he ever again visit this village. Eternity alone can reveal the amount of good his labors in this village have done. The seed that he has sown will yet spring up and bear fruit to the glory of God."—Quill and Press, North Pharsalia, N. Y.

Another Gas Vein Struck.

On Saturday afternoon at the the Granby Brownstone quarry about a mile north of this village, a vein of natural gas was struck fifty-three from the surface in the soldid sandstone. It was lighted and burned quite freely. This is another strong indication that natural gas can be found in this locality in paying quantities.

Make good use of fine weather.

Try to gain some new ideas at the fairs.

It is asserted that 1,000 women own and manage farms in Iowa.

The Texas cattle drive this season is estimated at 225,000 head.

It is not yet too late to gather road dust for use in the poultry house next winter.

Begin early to fat the hogs. A pound of pork is more easily produced now than 3 months hence.

It is said that the Government still owns 89,000,000 acres of unsurveyed land in Nevada.

Potato growers in California are elated over the success of the plan of shipping potatoes to Chicago.

Raw onions, chopped fine and mixed with the food twice a week, are said to be a preventive of chicken cholera.

New England farmers attribute the disease known as weak loins in hogs to lying in hot house manure. It is a rheumatic trouble which may be cured by active and continued rubbing. It may also be cured by exercise and fresh air.

Run green clover, rye, wheat, oats or corn through the seed cutter, set to cut in half-inch lengths, and feed to fowls confined in yards. This is the soiling system applied to poultry-keeping, as those know who have tried it.

There is nothing handier than a bale or two of wire netting for making a temporary yard for a flock of fowls. Drive down stout stakes, unroll the netting, and tack it to the stakes with inch clout nails. It is very quickly done by two persons working together.

Proper trimming is essential to success in all fruit growing. An overburdened tree will exhaust natures store house and become impaired in health and defective in fruit.

We Feed the World.

The United States not only continue their work of feeding the rest of the world—they steadily increase the amount of that work. For the ten months ending August 31, the exports of beef and pork exceed by $2,000,000 the exports of the same kind in the same period in 1886. The total was $65,500,000 or a ratio of over $76,000,000 a year. The wonder of this thing is beyond parallel, and it may well claim a passing thought in these days of reflection upon the greatness, the growth, and the illimitable future of the republic. Here is the contribution of the United States to the dinner table of the world in only two articles of our food consumption. All other meats except beef and pork go to swell the enormous total, as do breadstuffs, fruits and vegetables, canned goods, etc. We not only feed ourselves more nourishingly and amply than any other people are fed, but we send these hundreds of millions worth of food yearly to the markets of other nations. No other country does such a work, nor in all history has it been done. Who could possibly have foretold such a tale, surpassing any Arabian night marvel, 100 years ago?—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Raise Better Horses.

Fashion has brought about many changes in horse breeding among American farmers, and no race has set the new style more forcibly or to larger purpose than the American trotting horse. The American trotter is a horse capable of every service; there is in almost literal truth, no limit to the speed in which he can trot one mile, and his capacity of endurance, whereof such contests are most exacting proof, is accepted as a fact in the minds of all observant men, while his patient temper and good size, combined with the extraordinary muscularity with which true systems have endowed him, render him an an excedingly valuable animal for any work of labor and routine.

The farmer who is looking forward to improvements in his stock must be careful in making selection of his breeding animals, and, herein, it is of the utmost importance that the sire chosen be an available, valuable, and in every respect a choice animal, possessing individually and ancestrally the best qualities which the offspring is desired to possess.—American Agriculturist.

Mr. Wheatcorn (from Mud Corner, Arkansas)—As I was just passing through the city I thought I would stop and see the procesh. There's me and Amanda, Tommy, George, Abimlech and the twins, Amanda's sister and aunt, and my friend Towser of Butternut Hill.

Hotel Clerk—For heaven's sake, what do you want?

Wheatcorn—I want a room of course. Best you've got, with four windows and plush furniture. I'm no low down pauper.

Wheatcorn (aghast)—Hold on! Think I'm Jay Gould? Give me something reasonable.

"You never drink or smoke, do you, George, dear?" she said. "You know I could never marry a man who drinks and smokes."

George, in a broken hearted tone of voice, admitted that he did smoke and drink a little, and turned to go.

But a pair of white, twenty-seven-year-old arms were around his neck in a moment.

"Never mind, George," said the girl, "perhaps my wifely influence will induce you to give them up."—N. Y. Sun.

[illegible] for insuring a good quality of tubers. It has been too dry for potatoes in many parts of the country where most attention was given them. The vines were generally small, while the hills contained but few tubers. The extremely hot weather during July and August interferred with the growth of the plants below and above the surface of the ground. As the crop will be small, the greatest pains should be taken in securing it in the best manner possible. None of it should be wasted by delay in securing it, by careless methods of harvesting, or by improper ways of storage. Potatoes will be in greater demand than during most years, for the reason that there is a scarcity of most kinds of garden vegetables. A poor season for potatoes is also a poor season for beets, carrots, turnips and parsnips. To secure a large yield of either of them, a somewhat of a moist season is required. None of them will do well if there is a protracted drought.

Digging potatoes should not be delayed till frost kills the vines and endangers the tubers that are near the surface of the ground. If a small portion of a potato is frozen or chilled, it is certain to decay, and in the process of rotting it will cause all those that come in contact with it to decay. One rotting tuber in a bin will cause many to decay. They will cause an unpleasant odor to be given off, which will be absorbed by the sound potatoes that do not come in contact with it. If the digging of potatoes is delayed till a crust freezes on the surface of the hills, the crop is likely to be injured by the frost. If digging is delayed until after the heavy fall rains occur, it will be hard and very unpleasant work. Soil saturated with water is in a poor condition to handle. It sticks to the hoe or other implement used in removing the potatoes from the hill and also adheres to the tubers themselves. It will remain on the potatoes and injure their appearance if they are sent to market. It will absorb and retain moisture after the potatoes are put in the cellar or other place of storage, and quite likely be the means of causing them to decay.

Potatoes should remain in the ground till they ripen, but they should not remain much beyond the period of their maturity. The leaves fall from the vines shortly after they ripen, and leave the ground where they grow unshaded. If the weather is favorable, weeds and grass spring up on it and render the digging quite difficult. If there is much growing vegetation of the ground the tubers will be cut by the hoe or other implement employed for removing them. If potatoes are cut by the hoe as they are likely to be when the ground where they grow is occupied by grass and weeds, they will present a bad appearance and be likely to rot. A few cut potatoes will lessen the market value of the entire lot, whether they are intended for seed or the the table.

If potatoes remain in the ground long after the time they become ripe, they will become detached from the stalks or the connecting tie will become so tender that it will not allow them to be withdrawn. When this is the case the work of removing them from the ground is greatly increased. If most of the tubers are drawn out with the vines they are said to be in perfect condition, while their withdrawal will make the soil so loose that it can be removed without difficulty. The best implement to use in removing the potatoes from the ground will depend on the condition of the soil and the skill of the digger. None of the potato-diggers that are drawn by horses are economical unless the farmer has a large crop to harvest. An Irishman will dig potatoes very fast with a spade and will not be quickly fatigued by its use; but the average American or German is not accustomed to the use of the spaid, and soon bebomes very tired if he handles one in a potato field. If the ground is free from grass or weeds the pronged hoe or fork is an excellent substitute for the common hoe in digging potatoes.

Potatoes can remain on the surface of the ground till the sun and wind have caused the moisture on them to evaporate, but they will be injured if they remain much longer. Sunlight soon changes the color of potatoes and injures their quality as articles of food. Potatoes that have been recently dug have a much better flavor than those that have been out of the ground for a considerable time. They are in this respect much like most edible roots, which lose their quality known as freshness by being exposed to the air. If potatoes are sarted as soon as they are dry, and placed in barrels that are covered with a piece of turf that fits closely so as to exclude currents of air and prevents them from becoming dry, they will retain the nutty flavor of newly-dug tubers. This is an excellent way of keeping choice varieties of potatoes that are worthy of ranking as luxuries. Potatoes exposed to currents of air will generally become shriveled in the latter part of the winter, and will sprout as soon as weather becomes warm in the spring. These injuries may be prevented by deeping them in barrels covered with green turf.

It is a good plan to sort potatoes before they are put in the cellar. Those that are scabby, partially rotten, cut or injured by frost or sunlight, as well as those that are mishaped or very small can be fed to the stock, and the labor of taking them to and from the cellar saved. The presence of a few poor specimens will be likely to lessen the price received for a lot of potatoes. A good celler is the safest place to store potatoes, as their condition can be seen at any time during the winter. A cave dug in the side of a hill affords a good place for storing potatoes, but on the prairies there are few places where caves or pits can be excavated. Potatoes are often kept by placing them in heaps upon the ground and covering them with straw and earth, provision being made to secure ventilation. Great risks however, always attend storing potatoes in this way in sections of the country where the temperature rises as it does in most parts of the west.—Chicago Tribune.

Playing Drunkard.

Jones was a kind, good-natured man as one might wish to see,
He had a buxom, tidy wife and bright-eyed children three,
But Jones was weak in one respect—he had a love for rum,
And often from the drinking shop would staggering homeward come.

His good wife grieved to see him thus, but bore all patiently,
And prayed and hoped that in some way he would reformed be,
She never waver'd in her faith, but toiled with hand and brain,
And in the end with joy she found her prayers were not in vain.

This occurred: one Sunday morn, while Jones lay on the floor
Sleeping away the outcome of his spree the night before,
His wife had gone to church to pray that his reform might come,
Leaving with much regret, her ill-clad little ones ones at home.
When passed away the lethargy caused by the flowing bowl,
Jones gazed around and saw a sight which shocked his very soul.
His eldest child, a boy of six, with frowsy, unkempt hair,
Was staggering around the room with idiotic stare.
The while his other little ones laughed loudly in their glee,
His grimaces, and flounderings, and antics queer to see.

"I'm only playing drunk," he said, "to imitate papa,
But if I had some liquor I could do it better far.
But children ain't allowed to drink, so I know what I'll do,
I'll wait till I grow up and then I'll be a drunkard too."

"I reckon not," Jones muttered, "with heaven's help I'll try
To do my duty after this in strict sobriety.
My eyes shall ne'er again behold a scene so sad as this;
Come here, my precious little ones, and give papa a kiss!"

* * * * * *

When Mrs. Jones came home from church he met her at the door,
And tenderly embracing her, said, "Wife, I'll drink no more!"
She saw the truth shine in his eyes and wept for very joy,
But never knew the change was wrought by her unthinking boy.

—Francis S. Smith

THE PROPER THING.

The majority of fall hats are neat, trim and stylish.

Long wraps in ulster or pelisse fashion are in high favor.

Black undressed kid gloves are worn by those in mourning.

Gray costumes in all shades grow more and more fashionable.

India cashmeres and other woolens are used in combination with soft silks.

India camel's hair is used with good effect combined with handsome plaided goods of various kinds.

A new and rich material imported this fall is a handsome velour or velvet plaided or striped in raised lines.

Red pilot cloth coats and red and black striped Jersey cloth coats will be worn over skirts of black satin and lace.

Fourteen shades of tan colored undressed kid gloves are shown to be worn with autumn and winter dresses.

New house jackets of armoured pilot cloth, trimmed in military fashion with epaulettes and high colar are popular.

The jacket of this year is not of any fixed shape. They are high, open, long or short, to suit the taste of the wearer.

Ivory white satin, foille francaise and moire antique are the fabrics of rich wedding gowns. Similar gowns are of grosgrains and China silks.

A Newspaper Has the Rheumatism.

Our old complaint, rheumatism has been fooling with us lately and it is possible that it may lay us on our back again. Should the News fail to appear at any time for a week or so you will know what the matter is and can govern your prayers or imprecations accordingly. If business men were only doing the square thing by us it would not matter whether we were able to attend to business or not, as we could afford to have the work done by others. —Minerva (O.) News.

Moonlight Hilarity.

A very worthy citizen whose greatest fault is that he will treat his friends and allow them to treat him in return, was looking for his home the other evening about midnight. The electric lights were shining and so was the moon in a cloudless sky. The elevated individual saw his shadow at full length on the sidewalk and halted. Bringing his metal tipped cane down with great force he exclaimed: "Go home! 'shamed of you'self! Yor're full, d—d if you ain't. G'home! Don't stan' there, b-b-blocking up sidewalk! G'home!"

Then he broke out into a snatch of song and windows went up and heads were put out to listen. "Roll-on—roll on—s-ilver moon—s' s-ilver moon guide the traveler's s'on 's way, whilst nightingales sing in time."

"G'home, I tell you! P'lice 'll take you in! My wise's waitin' for me else—of—of course ele fel—I'd take you —roll on silver moon"——

The last that was seen of him he was leaning affectionately on the arm of a policeman saying with great solemnity:

"I'm y-y-your friend an' don't you forget it. You take th—th—that other fel h-home—he's had t' much."—De- Free Press.

How to Save Boys.

Women who have sons to rear, and dread the demoralizing influences of bad associates, ought to understand the nature of young manhood. It is excessively restless. It is disturbed by vague ambitions, by thirst for action, by longings for excitement, by irrepressible desires to touch life in manifold ways. If you, mothers, rear your sons so that their homes are associated with the repression of natural instincts, you will be sure to throw them in the society that in some measure can supply the need of their hearts. They will not go to the public houses at first for love of liquor—very few people like the taste of liquor: they go for the animated and hilarious companionship they find there, which they discover does so much to repress the disturbing restlessness in their breasts. See to it, that their homes compete with public places in attractiveness. Open your blinds by day and light bright fires at night. Illuminate your rooms. Hang pictures upon the wall. Put books and newspapers upon your tables. Have music and entertaining games. Banish demons of dullness and apathy that have so long ruled in your household, and bring in mirth and good cheer. Invent occupations for your sons. Stimulate their ambitions in worthy directions. While you make home their delight, fill them with higher purposes than mere pleasure. Whether they shall pass boyhood and enter upon manhood with refined tastes and noble ambitions depends on you. Believe it possible that, with exertion and right means, a mother may have more control over the destiny of her boys than any other influence whatever.—Selected.

How to Handle Fire.

Fire requires air; therefore, on its appearance every effort should be made to exclude air by shutting all doors and windows. By this means fire may be confined to a single room for a sufficient period to enable all the inmates to be aroused and escape; but if the doors and windows are thrown open the fanning of the wind and the draught will instantly cause the flames to increase with extraordinary rapidity. It must never be forgotten that the most precious moments are at the commencement of a fire, and not a single second of time should be lost in tackling it. In a room a tablecloth can be so used as to smother a large sheet of flame, and a cushion may serve to beat it out; a coat or anything similar may be used with an equally successful result. Always endeavor to attack the bed of a fire; if you can not extinguish a fire shut the window, and be sure to shut the door when making good your retreat. A wet silk handkerchief tied over the eyes and nose will make breathing possible in the midst of much smoke, and a blanket wet and wrapped around the body will enable a person to pass through a sheet of flame in comparative safety. Should a lady's dress catch fire, let the wearer at once lie down; rolling may extinguish the fire, but if not, anything, woolen preferred, wrapped tightly round will effect the desired purpose.

Was Keeping It Still.

A citizen of Detroit who has been riding over several of the townships in Wayne County of late says he was only twenty miles from Detroit when he encountered a white-headed old farmer and casually remarked:

"You must be one of the old pioneers of Wayne county?"

"Well, sir, I expect I cast the first vote in this county," was the reply.

In the course of the day the citizen met five other old men who made the same reply, and in three days he encountered forty. It was getting rather monotonous, and he was on his way home, when a white-headed old farmer stopped him to ask the time of day.

"You are an old settler here, I take it?" said the citizen after consulting his watch.

"I am, sir."

There was a painful pause. The farmer looked as if he wanted to add something, and the citizen looked as if he expected him to. After a minute or two the latter said:

"Well, of course you polled the first vote in Wayne County?"

"Well—ah—well——."

"Don't deny it, uncle!"

"Well, then, I did, but as that was the only vote cast by my party for the next ten years I thought I'd keep a little still about it."—Detroit Free Press.

Successful Business Men.

As a general rule successful business men (merchants, politicians or bankers) were members of large families. No hotbed influence of wealth, or the petted training of an only child, dwarfed their early effort at self reliance. No extravagant use of unearned money smothered the great lesson of economy, without which no solid foundation of wealth was ever laid. In early life no lesson of caste or exclusiveness of blood chilled their sociability, but their minds were imbued with the idea that true worth made men and women of the first class.

The farmer's son raised on the scanty farm, or the half orphan of a poor widow, has no carriage in which to ride, so the son soon learns to walk to fame and fortune. In his youth no wealthy hand reaches out to sustain and steady his steps, so he learns to save himself, and pushes forward with self reliance and conscious ability to distinction. His father, with his scanty purse, sets an example of economy which clings to the son through life. In this way the poor boy from the farm, removed from the fashionable vices of society, comes to manhood and strikes out boldly with a determination to hew his own way to [illegible]—Boston Budget.

Decorative Don'ts.

Don't put paper on the wall of a nursery; it is better to either paint or kalsomine.

Don't have dark carpet and walls in a room that is deficient in light. Only apartments open to the outer light will stand gloomy tones in decoration.

Don't treat a hallway as though it were a dooryard, and no part of the house proper. A hall should be inviting, and hold out to the visitor a promise of the beauty of the inner rooms.

Don't have a drawing-room so filled with frail and delicate bric-a-brac that the least movement is fraught with danger of costly and wholesale breakage. This does not conduce to ease.

Don't have a carpet patterned with gigantic roses or other actual flowers. they harmonize with nothing. The colors in a carpet should, in a great measure, complete the color scheme adopted for the room.

Don't hang a picture so that it will be necessary to mount a stepladder to view it. Hang it so that the center will be about five feet and a half from the floor, a little below the line of vision of a person of average height.

Don't put a piece of furniture into a room merely because it is pretty and will fill up. Every article should have its real or apparent use; as as general thing the necessary pieces will occupy all the space that should be allotted to furniture.

Don't permit a white marble mantel to disfigure an otherwise tasteful room. Cover it with a draped mantel board. White marble has a suggestion of cemeteries about it. It always looks crude in a drawing-room, even in the form of the finest sculpture.

Don't hang a picture from one nail. Aside from the mere question of safety the use of two nails, the cord stretched across them so as to come down squarely to the corners of the frame, has a symmetrical effect and makes the walls look very much more finished.

Don't select furniture whose "means of support" do not appear adequate. Chairs with spindle legs inclined too far inward or outward have an apparent tendency toward disruption, and are constant terrors to callers.

Don't place a picture or a bit of decoration where it does not serve some artistic purpose. If a picture is intended to be seen in a strong light do not put it in an obscure corner, and, on the other hand, if it be painted in a high color key, do not bring it within the direct influence of a brilliant sunburst.

Entire Motive Force of the World.

From a note published by the bureau of statistics in Berlin the following very interesting figures are taken:

Four-fifths of the engines now working in the world have been constructed during the last twenty-five years.

France has actually 49,590 stationary or locomotive boilers, 7,000 locomotives and 1,850 boats' boilers; Germany 59,000 boilers, 10,000 locomotives and 1,700 ships' boilers, Austria 12,000 boilers and 2,800 locomotives.

The force equivalent to the working steam engines represents in the United States 7,500,000 horse power, in England 7,000,000 horse power, in Germany 4,500,000, in France 3,000,000 in Austria 1,500,000. In all these the motive power of the locomotives is not included, whose number in all the world amounts to 105,000, and represent a total of 3,000,000 horse power. Adding this amount to the other figures, we obtain the total 46,000,000 horse power.

A steam horse power is equal to three actual horses' power; a living horse is equal to seven men. The steam engines to-day represent in the world approximately the work of a thousand millions of men or more than double the working population of the earth whose total population amounts to 1,455,923,000 inhabitants. Steam, therefore, has trebled man's working power, enabling him to economize his physical strength while attending to his intellectual development—Scientific American.

Mrs. Cleveland Captures All Hearts.

Here as elsewhere and everywhere Mrs. Cleveland captures all hearts. The desire on the part of the public to see the handsome young wife of the president is extraordinary, and her very appearance has been a signal for unbounded enthusiasm. Since the days of Dolly Madison, there has been no Mistress of the White House so much of a public idol as Mrs. Cleveland, who seems to possess a head and heart fully equal to all the trying demands of her exalted station and to have thoroughly mastered the art of silencing the would-be critics. "She was just fool enough to go and give you something I suppose?"

"Oh, no, madam, she didn't give me nothin' neither, but she gave a much different reason. Good-by, madam!"

"Hold on just a minute. What did she say?"

"She come to the door all dressed up in a new yaller dress and seemed very much excited, madam, and when she opened the door, I looked in an' sees a man in there sittin' in a cheer, madam."

"Mercy, has it come to this with her! I wouldn't hardly believe it. Here don't go away—take this my good man."

Ah, yes, correct; that cream pie is good but apple rather lays over it. I'll put this cold chicken in my pocket. That'll do, madam; this is 'bout all I can carry."

"But what was it that woman said to you?"

"Why, she seemed excited like, 'sif she was goin' some place, an' she says, 'Please go 'way sir, we ain't got nothing in the house to eat?' "

"A pretty excuse to get you away! But that strange man——"

The Boy had a Lively Future Just Ahead of Him.

A man and his wife accompanied by a bright looking boy of 7, boarded a Fourth avenue car last evening. The conductor entered the car to collect their fares and received from the gentleman a 50-cent piece. At that moment the car stopped and some passengers got on. Their entrance caused delay, and when the conductor reached up to ring the bell there was something in the feeling of the half-dollar piece which aroused his suspicions. He examined it closely and discovered it was a counterfeit.

"This is a bad piece, sir," he said returning the money to the gentleman.

"I didn't give you that," growled the man.

"Yes, you did, sir," said the conductor. "I haven't had it out of my hand since you handed it to me."

The man stoutly maintained that he never had such a piece of money in his possession. The discussion waxed warm and the passengers became interested. Suddenly the child, who had been looking out of the window, turned, and, catching sight of the half dollar he understood the dispute and exultingly exclaimed:

"Ha, ha! I told you that money was bad this morning when mamma showed it to us."

And all the passengers smiled as the man, with a red face, silently produced a good quarter. At the next crossing he and his family got out.—New York Sun.

REV. THEO. GERRISH

is recognized as the leading Methodist divine in Maine. He is now settled over a church in Biddeford. Some two years ago when residing in Bangor as pastor of the Pine street M. E. church, he engaged in temperance work, and at the same time issued two books "The Blue and the Gray," and "Reminiscences of the War." In performing his various duties as minister, lecturer and author, he overtaxed his powers, and became a victim of Kidney disease and was obliged to forsake pulpit platform and library. After experimenting with various physicians without benefit he took a trip to the West for his health but did not improve. Coming home he found some of his family in poor health which added to his daily cares and thereby aggravated his own troubles. Again he sought aid at the hands of the medical fraternity and again he met with bitter disappointment.

Some one suggested Brown's Sarsaparilla which is made where Mr. Gerrish then resided. He had "no faith in patent medicines," he said. The friend got a bottle however and Mr. Gerrish used it. It helped him. He took another and another, all the while being on the mending hand. In time he became well as did all the other members of his household, and such was the regard he entertained for Brown's Sarsaparilla as a powerful remedy for Kidney disease that he cheerfully allowed the use of his name and also sent in a testimonial of the facts. Mr. Gerrish resumed charge of his church work, the temperance work, and has since done much in the literary field, being strong of body and mind, and free from all forms of disease. Hundreds have been benefited by the use of

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office for moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

I can't help telling the Truth as I view it and describing what I see. To describe it otherwise than it seems to me would be falsehood in that calling in which it has pleased Heaven to place me.

The latest is two Topsys and two lawyers, Marks Sr. and Jr., in Uncle Tom's Cabin, as introduced by Abby's Double Mammoth Uncle Tom's Cabin Co. at Niblo's Garden during the past week. Why do you weep for Harry,
He's reached the better land
He is singing now with angels
Near the throne at God's right hand.

You know that now forever
He's from sin and sorrow free.
Look up and smile dear father and mother,
Little Harry waits for thee.

He's waiting now up yonder
With those that went before
He'll be the first to greet you
When you reach the other shore.

God giveth and God taketh
Then say God will be done
He chasteneth not whom he loveth
So he took your only one.

So then good bye little Harry
We give you back to God
And though we miss thee sadly
We humbly kiss the rod.

Mary C. wife of George C. Crager and daughter of the late William Chesbro of Palermo, died very suddenly of dyptheria, in New York city, at the age of 31 years.

The remains were brought here on Sunday, October 2d, and burial made at Vermillion. She leaves a husband and young children whose ages are two and a half years and 10 months respectively,

Mrs. Crager passed a large part of the summer with her mother and friends in this village returning to her home in New York City only about four weeks ago.

Haunah, wife of Willian Wright died at her late home in Granby about 1½ miles down the river, on Sunday, Oct. 2d, 1887, at the age of 62 years. Funeral services were held at the house at 2 p. m. today, conducted by the Rev: Mr. Goodyear.

Prof. O. W. Bugbee, until this year principal of the Parish Union School, died at Tully, N. Y., on Sunday, Sept. 24, after a long illness. He was much thought of in Parish and other places where he was known.

Bronson Scoville died of consumption at the home of Mrs. Darling in the town of Hannibal, on Sunday, Sept. 25, age 21 years.

The Aeronaut's Narrow Escape at the Mexico Fair.

Professor C. W. Williams of Cincinnati made a parachute decent at the Mexico fair grounds Thursday, from a balloon 3,000 feet in the air, in the presence of 5,000 persons. Upon cutting loose from the balloon the parachute failed to inflate, owing to the ropes becoming entangled and fell 500 feet, when the ribs broke and the parachute inflated. He landed in a heap in a cornfield. But for the breaking of the ribs of the parachute he would have been killed.

Parish.

The church in this place is being repaired. It is now well torn to pieces. A celler has been dug to put in a furnace, and a new roof has been placed on the church over the old one.

John P. Kirch's new hotel is rapidly approaching completion. It is to be heated with a furnace.

Snell & McClymond of this place have have purchased the livery at Central Square. They are good men.

Prof. Bugbee our former principle is dead. He died in Tully. His death caused much sorrow in this place as he was highly esteemed. The school passed resolutions regretting his death and their esteem for him as their former teacher. The school teachers' fraternity have lost a noble teacher.

The iron bridge across the South Branch is completed and the town of Parish feels proud of it.

Most fields of potatoes in this vicinity are light. Occasionally there is a piece that has a very large yield.

There may be some strife on school commissioner. Our town is of the opinion that Prof. Bell answers very well the qualifications for that office and he will get generally their support.

All kinds of [illegible]

[illegible] Scotch yacht [illegible] the alien put to flight? It was magnificently done, gloriously achieved. After thirty six years of effort the "blasted English" and the "canny Scotch" are learning that yankee skill and models are not to be beaten. It was a beautiful day last Tuesday, the day of the first race. A Thistle day the wise ones called it. Light winds, no sea, balmy, glorious, serene. The bay was crowded with crafts from the 3,000 tons steamship "Guyandotte" to the two ton yawl. Everything that had steam or sail or oar power was upon the scene. The first race was over the New York yacht club course. The New York yacht club be it known is the especial guardian of the America's Cup. This course is from a point off what is commonly known as Owl's Head, or which the out-of-town resident may recognize on a map of New York Bay under the name of Bay Ridge. From this point they sailed straight through the Narrows to Sandy Hook and then six or eight miles out to sea. Returning over the same course the yachts were to finish at a point just south of the Narrows, known as buoy 15. In all the course is 38 miles long.

The chief interest in this race was at the start. The sea going crafts lay packed together at this point as thick as bees around a piece of honey. The two yachts Volunteer and Thistle each plucked of all superfluous appendages, such as row boats, booms and interior moveables were tacking and filling away ever and anon, eager as race horses for the fray. The ease with which the Thistle seemed to "go about," the rapid way she made in the light air, and the apparent superiority she displayed made betting by long odds in her favor. The Volunteer seemed to simply slide over the water in a very leisurely fashion. The moment the preparatory gun was fired, all was changed. The two vessels began maneuvering for position to windward. This the Thistle partially secured, for when the starting gun was fired she crossed the line first and stood off for Staten Island shore, tacking after making a short log. The Volunteer when the starting gun was fired, dropped her centre-board, crossed the line and instead of tacking as her rival had done, stood straight for the Staten Island shore, gaining by so doing the influence of an out going tide. This little trick won her the race, for when she made her next tack she was dead to windward of the Thistle and gaining.

This is in short the story, for the remainder of the race it was simply a procession. The Volunteer ahead and gaining; the Thistle following on, followed by a crowd of excursion crafts. When the finish came the Volunteer had nineteen minutes to spare representing a greater proportional beat than any previous one in an international race.

The next contest was by reason of unfavorable weather deferred till Friday and was witnessed by a great crowd of boats filled with sight-seers. The day was not fair, but a good thirty mile breeze was blowing. In accordance with the program it was a race twenty miles to windward, starting from the Scotland light ship, a beacon marking the wreck of the ship Scotland, off Sandy Hook. The wind being due east, the course was in that direction and as a result was paralel to the Coney Island and Rockaway beaches.

It was the same story of Tuesday. The advantages of the centerboard in "beating" was apparent. The courses of the Volunteer were very close to the wind and her ability to stand up in the gale blowing were never more apparent. Though the Thistle crossed the starting line a few seconds before her rival, it was plain that in windward work she was no match. The twenty miles to windward which by the necessary "tacking" made the distance sailed by the yachts about 45 miles was sailed in three hours and forty-five minutes. The Volunteer making it in fourteen minutes better time than the Thistle. The return was a straight course to Scotland Light and this was made in about two hours by the Volunteer or an average of about ten miles per hour. In the return the Thistle gained ten minutes; showing to some that in running before a fore wind or wind on the quarter the Thistle is better than the Volunteer; but we suspend judgment.

In all it's a great triumph for the Yankee model. The experience, in fact the very best boat in the United Kingdom, was pitted against ours and the defeat in distance greater than any preceding race proves the superiority of the Burgess boats. It proves, too, that all speculations as to their ability to sail in a light wind were vain to the extreme.

It would take volumes to tell the chagrin of the visiting Scotch and English. They came impressed with the idea that they were sure of that "mug." Their success over a certain craft which had shown themselves very speedy in races here led them to think they could beat the Mayflower and it was with that intention she came here. The events of last week show that even the Mayflower could have beaten the Thistle and that by a few minutes. Now the Thistle's owners want a triangular race, such that one side shall be to windward, one with forewind and one with wind on the quarter. It is also proposed to enter in a race all the crack single stickers. The Puritan, Priscilla, Mayflower, Atlantic, Volunteer and Thistle and let the best win.

I have written thus at length for I am sure The Times readers are interested.

[illegible] in New York city. [illegible] $1,000 by raising [illegible] small fruits to Chicago and in five weeks added another $1,000 by selling and planting shade trees. He then opened an oyster house at a cost of $5,000, but no sooner had he got it fairly paid for than his landlord wanted another business in the store and required him to move out. He soon engaged to a music house and after a few months' experience he came east and opened a music store, selling the celebrated Hallet & Davis piano of Boston. He had branches in Buffalo and Syracuse and made a small fortune. A few years ago he introduced the famous kazoo and realized a large sum of money. Taking it to the New Orleans exposition, he filled the city with so much noise the mayor and chief of police tried to stop its sale. While there, he opened an experimental lunch room and cleared $7,000 in three months, this venture was so successful, he resolved to repeat it on a larger scale and choose New York and a leading business centre on east Fourteenth street Nos. 43 and 45 were leased from the Astor estate at a yearly rental of over $26,000. The building is four stories, runs from Union Square back to Thirteenth street and is fitted up in magnificent style. The dining room proper seats 400 people; back of this are spacious parlors, reading and toilet rooms. It is lighted by electricity and the walls are brilliant with continuous beveled French plate mirrors extending the entire length. Five elegant fountains furnish soda water and most delightful music is provided with intervals to 12 p. m. During the past year this new Dairy Kitchen has served an average of 5,000 people per day. Its attractions are neatness, variety, dispatch, a superior cookery and service. The immense establishment has 150 employees and makes everything it sells, including its fine confectionery and soda water on the premises. Then, too, one can get everything for about half the prices usually charged. This feature draws regular customers as far as Jersey City. At noon time it is a sight which will well repay a stranger visiting the city. The popularity of the place is something wonderful and shows what daring enterprise can accomplish in a big city. G.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was given at the Leland last evening in the presence of a very good sized audience, that seemed to enjoy the unfolding of the play as well as if it was an original production. It does seem rather strange that this time-worn drama should retain such a firm hold on the theatrically inclined public, but such is the fact and there is no gainsaying it. The production last evening was above the average, and was heartily applauded. The jubilee singers, in particular, being singled out for special marks of approval. This evening will bring the last performance.—Albany Argus,

Estimates of Oswego County Men.

The New York World sent a corps of reporters to the Saratoga Democratic convention to ask the party representatives the following questions:

1. What do you think the labor vote will be in the State this Fall?

2. Who is your choice for President in 1888.

3. What do you think the Prohibition vote will be?

The Oswego county representatives answered the buestions this way:

John Dorsey—1. 40,000. 2. Nominee of convention. 3. 75,000.

D. H. Judson—1, 40,000. 2. Cleveland. 3. 60,000.

M. A. Stewart—1. 65,000. 2. The party's nominee. 3. 40,000.

O. M. Riley—1. 15,000. 2. The nominee. 3. 25,000.

He was to speak in Oswego the 31st instant and arrangements had been made for an excursion train from this village on that evening.

[illegible] It is understood that Secretary Bayard finds great difficulty in securing the services of capable men for these positions of inter-national trust, as it is thought to be a thankless and profitless work,—the final issue of which is involved in the most bewildering perplexity and uncertainty. It is expected that the Commission will also undertake the settlement of the disputed boundary between the United States and British Columbia; adjust the jurisdiction of the United States over Behrings Strait; and also consider the question of reciprocal relations between the United States and Canada.

It appears that full confidence has been restored in financial circles by the action of the Treasury in purchasing bonds, by which means about thirty millions have been added to the volume of the country's circulating medium within the past fortnight, thus dispelling at least for the present, all fears of general commercial distress. And now that the breakers are supposed to have been safely passed, it is apparent that, outside of Wall Street, the danger was more imaginary than real, for the general business situation was and is as good or better than usual before the Government came to the rescue of commerce. In proof of this I have to offer the records of the Treasury Department, which show that there are $15,000,000 more money in circulation now than there were last year.

Secretary Whitney expresses the opinion that the most important firearm yet invented is the dynamite gun, which has been the subject of a practical and most satisfactory experiment, with the result that the destructive agency can be thrown with perfect percision fully one mile and a half, and even further if the gun can be trained for that purpose. The dynamite gun can destroy the largest and strongest ironclads, and is undoubtedly one of the greatest of inventions.

It is announced that the Supreme Court vacancy will not be filled until after the President's return from his Western and Southern tour, and in consequence hope springs anew in the breasts of the constantly increasing number of aspirants for that eminent distinction.

One of the latest Presidential booms is that of General Sheridan, which is worked very quietly—the initiatory step being the publication of his life.

If the spiritual condition of the fiftieth Congress is not improved it will not be the fault of Christian endeavor, for the outlook is very bright in that direction. The whilom editor and famous evangelist Rev. Sam Small, has located in this city. and in addition to that accession, the American section of the Evangelical Alliance will hold a session in the Capital, from December 7th to 9th, which will number 2,000 delegates and be the greatest and most important religious meeting ever held in Washington. The Evangelical Alliance, as its name implies, is a representative body of all evangelical Christians whose mission it is to co-operate in religious work. As soon as the program is issued, 50,000 copies will be distributed throughout the United States, and it is expected that the number of visitors attracted will be much larger than the number of delegates in attendance.

The great popular demonstration in honor of Ex-Governor Shepherd, will take place next week, and will be an event to be pleasantly remembered many years, as the grateful citizens of Washington are thoroughly enlisted in its support, having contibuted the liberal sum of $10,000 to add to the grandeur and impressiveness of the pageant.

During the absence of the President and Mrs. Cleveland—they leave to day the White House will have fall cleaning and the usual annual renovating; matting will be exchaged for carpets, and the heavy window hangings will replace the light draperies that grace the vistas all summer—completely transforming the general internal appearance of the mansion.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus libing of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

Utica, N. Y. Oct. 3.

The market was dull to-day. Factorymen were willing to sell, but for a long time it did not look as if factorymen cared to purchase. The result however, proves that they were not quite so indifferent as they appeared to be at first. Prices crept up to within a fraction of last week's and salesmen were pretty well satisfied. There was no holding back to-day. Everybody accepted what he could get not caring to take chances on the future. The mild, wet weather keeps feed in good condition, and cows are giving more than their usual yield at this time of the year. Some factories are not off more than 25 per cent. from the flush of the season, and we hear of no skimming this fall. Taking the good prices of cheese and large yield of milk together, our dairymen, at least those who contribute to cheese factories, are reaping a bountiful harvest. The September make is now sold down to about the middle of the month, and it will take two more weeks to market the remainder. A fair proportion of the sales today was taken directly for the home trade to go to western cities. The sales were as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
7	512	11 c
45	4,475	11⅛
1	70	11¼
14	1,051	11⅜

Ruling price, 11⅛c. Transactions one year ago 11,687 boxes; ruling price, 11⅛c. Two years ago 12,895, ruling 8¾c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

Little Falls, Oct. 3.

Cheese.—At the opening of trade to-day buyers talked prices one-fourth to one-half cents below those of last week; said money was lost on last week's purchases; it was ruinous to pay such high prices; there was no need of it, etc., etc. So much was said in this strain that many salesmen believed that the market had really dropped off. But as business progressed, renewed life was given to the market by reports that 11¾c. were being paid by a couple of buyers, and from this time it was plain that the drop in price was not genuine. and at the close 11¾c. was found to be ruling, same as last week, but much more decidedly. While it is a fact that cheese is sold off close in this section, it is also true that the production is good—unusually so for the time of year. There is not the confidence in the market that existed three or four weeks ago. Transactions are:

Lots	Boxes	Price
28	1,466	11½

Farm Dairies—There were sales of 760 boxes of farm cheese at 11 to 11¼c. The ruling price is 11⅛c.

Butter—There was a good demand here to-day for all grades of butter offered. Sales of farm dairy amount to 165 packages and prices are 21 @22c, with 21c. paid for the bulk. There were 20 packages of creamery sold at 24c.

Proclamation.

There having been many complaints made that boys and young men congregate at night under the electric lights insulting ladies passing, and making the night hideous with all kinds of noise, so much so as to disturb the residents in the vicinity and preventing from sleeping until a late hour and disturbing them in their conversation or reading. Now this whole business is a great nuisance and must be stopped at once and the officers are instucted to visit such localities during the evening and disperse such crowds of boys at such places and to arrest them in case it continues.

Concerning Battle Island

In referring to the "The Story of Battle Island," which appeared in our last week's issue, B. B. Burt, Esq., of Oswego, who wrote on the same subject in 1876, says, "You locate Battle Island properly. Quite a number of years ago an excavation was made on the island for the foundation of a starch factory, and in it a human skull was found which had been pierced by a bullet, and the bullet was found in the skull. It was undoubtedly one of the persons that lost their lives in that encounter. The hand to hand fight in the swamp and from behind trees was, I have no doubt, at the outlet of Lake Neahtawanta."—Baldwinsville Gazette.

[illegible] of lot 4 lies in Lake Neatahwanta. About 67 acres on the south side of the lake and about 16 acres on the north side being the only dry land on lot 4. Mrs. Dexter claimed to own the whole of lot 4 under a deed containing the following description:

"All that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the town of Granby, county of Oswego, and known as being lot No. thee (3) in the original township of Lysander, lying southerly or south-easterly of Fish lake in Granby aforesaid and commonly called "Fish lake lot" supposed to contain sixty-seven acres of land be the same more or less."

The action was discontinued in Justice Court on the ground that the title to real property would come in question, and was continued in the Supreme Court.

It was first tried at a term held at Pulaski in June 1882, before Judge Churchill, who directed the jury to find a verdict in favor of Mrs. Dexter. Mr. Case appealed from this decision to the General Term of the Supreme Court and the appeal was argued at Binghamton in the fall of '84. The General Term in Jan. 1885 reversed the decision of Judge Churchill and Mrs. Dexter appealed from the decision of the General Term to the Court of Appeals

The case was argued before the Court of Appeals at Saratoga in June of this year and that court has just handed down their decision affirming the decision of the General Term and directing that judgement absolute be rendered in favor of the plaintiff Dan'l C. Case.

The Court of Appeals is the highest tribunal to which one can appeal in this state and probably, this decision of the Court of Appeals will end litigation in relation to Lake Neatahwanta.

Giles S. Piper argued the case for the plaintiff in the Court of Appeals and S. N. Dada for Mr. Dexter.

JUDGE VANT'S ESCAPE.

A Special Train Which He Took to Oswego Comes to Grief.

Judge Irving G. Vann was due in Oswego yesterday morning to open a term of the Circuit court and Court of Oyer and Terminer. He missed his train, not being aware of the changes in the time table, and rather then fail in his appointment chartered a special train on the Phœnix branch, to run in charge of Conductor Bull. Oswego was reached without accident, but in going through that city the special ran into an engine and tender. The Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg road has a lease of the N. Y. O. & W. track between Oswego and Fulton. Near the junction of these roads in Oswego there is a short curve, and on rounding it the engineer and fireman of the special saw an engine and tender just ahead. After the engine was reversed both jumped. Neither of the men were seriously injured. The shock of the collision opened the throttle wide and the engine dashed over to the west side of the Oswego river and ran into a switching engine of the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg, on which were Engineer Flynn and Fireman John Nary. The switching engine was completely telescoped. The men jumped, but Fireman Nary was stuck by the tender as it overturned and his left leg was crushed. The engineer was not hurt. The fireman was removed and in the afternoon his leg was amputated. Except for this second collision the engine would have run into a Phœnix train, waiting for the switching engine to leave the track before departing for this city, and a far more serious accident resulted. The only person injured was Fireman Nary, who will recover. The blame for the collisions has not yet been placed. Judge Vann, after all his trouble and disaster, escaped uninjured and arrived at the court house in time to open court, as if nothing unusual had happened.—Standard, yesterday.

Fireman Nary died Monday night of his injuries.

It is a mistake to suppose that sour, fermented slop for hogs is better than a fresh mixture that is sweet and clean.

It is a good plan to have two sets of roosting poles for the hens, and change them each week, setting them outside when not in use.

Among the most profitable fowls to be kept by the farmer or villager are the Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes. There is no question about that.

The small potatoes may be cooked and fed to the pigs and poultry. Always sort out the potatoes and have them as uniform in size as possible before marketing them.

A Michigan farmer sowed two fields of wheat—the one a crossed variety the other not. With all the conditions alike the one that was crossed produced nearly seventy-five per cent. more than the other.

Good clover hay is always considered as equal to any other. It is the standard by which all other grasses are compared, and no farm is considered fully supplied for the winter that has not had a crop of clover grown upon it.

Farmers should raise plenty of onions, carrots, beets, rutabagas, &c., to lay in stock for winter food for poultry. It will yield ample returns in the replenishment of the egg basket, as well as good fat table delicacies in cold weather.

Where only one or two hogs are kept they will quickly show the beneficial effects of a good scrubbing and washing with suds, especially if carbolic acid soap be used. It should be done on a warm day, the pen cleaned out and new beds provided.

Don't let cows fall off in milk. If no other feeding is at hand, pull suckers out of the corn and cut out all the stalks which have no ears and feed them. All that is gained now in the condition of cattle will be a gain through the winter. "Stock well summered are half wintered."

There is no one article in the line of medicines that gives so large a return for the money as a good porous strengthening plaster, such as Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Backache Plasters.

Potato Experiment.

The potato is so extensively cultivated that all experints which tend to increase the productiveness of the crop are of interest to the potato grower. Nearly every farmer has his method of planting and cultivation that he considers superior to all others. One farmer prefers cutting the seed tubers, while another thinks whole tubers, best; one plants single eye cuttings, another plants two or three cuttings. One farmer plants in hills, another in drills; one practices level culture, the other hill culture, each claiming the best results from his method. Many experiments have been made by potato-growers to ascertain the best manner of planting, but they have been of little, if any value, for the reason that the records have not been carefully kept and consequently the data are untrustworthy.

One of the most promising experiments in potato culture in progress at the New York Agricultural Experiment Station is that of the influence of the selection of seed tubers. The most productive and the least productive hills are selected when the crop is dug; the largest and also the smallest tuber of each are cut to single eyes, and planted separately. The eyes are planted one foot apart in the rows.

Taking the average yield of the different selections, the largest tubers from the best hills gave a greater yield than the largest tubers from the poorest hills. Last season, when the crop was dug, the best and poorest hills were selected from each of 125 varieties. This spring the largest and smallest tuber was selected from the best hill and also the largest and smallest tuber from the poorest hill. They were carefully cut to single eyes and the pieces planted one foot apart in the row. The product of each tuber will be counted and weighed when dug. A selection of the best and poorest hills of each variety will again be made for planting next season, as the intention is to conduct the experiment for several years in order to settle the question of the selection of seed.

In experiments with large and small tubers for seed, in the majority of cases the product of the former has been greater than that from cuttings of the same weight as the small tubers, the cuttings being taken from large tubers. From this it would appear that cutting the tuber is detrimental.

Last season two rows sixty-six feet long were planted with single eyes from large tubers. The adjoining rows were planted with the same number of small whole tubers that weighed the same as the single eye cuttings. Two rows of the same length were planted with two-eye cuttings and the two adjoining with the same number of whole small tubers of the same weight as the cuttings. Two rows were also planted with three-eye cuttings and two with whole tubers of the same weight. The cuttings in each case were taken from large tubers. The pieces of tubers were planted one foot apart in the rows, which were three feet ten inches apart.

The yield from the six rows of whole tubers was 354 pounds; that from the six rows of cuttings was 302 pounds, a difference of fifty-two pounds, or nearly 14 per cent. in favor of the small uncut tubers over the cuttings from large tubers. This season we have an experiment of the same kind that is being conducted on a larger scale.—M. H. Beck[illegible]

[illegible] in the [illegible] harbor full of [illegible] richest pleasure [illegible]. The boats of the [illegible], Albert and Victoria, which carry the queen, and the Osborne, which is at the bidding of the prince of Wales, lay at anchor in these waters. The reigning house of Britain sails in and out of this harbor every day when in this vicinity in the yellow-painted and curiously decked craft which are called royal yachts. Beautiful boats they are and georgeously fitted up. Both of them carry crews equal to that on any ocean steamer that has the capacity of a thousand souls. They are kept constantly in commission to do the bidding of the sovereign and her son. In these waters too, the royal yacht club has its home, and the swell races between the boats and other phases of high social life, make things very fashionable and lively about here. But ocial life as the world knows and feels it in this locality, does not interrupt the even tenor of the Sartoris home.

Nellie Grant is the mistress of this home, now, for the elder Mrs. Sartoris is dead. The master is the father of the singular son who maried this splendid American girl who so worthily bore a great name. The husdand, having large interests in Wales, is rarely at home, and the father devotes himself to the care of his son's children and his wife's happiness. The elder Sartoris is a man of culture and refinement, devoted to music, painting and literature. He has means and not only surrounds himself with a home air of art and refinement, but with those who deal with the finer touches of existence. His daughter-in-law lives in an atmosphere of the higher order. There are rich paintings in the halls and on the parlor walls, music of every description in the drawing rooms, and books of the rarest quality in the library.

The farm is ample, well laid out and cultivated. The house is an old building with two centuries of history about it. The proprietor has added some new features to the architecture of the main building, and it is ample now to house the great troop of friends who frequently come here to enjoy the good taste of the proprietor. The grounds are beautifully laid out and decorated. There are acres and acres of lawn and pasture, and many more acres of flowers, shrubbery and shade. Gravel walks laid in and out between the rows of great trees which run in every direction, and tasteful flower beds dot the whole slope from the house to the river.—Letter in N. Y. World.

Sufferers from the effects of quinine, used as a remedy for chills and fever, should try Ayer's Ague Cure. This preparation is a powerful tonic, wholly vegetable, and without a particle of any noxious drug. Warranted a sure cure.

The Woman Who Wants to Know.

"In making up a party for traveling excursion," said Charles Dudley Warner to a friend who was planning one, "always be sure to have it include at least one ignorant woman. She will ask all the questions you are ashamed to ask, and you will secure the benefit of a vast deal of information you would otherwise lose.—Epoch.

There is a man in San Bernardine, Cal., who has never kissed his wife or his 11 children. It is our humble opinion that a man who has to bustle around and support a wife and 11 children ought to be excused from kissing them. —Burlington Free Press.

In Brief and To The Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents. eow

Frequently the farm horse suffers from over-feeding, and from being worked on a full stomach; for farm horses eat all the time, and look lean and wire coated—two certain proofs of chronic indigestion.

"I have taken, within the past year, several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and find it admirably adopted to the needs of an impovished system. I am convinced that this preparation, as a blood purifier is unequaled."—C. C. Dame, Pastor Congregational church, Andover, Me.

The Pumpkin and the Acorn.

'Tis often [illegible] that man will quit
The very thing for which he's fit,
And think all talents under Heaven
Have to his special self been given;
Hence 'tis the pulpit robs the plow,
And [illegible] aim to dance and bow;
Clowns upon 'Change are would be great
And barbers regulate the State.
Some, too, are so supremely wise
They rule the ruler of the skies,
Though mortals, seize th' creative rod
And recreate the works of God.

Thus once a self-sufficient spark,
While wandering in a rural park,
Viewed nature's works with scornful eye,
And could in each defects espy.
Vain with importance, "Had," said he,
"The universe been made by me,
Without a fault the world had rose—
No crimes, no sufferings, frauds nor woes;
But all had been precisely right,
The sun died down but genial light.

"Eternal Summer fields adorned,
And elements all discord scorned;
But now see what confusion's found:
This pumpkin groveling on the ground,
The acorn on that noble tree—
Such blunders were not done by me;
Pumpkins from oaks should take their birth,
And acorns grovel on the earth."

Thus boasting, to a shade he crept,
Lay down and straightway soundly slept;
The tree tops waved, as winds arose,
And dropped an acorn on his nose;
His slumbers by the touch was broke,
When thus the little acorn spoke:
"Conceited fool, had things been made
According to the scheme you laid,
And had the pumpkin graced the tree
Instead of such like things as me,
Then had your stupid head been crushed,
Your pride destroyed, your nonsense hushed."

THE PROPER THING.

Wraps for autumnal wear are as varied as possible.

Ladies' cloth is used for small girls' winter dresses.

Bordered woolen dresses in gay colors will be worn by young ladies.

The newest fall dress goods are mostly plaids, in both silks and wool stuffs.

Poplin, both in plain grounds and in plaids, is used for demi-toilet dresses.

Large plaids of contrasting colors are made for every-day dresses for little girls.

Cashmere remains the favorite fabric for the guimpe dresses of girls from three to ten.

Cashmere dresses with lower plaid woolens will be popular for winter wear.

The most practical jackets are those fitting close at the back and made loose and without darts in front.

High waists of cashmere with long sleeves and a straight, full gathered skirt are useful dresses for girls.

Very pretty silk plaids for the coming season have grounds in marine blue, seal brown, garnet or plum color, crossed with bars of a paler shade. In richer silks changeable ones will be much in favor.

Girls of five years wear skirts long enough to fall half-way between the knees and ankles. Older girls wear shorter skirts, falling just below the knees, while those under five years wear them almost down to the ankles.

The components of Laxador are daily prescribed by the ablest physicians of the land. It is nonpareil for loss of appetite and debility. Price 25 cts.

Perfect health can be assured to the baby by judiciously using Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Sold everywhere for 25 cents a bottle.

Varying Ideas of Politeness.

Well, there are different ideas of politeness. In a ferry-boat a fellow sat and spat against the wall as though firing tobacco juice at a mark. A cabinful of ladies were disgusted. Then an officer came in an asked him what he meant by such conduct.

"Can't you see the notice?" the officer exclaimed.

A framed injunction read as follows: "Out of respect for the ladies, gentlemen will not spit on the floor.

"And that's why I'm spitting on the wall instead of the floor," said the passenger.—New York Letter.

It has the news of the world carefully and intelligently set forth. Special correspondents cover national and state centers. An army of local correspondents gather the news from all the local fields. Full market reports from Troy, Albany, Boston, New York, and the leading commercial marts, near and far. Hints in profusion for the farm and the household. One of the best features of the Weekly Times as a paper for the family is its selections from the best current literature, which are added to the matter, and description, story and poem make charming reading for the home circle. AS GOOD AS GOLD.

When my son Gregory married Miss Morrison, I gave him a piece of my mind, and told him I didn't care if I never saw him again. Why? Oh, well, I didn't like her; she wasn't the sort of a girl I'd have chosen. I had never seen her, but I knew she wasn't. A flirty young thing just from the boarding school, couldn't make a shirt, or bake a loaf of bread, but there was Miss Fish, a plain girl, to be sure, but so good, a splendid housekeeper, and all that. I always liked Almira Fish; and Gregory to go marry Fanny Morrison! Well, as I said, I told him what I thought of him and her, and the boy showed his temper, and for six months I never say him.

I bore it as long as I could, but a mother must be a fool about her only boy; so one day, as he wouldn't come to me, I went, as the rascal knew I would. I went to the office and walked up to the desk, and was going to scold him, but something came over me that made me choke to keep the tears back, and before I knew it we had kissed and made friends.

"And now you'll go and see Fanny," said he; "and I'll find you there when I come home at night;" and after a little coaxing I said I would go—and more than that, I went.

The house was a cunning little place a mile or two out of town, and I must say, it was very neat outside.

I rang the bell; it shone as it ought to, and before it stopped tinkling some one opened the door. It was a pretty young woman in a blue chintz wrapper, and when I asked her if Mrs. Gregory Bray was at home, she answered—

"Yes, that is my name. I've been expecting you an age, but better late than never."

"How did you know I was coming?" I asked, puzzled to know how she knew me, for we had never met before.

"Oh, I didn't know," said she. "Indeed, I had made up my mind you wouldn't; but it is a long way out here, I know. Come right up stairs. Miss Jones was here yesterday to cut and baste, but we find it as much as we can do to do the trimming between us."

"Cool," I though. Then I said, "I suppose you are having a dress made?"

"A suit," said she; "skirt, overskirt, basque and dolman. I do hope you make nice buttonholes."

"I should hope I do," said I. "I would be ashamed of myself if I could not."

"So many can't," said she, "but I told Miss Jones to send me an experienced hand, and she said there was no better than Mrs. Switzer."

Now I began to understand. My daughter-in-law took me for a seamstress she expected, and if ever a woman had a chance, I had one now. Not a word did I say, only I wondered if seamstresses generally came to work in gross grain silk and a cashmere shawl; and I sat down in the rocking chair she gave me and went to work with a will. I can sew with any one, and as for buttonholes—but this is not my story.

She was a pretty girl, that daughter-in-law of mine, and very chatty and sociable. I talked of this, and I talked of that, but not a word did she say of her mother-in-law. I spoke of people I had know who had quarreled with their relations, but she did not tell me that her husband's mother had quarreled with him.

At last I spoke right out about mothers-in-law, and I said:

"As a rule, mothers-in-law and daughters-in-law don't agree."

"Said she: "That's a very wrong state of things."

"Well," said I, "I suppose it is, but how do you account for it?"

"I suppose young people are selfish when they are first in love," said she, "and forget old people's fellings."

"It was an answer I did not expect,"

"It is plain that you are friendly with your mother-in-law," said I.

"I am sure I should be if I had ever seen her."

"Oh! then I have been misinformed," said I. "I was told that Mr. Gregory Bray was the son of Mrs. Bray who lived on —— street."

"That is perfectly true; but still we have never met."

"How singular!" said I. "I suppose it is old Mrs. Bray's fault. I've heard she was a very queer old lady."

"You haven't heard the truth, then," said my daughter-in-law. "My husband's mother is a very fine woman in every respect. But when my husband told her suddenly that he was going to marry a girl she never saw, she was naturally startled, and she said some things about me, knowing I was fresh from boarding school and no housekeeper, that offended Gregory, and so there has been an estrangement, I think my dear husband a little to blame, and I have urged him a dozen times to go and see her. He is very fond of and thinks no one like her in many things; but his temper is up, and it will take time to cool it. Meanwhile, I feel quite sure if she knew me she would like me better. Perhaps that is a piece of vanity, but I should try to make her, you know, and I won't fall into absurd superstitions that a woman must hate her mother-in-law. I can't remember my own mother, and Gregory's would certainly seem to come next to her. Now you have the story, Mrs. Switzer."

"I am sure it gives you credit, and the old lady ought to be ashamed of herself."

I wanted to get up and kiss my daughter-in-law then and there, but that would have spoiled my fun, so after that I [illegible]

And he put his arms around us both, but Fanny gave a little scream.

"Oh! Gregory, what are you about? This is Mrs. Switzer, who is making my dress. At least I have thought so all day." For you see I had burst out laughing, and had kissed Gregory back, and then kissed her.

"My dear," said I, "I've played a little trick on you, or rather, let you play one on yourself, but you've turned out as good as gold. I could not get you to say a word againt the old lady. I am Gregory's mother, my dear, and yours, too, if you'll call me so."

"Indeed I will," said the dear girl: "but I have kept you sewing hard all day. You see I expected a Mrs. Switzer, and I—"

"We've been all the more sociable for that, my dear," I said, "and I'm glad it happened; I've been very foolish all the while, and Gregory has chosen a better wife for himself than I could have done."

And so I think to-day, for I believe there never was a better woman than Gregory's wife, Fanny.

Jacob Sharp's Wife.

The one who has suffered most is his faithful wife, who has never once been beyond the reach of his quivering voice since June 18, when he was locked up in jail.

Warden Keating, who had been using the old quarters of William M. Tweed as his parlors, readily gave them up to Mr. and Mrs. Sharp. They front on Ludlow street, and have two large iron-barred windows. The rooms are neatly furnished with Brussels carpet. Pictures of rural scenes hang on the the walls, and the windows, with their iron bars, are covered with heavy blue shades, and over this these hang neat lace curtains. The first room has a leading out into a hall, which leads also to the big square yard, with its horse-shoe-shaped grass plat.

In this room is Mr. Sharp's bed, that rests just opposite the window, his easy chair and a little table which holds his medicines.

Near the head of the bed is a door leading into an adjoining room, where Mrs. Sharp sleeps, when sleep is possible. This door is always open, and Mr. Sharp is awake, his wife is nearly always hovering about him. She is a tall, graceful, well-shaped woman, bordering on sixty years. There was nothing in her appearance a few months ago to indicate that so many years were resting upon her, but of late, time and care have stamped their imprint upon her face. There are now lines of wrinkles marking it, and the features are pinched and wan. Her eyes are heavy with grief and lack of needful rest. Her black hair, that she wears in little schollops, low over her forehead, is only slightly streaked with gray. The only conspicuous jewelry that she wears is a pair of large diamond earrings that Mr. Sharp gave her only a short time ago. She dresses always in black.

In the early part of the trial Mr. Stickney kept her hopeful, as he did her husband, with assurance that a vindication would result from it, and so when the blow came it fell all the heavier. She was hopeful even after conviction, but when the general term refused to terfere her strength gave away, and since last Monday she has been weeping almost continually. She does not think so much of the shame that will be added to her name when her husband is in convict clothes as she thinks of the separation that his removal to Sing Sing will cause. She has lived with him for 40 years and has seldom been away from him a whole day in all that time. She has said she would rather they both should die than that they should be separated and kept apart for months at at a time, as they will be if he goes to Sing Sing, by the stringent rules of prison life. Her tears have made her husband realize more than anything else could, his desperate case.—N. Y. Evening Star.

Catarrh is always accompanied by fetid breath. A very few doses of Van Wert's Golden Balm will remove this annoying feature of the disease. Price 25 cents.

People Demand Protection.—Patent Medicines.

What are they? As a general thing they are prescriptions having been used with great success by old and well-read Physicians. Thousands of invalids have been unexpectedly cured by their use, and they are the wonder and dread of Physicians and Medical Colleges in the U. S., so much so, that Physicians graduating at Medical Colleges are required to discountenance Proprietary Medicines, as through them the country doctor loses his most profitable practice. As a manufacturer of Proprietary Medicines, Dr. G. G. Green of Woodbury, N. J., advocates most cordially,—in order to to prevent the risk that the sick and afflicted are liable to, almost daily by the use of Patent Medicines put out by inexperienced persons for aggrandizement only, and the employing of inexperienced and incompetent doctors by which almost every village and town is cursed; and men claiming to be doctors who had better be undertakers, experimenting with their patients and robbing them of their money and health,—for the good of the afflicted that our government protect its people by making laws to regulate the practice of medicine by better experienced and more thoroughly educated Physicians, and thereby keep up the honor and credit of the profession, also form laws for the recording of recipes of Proprietary Medicines, [illegible]

DAKOTA LETTER.

[Written for The Times.]

About three months ago I left my home in the Empire State for the beautiful Territory of Dakota. It was on the evening of the 4th. of July that I left my Fulton home for the far west. I remained in Syracuse over night, leaving for the west shortly after 7 o'clock the morning of the 5th. I arrived at Suspension Bridge about 1 o'clock the same afternoon and took a train on the Grand Trunk R. R. for Chicago, riding through the Dominion of Canada that afternoon and reaching Point Edward which is located on the St. Clair river, at about dark of the same evening. Our train then passed on to a ferryboat and crossed over to Port Huron, Mich. I spent that night riding through this state, passing into Indiana the morning of the 6th. and was a few hours crossing the northern part of the state, reaching Chicago, Ill. about 9 o'clock. I waited in the city about three hours, leaving on the Chic., Mil. & St. Paul R. R. at 12:05, and was carried safely through Illinois and Iowa into the beautiful land in which I now abide, reaching Chamberlain, the terminus of the road, the next evening (7th) at 6:40.

I have lived in different parts of New York state and have seen very desirable localities there, also passed through beautiful sections on my trip west, but never have I seen a section of country that I so admire as the one in which I am now located.

Dakota is "A No. 1" as a farming and stock country. Millions of bushels of wheat and also corn have been raised this season, and squashes and melons that would require one of Fulton's strong coal men to handle freely were taken to the Territorial Fair the last week in September, one squash weighing as high as 168 pounds.

People seem to think, when coming to Dakota, that they are going to a barren little desert to endure hardships and privations, but I wish to inform you there is room enough for all of N. Y. and several other states in this broad domain and as fine land as God ever let the sun shine upon.

Contrary to the general eastern belief, the people here are a very refined class, many of them from your beloved Empire State. The work of education is not forgotten, but is progressing finely under the management of those who are capable of carrying on the same.

The principal churches are well represented and Dakota is pushing on, for she has the men to do it, to victory, and some day not far distant, will be the grandest state in our glorious Union.

In a future letter I will speak of our beautiful city, which is located on the east bank of the muddy Missouri, just across from the Big Sioux Indian Reservation and on the south bank of the American Creek just across from the Crow Creek Resevation. Will also tell you how the Indians are cared for and protected by the U. S. government.

Naming the Baby.

"My boy," said a newly married Chicago man to me only yesterday, "don't marry a woman whose notions of life are bounded by æstheticism. I married, as you know, a girl who painted like one of the old masters, who sang like a field lark, and who had a stage walk to her which made theatrical managers turn round on the street and ask who she was. I have shared this admiration to a certain extent. A few weeks ago (turning around to see that no one heard him) our house was blessed with an heir. Pretty child, too. All of her old girl friends came over to chuck the youngster under the chin and suggest names. I wasn't asked about the matter. Last Sunday we took the kid to church to be baptised. I don't go much on such things, but I let Kate have her way. I carried the heir to the front, still ignorant of what sort of a handle he had to my name. You can imagine my surprise when that minister, pouring a thimbleful of water on the bald head of the youngster, said, 'Ostler Joe——, I baptise thee," etc. It was too late to say anything."

Not Eligible.

In a school considerably less than 100 miles from this village, the teacher was explaining to the little boys the necessary qualifications required to be President of the United States, dwelling upon the point that any one born in this country was eligible. She concluded by saying, "And now, boys, as you were all born in this country, your chances to be President are excellent, and you should study with that end in view." A grimmy little hand popped up and the owner sorrowfully shook his head. "What!" said the teacher, "weren't you born in this country?" Another shake of the head. "Where were you born?" With an added sadness he replied, "In Phœnix!" Tableaux.—Baldwinsville Gazette.

One interesting thing about Van Wert's Liver Pellets is the fact that when once they gain a position in the esteem of those using them, it is impossible to dislodge them.

Women as Editors.

It would make a long list simply to enumerate the names of women who sit in the editorial chairs of magazines. Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge went from a successful literary career to the office of the St. Nicholas. Ella Farmann Pratt takes an active part in making up Wide Awake.

Of the fashion periodicals there is no better edited publication than Harper's Bazar, of which Miss Mary L. Booth, and in her absence, Mrs. S. S. Conant, has full control.

Jennie June has a half ownership in Godey's Lady Book, and is supreme in the editorial room. Mme. Demorest has but just retired from the business control of the magazine bearing her name. The widow of Peterson the Philadelphia publisher, has taken Peterson's magazine into her own hands, both editorally and financially.

The Ladies' World pays the woman at its helm $5,000 a year, and the new dress reform magazine, Dress, if Mrs. Jenness Miller will allow it to be classed with fashion publications, is in part and wholly managed by its editor, who is putting a good deal of fresh talent into its early issues.

Mrs. Laura Holloway edits the Home Library Magazine and the Woman's Argosy, new Chicago ventures which promise large success. Mrs. Josephine Redding edits two decorative art magazines very ably, and the housekeeping magazines are in swarms. Mrs. Frank Leslie has made a fortune in four years.

Of a more serious class of publications, Mrs. Martha J. Lamb has increased the circulation and made the reputation of the Magazine of American History, and Miss Jeannette Gilder commands unlimited respect for her work on the Critic. Philanthropic publications of all sorts are in femenine hands. Edward Everett Hale's Lend a Hand is largely directed by a woman, and the list, not of women who supply matter for departments, but who are in editorial or business control or both of periodicals of some size and standing could be prolonged at some length.

Many of the large publishing houses say that women make the best readers of manuscript, and the same qualities that make femnine talent avail there, together with some tact and business judgment, make good editors of them also. Their periodicals almost invariably are good business properties, and are nicely adjusted to the exact clientage they are meant to reach.

Jennie June says that women like editorial work, and editorial work thus far seems to like them.—Mail and Express.

Something that will quiet the nerves, give strength to the body, induce refreshing sleep, improve the quality of the blood, and brighten the complexion is what many persons would be very glad to obtained. Carter's Iron Pill are made for exactly this class of troubles, and are remarkably successful in accomplishing the ends desired, as named above. They are useful for both men and women. Sold by druggists. Price, 50 cents a box. See advertisement.

They Were Excused.

"Have you any—any strawberries?" she asked, as she suddenly entered a hardware store. "Not to-day, madame, sorry to say," courteously reblied the proprietor. "Great Scott but is the woman crazy?" exclaimed a customer as she went slowly out. "No, sir, not a bit of it," said the proprietor: "she was down town without her husband knowing it. She saw him on the street and dodged in here to escape meeting him. She was quite confused and she asked for strawberries. Happens three or four times a week, sir, and the poor things are quite excusable.—Detroit Free Press.

This is Hospitality.

"My father is a very genial man," she said, "and desires that I shall extend the hospitality of the house to every caller. Will you take something before you go?"

"Well, yes," replied the youth, "I will, with your permission, take a kiss from you."

The maid was abashed, but the youth was equal to the occasion and the hospitalities were extended.—Boston Courier.

In performing his various duties as minister, lecturer and author, he overtaxed his powers, and became a victim of Kidney disease and was obliged to forsake pulpit platform and library. After experimenting with various physicians without benefit he took a trip to the West for his health but did not improve. Coming home he found some of his family in poor health which added to his daily cares and thereby aggravated his own troubles. Again he sought aid at the hands of the medical fraternity and again he met with bitter disappointment.

Some one suggested Brown's Sarsaparilla which is made where Mr. Gerrish then resided. He had "no faith in patent medicines," he said. The friend got a bottle however and Mr. Gerrish used it. It helped him. He took another and another, all the while being on the mending hand. In time he became well as did all the other members of his household, and such was the regard he entertained for Brown's Sarsaparilla as a powerful remedy for Kidney disease that he cheerfully allowed the use of his name and also sent in a testimonial of the facts. Mr. Gerrish resumed charge of his church work, the temperance work, and has since done much in the literary field, being strong of body and mind, and free from all forms of disease. Hundreds have been benefited by the use of being induced by Mr. Gerrish to use it. It is for sale everywhere. Ara Warren & Co., Proprietors, Bangor, Me. 21w4

Brown's Sarsaparilla,

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office for moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

I can't help telling the Truth as I view it and describing what I see. To describe it otherwise than it seems to me would be falsehood in that calling in which it has pleased Heaven to place me.

Important.

We place before our readers this week the advertisment of the New York World the greatest newspaper published on this continent. Read it through as it may be the last time that you will see it. Remember in this connection we make the following offer for a limited time. For $2.00 we will supply you with one year's subscription to THE FULTON TIMES, one years subscription to the N, Y. Weekly World and your choice of either one of the three gift books mentioned. This applies to old as well as new subscibers to THE TIMES.

THE New York World, with its characteristic enterprise started an evening edition on Monday.

HON. GEORGE B. SLOAN of Oswego was renominated for State Senator at Sandy Creek last Wednesday.

THE way that rain holds on this month is only excelled by the manner in which the Board of Trustees delay in securing fire protection for the village.

THE President and his party are holding receptions, meeting enthusiastic crowds on their western trip. They were in St. Paul, Minn., yesterday and were traveling through Wisconsin yesterday.

Gov. Hill has pardoned John D. Spencer, son of our Superintent of the Poor of Mexico, who was sentenced March 1, 1886 to a term of three years. Spencer was implicated in postoffice irregularities at Mexico and convicted of grand larceny in the second degree. He is now at his home in Mexico.

THE Syracuse Standard appeared yesterday from its new home on East Genesse street and from its new press. Within the columns of its twelve pages is the history of its past with cuts of the men that have guided it to its present prosperity. For convenience, completeness and attractiveness its new quarters are probably unexcelled by any office in the state outside of the matropolis.

While this indication of the success of our esteemed contempory is great, it is no greater than it deserves and we say may the light of this our favorite morning journal never grow less.

A SAD and peculiar case, showing the evil results of intemperance comes from Skaneateles in Onondaga county. William G. Ellery is President of that beautiful village and is a lawyer of marked ability. He has a son Frank, about 22 years of age who is a law student in his office. It is a well known fact that the father and son are accustomed to go on a spree together having as their only other companion a fine Irish setter dog. When these occasional periods of debauch come, it is also a well known fact that the dog is the only one of the trio who is able to judge whether they are in Skaneateles or at Glen Haven at the head of the lake.

One of these sprees resulted in their arrest last Thursday. They had been doing the town in vermillion for two or three days when they were arrested and brought before the Justice who immediately fined the father and son $10 each and costs and to stand committed until paid. Refusing to pay the fines, they were taken to Syracuse and the doors of the Onondaga Penitentiary opened to receive them. The general sentiment of the community is that the sentence is no more than just, the only question being as to whether men in their condition, with intellect so clouded as not to realize the situation, should be brought to trial and committed.

Friday friends of the interested parties went to Syracuse and paid the fines and father and son were liberated. It is a sad case and illustrates how liquor will drag down persons that owing to their excellent qualities and marked abilities would hold the highest esteem of the community in which they reside.

Quite Right, Brick!

From Pomeroy's Advance Thought, we clip the following very correct paragraph. "One poor man's brains, push, [illegible] and business energy, who can [illegible] and get men of capital to engage in enterprises, is worth more in a [illegible] territory or county, than [illegible] million of miserly corner lot holders [illegible] miserly skinflints who hold a [illegible] so close to their eyes that they [illegible] the future or feel an inspiration [illegible]

[illegible] Case of the Town of Granby [illegible]

[illegible] of Fultonians attended. The greatest interest was of course centered on the parachute descent which occurred on Friday and of which the Era gives the following account:

"At 2:45 the people rushed toward the spot where the balloon was being filled, the crowd all anxiously awaiting the the suspicious moment when Prof. Williams was to make his balloon ascent and jump with the parachute. At 4 minutes of three the great guy ropes were cut and the balloon arose straight in the air, drifting about 40 rods south, then it moved eastward, and when about 1,500 feet from the ground Prof. Williams jumped.

He shot like an arrow for about 100 feet, then the parachute filled with air and he made the finest descent that he has ever done. The parachute oscillated but very little, making a fine appearance, as it gradually descended. The balloon turned bottom side up and fell on a fence 40 rods east of the fair grounds in about 2½ minutes from the time it rose with its occupant. The parachute soon followed and in 3 minutes and 10 seconds from the time it ascended, it was again on the ground, in the same lot with the balloon. Just before reaching the ground the parachute swung suddenly to the east and Prof. Williams struck on his head and shoulders, receiving a slight scratch over the left eye, but was otherwise uninjured.

When an Era reporter interviewed Prof. Williams, after freeing himself from the paraphernalia, he expressed himself very enthusiastically over his success. He said the parachute oscillated but slightly and that he now had control of it so he could remedy all vibration, for he had formerly had the same success at Mexico.

Every one seemed to enjoy the sight which was certainly a fine one. Prof. Willams may well be congratulated on his success, while the association are to be commended on securing such a valuable attraction for their fair.

Visit From an Old Resident.

Mr. G. W. Bryant and his grandson, George Lee Bryant, of San Berardino, Cal. were in town yesterday and made a pleasant call at THE TIMES office. Mr. Bryant will be remembered by a few of the oldest of our inhabitants as he was a former Fultonian, coming here in the year 1840 he remained about five years being at one time in the furniture business on First street. He left Fulton for the west in 1845 and never returned until yesterday when he came to find but few of the residents of that date remaining and our streets so changed as to be scarcely recognizable. He announced himself as well pleased with the prosperous appearance of our village and the buildings which have taken the place of the land marks of forty-five years ago.

Mr. Bryant has lived in Calafornia for the past 38 years and considers it the best part of the United States in which to live.

Notice,

The Annual meeting of the stockholders of the Fulton & Oswego Falls Street Railway Company for the election of seven Directors and three Inspectors of Election for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting, will be held at the office of the company in the village of Fulton, Oswego county New York on the 25 day of Oct, 1887, at 12 o'clock, noon. Transfer books will close on the 20th day of Oct., and reopen on the 26th day of October, 1887.

CHARLES LYMAN, Secretary.

Some hail fell this morning, the first of the season. It soon turned into rain however which is something new for this month.

We do not care to have a fire break out this afternoon as the "fire laddies" are all in Baldwinsville. There is no one left to guide the hook and ladder truck.

The date that Henry George will lecture in Oswego is Thursday, October 27, and not the 29, as stated in last week's TIMES a special train will return to Fulton to convey those who attend from this village.

He leaves a wife who has the sympathy of all in her bereavement. The funeral was held from St. Paul's church Oswego, Monday, the 3d inst.

The remains of Albert Gardner arrived here Sunday morning from Buffalo, where he died Saturday of typhoid fever. He leaves a wife and five small children, a mother, two brothers and one sister Mrs. W. H. Hannan, to mourn his loss. His age was 39 years.

A number of old residents of the town have died within the past two weeks.

Dewitt Upson had some apples stolen from his orchard on Friday night.

Earl Brown is to teach the school at Clifford this winter.

Doctor Pardee was called and he asked her questions concerning her company, which led her to make a full confession to her sister. The sister went to Massachusetts, and on her return a few days ago measures were taken to procure a warrant.

Assistant District Attorney Stranahan of this village appeared Saturday for the people and Attorney Boyd of Oswego Falls for the prisoner. Bailey pleaded not guilty and was sent to the county jail to await his examination at 1 p. m., to-day.

The reason that no action had been taken before is said to be that the girl's stepmother, who is Bailey's sister, opposed it till her sister's return.

Mr. Eggleston Accepts.

FULTON, Sept. 21, 1887.

Charles S. Eggleston,

Sir:—At a District Phohibition Convention held August 16th. you was unanimously nominated for Member of Assembly for the 1st. Assembly District of this county.

W. L. WOODBURY, Chairman,
R. B. MCCULLY, Secretary.

FULTON, Sept. 28, 1887.

Gentlemen: Your favor imforming me officially of my nomination for Member of Assembly by the Prohibition convention, is received. Without the least ambition in the line of political preferment I shall be most happy to use my influence and serve in any capacity, to promote a cause which sooner or later must succeed. May the happy day, so long hoped for, hasten on when the dram-shop shall have no more a place among us, and the use of intoxicating beverages, the source of untold misery and crime, be among the things that have been.

Yours Respectfully,
CHAS. S. EGGLESTON.

To W.L.WOODBURY and R.B.MCCULLY.

Electric Light Companies Consolidate

The consolidation of the Westinghouse and Thomson-Houston Electric Light Companies foreshadows, it is alleged, a combination of several companies of the kind against Mr. Edison, who has recently been granted a patent for the multiple arc system of distribution. This patent, if sustained by the courts, will, it is said, give Edison absolute control of incandescent electric lighting, because it covers the distribution of power to a system of incandescent lamps from a common station. The several companies will be exposed to prosecution for infringement, and it is intimated that they intend to unite for common defense. A discussion of the matter discloses the fact that all the electric light companies doing business in Philadelphia, one excepted, are controlled by a Trust.—N. Y. Times.

[illegible]

[illegible] the consequence of the [illegible]

The Treasury statement for the month of September shows that there has been a decrease of $654,596 in the circulation of national bank notes, and an increase in the circulation of gold coin, standard silver dollars, subsidiary silver, gold and silver certificates, and United States notes—amounting in all to $22,894,901, the increase being largely in the gold coin. On October 1st the total circulation of all money was $1,358,485,690.

The political sensation of the season has been furnished by Civil Service commissioner Oberly, greatly to the surprise and annoyance of such Federal employes in this city as have organized themselves into State Associations for both political and social purposes, for the Commissioner virtually vetoes the existence of such societies, admonishing the members that they are violating the provisions of the civil service act, and that for so doing they are subject to fine, imprisonment and dismissal from the service.

Commissioner Oberly's ruling, just as might have been expected, is severely condemned by all spoilsmen, especially those of his own party—the Democracy. But, on the other hand, he is warmly applauded by civil service reformers and independent thinkers—the more so, because under the circumstances, such an advanced step on his part exhibited the highest degree of fidelity and moral courage.

At last there seems a probability of the settlement of the vexed issues between the United States and Canada, as the President has appointed for that important duty, a commission consisting of the Secretary of State and Messrs. Angell of Michigan, and Putnam of Maine. The Commissioners are fairly representative of the Northwest and East—the two sections of the country most vitally concerned in the controversy and besides, the commission is not of a partisan complexion—there being two Democrats and one Republican.

There are a few Congressmen—perhaps a baker's dozen—at the Capital; some are looking after the interests of their constituents who have a consuming desire to serve the country, and others the pipe laying and wire working for the approaching session of Congress, which, I am of the opinion, will be one of the most stormy and exciting in the history of the Government, as each party will strive to outdo the other in the manufacture of campaign capital.

I find the report of the Utah Commission will not be without popular interest and approval, as it shows satisfactory progress in extirpating the "twin relic" polygamy, under the rigid operations of the Edmunds act. Since the passage of this law in 1882, five hundred and forty-one persons have been indicted for the practice of the peculiar institution of the Mormons, and of this number two hundred and seventy-nine were convicted. The Commission condemns the movement for the statehood of Utah as a scheme to free the Mormon church from the rigorous execution of the law.

At the Metropolitan M. E. church, of the famous devine, the Rev. John P. Newman, is pastor, there was a dramatic and unusual scene last Sunday—the occasion being the denunciation in his sermon on "Infidelity" of the anarchists and socialists, which sentiments were greeted with great and vigorous applause from the great congregation.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

Sylvan Beach.

During next summer many improvements will be made at Sylvan Beach. Recently the officials of the New York, Ontario & Western railroad visited the place and made inspections and surveys for the purpose of constructing a long iron pier, to allow large steamers to land. It is almost impossible for any except small vessels to make a landing on account of the shallow water. Sylvan Beach has many advantages as a summer resort, and what is needs is permanent improvements to make it prosper.

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

UTICA, N. Y. Oct. 10.

The market to-day has been quite active, and there was a good demand all around. Shippers wanted fine cheese at these prices, and home traders were ready to bid against them up to any reasonable limit. September stock is all sold off all the way from the 15th to the 25th, but there were only three or four at these extremes, the bulk of the factories having sold down to the 19th and 20th only. It will take at least two more weeks to close out the September make on this market, although there will be some October cheese in the sales two weeks hence. The drouth still seems to effect our sales, as will be seen by comparing them with last year's—but not in an adverse way. The mild weather and continuance of good feed in the aftermath will make the October production count up will in the aggregate. Dairymen are taking pains in the manufacture. The improving price of butter will not affect the make of cheese much in this section. Following are the sales of the day:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
3	240	11c
62	5,897	11¼
3	190	11⅜
21	1,974	11½
14	1,189	11⅝
17	2,381	11¾
10	1,460	11⅞
1	140	12c
131	13,451
	1,534	Com.
Total	14,985

Ruling price, 11¼c. Transactions one year ago 9,422 boxes; ruling price, 11⅛c. Two years ago 14,182, ruling 10c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Oct. 10.

Cheese—At the start buyers were quite backward about naming prices, but claimed that they could not pay last week's figures, as they were not warranted by the state of the New York market. Some of the buyers who usually take large amounts had but light quantites; but there were enough others who came to the front and took the cheese, and as it finally turned out, at very nearly the same figures paid last Monday. The ruling to-day is 11¼c., the greater number of lots going at that price; but the larger number of boxes brought 11¾c. Buyers are discriminating closer than formerly, and a very slight defect is sufficient to knock off one-fourth cent in price. The weather continuing warm with so frequent rains, grass is unusually fine for the time of the year, and the yield is correspondingly good. Following are the transactions to-day:

Lots	Boxes	Price
7	638	11c
12	777	11¼
36	2,534	11½
1	99	11⅝
29	2,647	11¾
19	1,247	com.
104	7,942
Farm dairy	1,086
	9,028

Farm Dairies—Sales of farm dairy cheese, in which is included quite a number of the small factories, were larger than usual, 1,086 boxes changing hands. Prices ranged at 11 to 12c. Only one lot sold at 12c., the bulk going at 11¾c.

Butter.—Theere were 140 packages farm dairy butter sold at 21 to 23c, the bulk receiving 22c.; 25 packages of creamery went at 24c.

AT FULTON.

The cheese market has advanced ½c. the past week. One thousand eight hundred and forty-three boxes of cheese were offered from twenty-three factories, 1,128 boxes of which sold at 11¼c to 11½c., the balance being field over for next week. The price one year ago was 11½c.; two years ago 10c.

History of the U. S.

Bound in Leatherette Tree Calf.

Regular Price $2.00.

This dainty book of 320 pages is indispensable to every one as a work of quick and convenient reference. It is upon an entirely novel and original plan, which makes it indispensible to every person, no matter how many other histories he may have.

The arrangement is chronologically, by years, from 432 to 1887. Every event is narrated in the order of its date. These are not confined, as in other works, to political matters, but embrace every branch of human action. It described under its proper date all important patents; all discoveries in science and the useful arts; fires, floods, hailstorms, tornadoes, cyclones, epidemics, accidents and disasters on sea and land; labor troubles, strikes and lockouts, and hundreds of other matters never mentioned by historians. Besides being a history in the ordinary sense, it is a condensed newspaper file for four hundred years. Over 100,000 copies were presented to subscribers during 1886, and every one who received a copy was charmed and delighted.

Hist'ry of England

Bound in Leatherette Tree Calf.

Regular Price $2.00.

Thus, the second of THE WORLD'S History Series, is uniform in style and arrangement with its History of the United States. As a storehouse of facts it is without a rival. Every history of England has been carefully searched for data, and many important corrections have been made in the commonly received chronology. Like its companion volume, it is much more than an ordinary history, embracing every branch of human action, and its facts are gathered from thousands of sources not touched by any historian. Attention has been particularly directed to the Victorian era, and the dates of every important event of her reign are given with a minuteness of detail that renders it invaluable to every student of our own times. As a work of convenient reference for the editor, teacher, pupil and general newspaper reader, nothing like it has ever been published, and it will take the place in every library not only of the hundreds of books in which is scattered the information here gathered together, but of files of newspapers for the past century. The History of England is a little larger than the History of the United States

Everybodys Guide.

Bound in Leatherette Tree Calf.

Regular Price $2.00.

This is uniform in style and binding with the histories, but a much larger book than either, containing 410 closely printed pages of fine type. It is a condensation, by the author, of Moore's "Universal Assistant," containing everything making that work so popular, and omitting only such of the business forms and illustrations as added to the bulk without increasing its usefulness. The "Universal Assistant" originally sold for $10, and has become almost as necessary in every household as a dictionary or a clock. The value of the work lies in the fact that the information is of the kind needed in ordinary daily life, yet cannot be obtained without reference to rare and costly books, and is not found in encyclopædias. It tells the housewife how to make fresh extracts, the husband how to break well or mend ailing horses. It reveals the secrets of the dyer and bleacher, of the grocer and confectioner, and of all special trades. A table of contents would fill six columns of THE WORLD. The binding is leatherette tree calf of a slightly different design, both in the "tree" and the gilt, from the histories.

"Uncle Tom."

The play of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" may be a chestnut so old that it is gray headed but it is the kind of chestnut that the managers of the opera house like to have here as it draws out large crowds and gives excellent satisfaction. Last evening it drew to the opera house a crowd so large that to compare it with some of the select audiences that are accustomed to attend the best concert or lecture entertainments that the country produces is enough to make the walls of the opera house blush with shame.

But "Uncle Tom" is good and we like to have it come here once a year (there is no question but what it will from now until the time that our children become gray headed) especially if it is given by as excellent a company as presented it last evening.

[illegible] apostle of temperance after whom the societies are named, Father Mathew, and this custom will, it is hoped, continue for many years to come for it is an occasion when all come together and in addition to having an enjoyable evening they receive words of encouragement from the faithful young priest Father Earley, under whose leadership their organizations were established, and hear of the good work that they have done during their existance and what has been accomplished during the year that has just passed by.

The entertainment on Monday evening was delayed until nearly nine o'clock owing to the fact that the leaders did not return from the banquet which was held at Oswego Falls until that hour.

Miss Frances Bogue, the skillful young musician, who has received instruction in one of the best musical institutions in the country presided at the piano. Bogue's orchestra was also present.

The exercises were opened by a few words of welcome by Father Earley announcing that the St. Louis band of Oswego, the members of which, had kindly volunteered their services for the occasion, would open the evening's entertainment. They were in a body in the gallery and played one of their selection in an acceptable manner. Miss Maggie Darby sang a song in a pleasant manner and was followed by Miss Gertie Skinner, a captivating young miss of about thirteen summers who rendered "Rock Aby Baby" for which she received great applause. Next was a selection by the St. Louis band. Dr. Spencer of New York city was then introduced and read a portion of Sheridan's play "The Rivals."

Anna Martell of Syracuse who has before shown to a Fulton audience her ability, was announced, and the mention of her name was sufficient to bring forth the wildest applause. She sang "The Flower Girl" and in response to the encore which she received rendered a song and dance in a very pleasing manner. Miss Nellie Healey of Oswego, another favorite with Fultonians recited "Bingen on the Rhine" and the audience was not satisfied until she again appeared and recited for them a comic recitation. A selection from a quartet consisting of Messrs. Cooper, Perkins, Hoff and Coit was then rendered which was followed by an address of about half an hour duration by Father Earley. He spoke words of encouragement to the members of his societies, asked for the co-operation of others than members of his church to endeavor to overcome the evil influences of the saloon and urged upon the law and order league to make another strenuous effort to see that the liquor laws, especially Sunday laws were enforced. His remarks were productive of much good. By request Attorney Boggs of Oswego made a short but eloquent speech which closed the evening's entertainment.

[illegible] crop is almost a failure [illegible]

[illegible] is to have two experiment stations.

[illegible] crop of the south is unprecedentedly large.

The Louisiana sugar crop is reported to be [illegible] of every crop since the war.

[illegible] apples are expected outside of New England and New York.

The honey production the present season is reported generally to be a poor one.

The best time for pruning fruit trees is from October to March—the period of rest.

In no other animal is the matter of market value more positively affected by breeding than in the horse.

The average farmer should not try to breed fast stock.

There is no surer path to financial success than that of raising good draft horses.

The farmer who would make a success of horse raising must raise the horse the market demands.

According to Bradstreet's the New York hop crop will be about one-half of a former average, but the Pacific coast promises a larger yield.

To raise a horse which can make 2:30 time is not within the reach of most farmers. But something better is within their reach—to raise horses worth $230 each.

The first amputation of a horse's leg on record is reported from the Norman Barnard stock farm in Pennsylvania. A valuable brood mare broke her leg twice, and to save the foal the leg was amputated.

An experiment in feeding 18 head of stock cattle with 12 lbs. of hay, 85 lbs. of turnips and 9 lbs. of wheat bran per head daily, and also the same amount of hay and roots but with different kinds of grain, resulted in the lowest cost of production on the bran ration. This was at the Ontario agricultural college.

An English tenant farmer of large experience says the most frequent cause of dissatisfaction with live stock, where dissatisfaction exists, is due to an effort to reach results through a large number of inferior animals maintained on scant or inferior keep.

It is believed that "if a hen lays one egg a week for a year it will pay for her food, and every egg additional is clear profit. If a hen lays three eggs a week she will give double the profit derived from a hen that lays two eggs. The greater the number of eggs the cheaper the cost of production in proportion."

Sowing Wheat.

The manner in which wheat is sown is of vital importance, for its influence is felt to a great extent right on to the harvesting of the crop. An all important matter is the thorough preparation of the seed bed. That it pays to carefully prepare the soil for wheat has been proven time and again, and yet not one field in ten is properly stirred and pulverized before the seed is sown. Remember that it is impossible in the care of wheat to make the soil too mellow or too fine. All work done in this direction is amply paid for by the future crop.

It also pays to drill in the seed, even if one has to hire the drill. It insures the even droping and covering of the seed, and is a saving of seed. Avoid the use of foul or imperfect seed; it is a waste of time, labor and land to sow wheat that has not been carefully screened and winnowed to free it from foreign and imperfect seed. In sections where smut is likely to appear avail yourself of such preventive measures af treating the seed to brine or a solution of vitriol.

Each farmer must decide in great measure the question as to what variety of wheat to sow. It is not a safe plan to make an entire change in any one season, and especially where the previous yields have proven fairly satisfactory. A safe rule is to sow the soil devoted to the main crop in some well tested seat in your own locality, and experiment with promising new sorts on a new scale. A bushel of good, clear seed, drilled in, is considered an ample quantity for one acre by many farmers. The usual rule is from one bushel to five pecks, drilled in, and one-half bushel more sown broadcast.

Man's Share of Animal Lives.

After the animals were created they thanked God for it and asked him what their fate was to be. When they learned that they were to labor and suffer for 30 years they each prayed to live a shorter time and 10 years was deducted in the case of the ass, the dog, and the ape. When man was created and learned that he was to live but 20 years he begged for 100, and finally the Creator gave him the 30 years which the animals just named had refused. Hence man's first 20 years are his happy ones; then comes labor and the ass's 10 years; afterwards children and domestic cares, and the 10 years of the dog's life; and at last the children marry and abandon their father, and then comes the ape's 10 years. "After 50 what is more is life to thee. He who has had his had."—Usi E. Costumi Adruzzei.

The estate of the late ex-Senator Cilley, of Nottingham, N. H., is valued at $135,000, of which one-fourth is to be devoted to charitable purposes. The deceased Senator was a power in New England politics a third of a century ago.

Isaac Jeans, a Philadelphia Quaker, who has made a fortune of $3,000,000 as a fruit importer, began his business career by selling oranges and apples at retail.

"No?" said George. "[illegible]?"

"Why, don't you [illegible] the baby can talk! Yes sir, actually talk! He's said ever and ever so many things. Come right into the nursery and hear him."

George went in.

"Now, baby," said mamma, persuasively "talk some for papa. Say, 'How do you do, papa?'"

"Goo, goo, goo, goo," says baby.

"Hear him!" shrieks mamma, ecstatically. Wasn't that just as plain as plain can be?"

George says it is and tries to think so too.

"Now say 'I'm glad to see you papa.'"

"Da, da, boo, bee, boo."

"Did you ever?" cries mamma. "He can just say everything. Now, you precious little honey bunny boy, say 'Are you well, papa?'"

"Boo, ba, de, goo, goo."

"There it is," said mamma. "Did you ever know a child of his age who could really talk as he does? He can just say anything he wants to, can't you, you own dear little darling precious, you?"

"Goo, goo, dee, dee, di, goo."

"Hear that? He says 'Of course I can,' just as plain as anybody could say it. Oh, George, it really worries me to have him so phenomenally bright. These very brilliant babies nearly always die young.—Tid Bits.

Beautiful Alaska.

We reached our greatest northing at 60° in Dyna bay on the commodious steamer Olympian, having for master the jolly and attentive Captain Carroll, who has refused half a million dollars for his undeveloped gold mine on Douglas island, which is one of the eleven thousand islands we got, when on Oct. 18, 1867, we paid Russia $7,200,000 for Alaska with its 580,000 square miles of this earth's surface. These figures help one to appreciate that Alaska means large grand, important. We reach our greatest westing at 136° 10 west longitude in Glacier bay, and should have had to stretch our eyes thousands of miles to sight our western boundery. How shall any one describe the glories of the inland passage, with snow-capped islands on the main, and islands on the opposite side, rising often to the snow line, staying the mighty Pacific from rocking one's steamer; a twelve day's trip and a total course of 2,300 miles from and return to Tacoma, Washington territory? Many a scene is like the Hudson at the Highlands, and many other like the Ægean sea skirting the coast of Asia Minor, and still others like Switzerland's most beautiful mountain-bound lakes; while the general combination, making a succession of beauties and sublimities, is purely Alaskan. Those who contentedly tuck themselves in their little beds along the Atlantic can have no idea of the republican magnificance of our beloved country as she stretches across the continent and reaches her fingers to Asia.—Correspondence to New York Tribune.

Old Probabilities."

"Uncle Jack," said a city market butcher to an old colored whitewasher the other day, "you know the weather pretty well, don't you?"

"Yes, sah."

"What kind of a winter do you think we'll have?"

"Well, sah, dat same question war' axed me yesterday, accompanied by a gift of ten cents, an' I predicted a werry mild winter. Howsumeber, as you haven't—"

"Here's a dime, Uncle Jack."

"Ah! thanks. It's gwine to be mild, sah—werry Mild. Yes—we'll have summer all winter, sah."—Detroit Free Press.

We are willing to bear special testimony to the efficacy and value af Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we have been advertising some years in our paper, having used it for blood impurities with great success. It is a preparation of standard merit, made of perfectly pure ingredients, and thoroughly effective in cleansing and purifying the system. For eruptions, boils, etc., it can be relied upon every time. Our own experience with it has been most gratifying, and we are glad to give it this endorsement.—Athol (Mass.) Transcript.

Death on Birds.

The statue of Liberty has innocent blood on its hands. It is responsible for the daily slaughter of immense numbers of little birds which in winging their way south on their annual migration are attracted by the brilliant electric light of the big torch. One morning recently, no less than 1,500 of the poor creatures were picked up and their condition indicated that they had dashed themselves against Liberty's bronze bosom and had been thrown crushed and lifeless at her feet.

October.

BY EVA J. [illegible]

Hail, all hail to thee, October!
[illegible] month in all the year!
[illegible] harvest, fruit and frost flower,
Painted leaf and sky so clear!
Red and crimson are thy banners,
Floating through the forest halls,
While o'er meadow, wood and lakelet
Now the amber sunshine falls.

O'er the brown and mossy fences
See the nimble squirrel jump!
Treasures for his winter storehouse
Make his cheeks so full and plump.
Golden rod and scarlet berry
Fringe the roadside all the way;
Silvered fern and purple aster
Mingled with their colors gay.

Grapes in thick and purple clusters
Peep from out the frost-nipped leaves,
Golden pumpkins in the corn fields
Lie among the ripened sheaves.
Apples from the laden branches
Bending o'er the garden wall,
Rosy cheeked and russet coated
In the yellow grasses fall.

THE PROPER THING.

Jet and gold are combined in the trimming of bonnets.

Embroidered velvet is a special feature of dress bonnets.

Embroidery is a great feature of millinery at present.

Wider ribbons are used for bows and also for strings for bonnets.

English round hats will be worn by young ladies this fall and winter.

Black stockings will remain in favor for general use during the winter.

Waists remain short on the hips; full vests of various kinds are very popular.

The new fabrics for fall wear are soft cashmeres, cloths, and camel's-hair goods.

The crowns of round hats are low and the trimming is often set at the side or back.

Felt and velvet hats for misses in the sailor shapes turn up in the back or with straight rims.

The most dressy wraps for winter will be long cloaks of plush and fine cloth embroidered or braided.

Jerseys of wool and silk are worn, but are no longer plain, the preferences being for gathered waists of various kinds.

Drap d'ete which was popular for wraps a dozen years ago, is seen again in dresses combined with heavier goods.

The most noteworthy change in the general make up of costumes is the use of more draperies at the sides, a tendency to fuller skirts and toward extremely high draperies at the back.

An odd fancy in stockings is to wear two pair, the outer one being of silk net, with broad meshes. Red net is worn over black silk stockings, blue over gray and pink and heliotrope over white. For those in mourning come black net ones, to be worn over under-stockings of white.

IT IS WELL TO REMEMBER—

That slander, like mud, dries and falls off.

That to wait and be patient soothes many a pang.

That all are not princes who ride with the emperor.

That correction is good when administered in season.

That it takes a great deal of grace to be able to bear praise.

That you will never have a friend if you must have one without failings.

That to have what we want is riches, but to be able to do without is power.

That there is no limit to the age at which a man make a fool of himself.

That the roses of pleasure seldom last long enough to adorn the brow of those who pluck them.

That a man who cannot mind his own business is not to be trusted with the business of others.—Good Housekeeping.

Cruel But Kind.

Newspaper men often seem cruel when they are most kind. The fact isn't always recognized, but an agreeable exception is noted by the Binghamton Republican:

Caller (in newspaper office)—Twenty years ago I wrote a poem.

Editor—Yes?

"I brought it to this office, and you refused to publish it."

"Very likely."

"I remember that I mentally put y u down then as a confounded idiot, who didn't know enough to ache when hurt."

"Naturally."

"I looked that poem over again the other day, and have come to see you about it."

"Aha!"

"I have come to say that if I looked as green twenty years ago as that poem proves me to have been, I want to thank you because you didn't cut me up and feed me to the cows. Good day."

The editor drew a long chalk mark under the table. It was the first case in all his experience in which twenty years had begotten sense enough to understand that it is something necessary to be cruel to be kind.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam, for Coughs and Colds, does it is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle Free, that they may try it before purchasing. The Large Bottles are 50c. and $1.00. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you [illegible]

THE WORLD'S RICHEST WOMEN.

It is settled, I suppose, that the Donna Isadora Cousina is coming to New York as soon as the season is fairly opened this winter. If she does the city will have a sensation and one that it appreciates.

The Chilian money queen never does anything by halves. She proposes to take a house, furnish it as few houses in New York has ever been furnished, and it is in the air that she means to show how unlimited cash can entertain. She can teach a lesson or two in in that art if she tries. She is a learned professor and money fetches New York every time.

The Senora Cousina is something more than the richest women in the world. She has one of the biggest fortunes held by either sex, possibly the largest on the western continent. She is unless the last season or two has faded her greatly, something of a beauty. She is a great deal of an eccentric and not a little of a genius. She has astonished pretty nearly all the capitals of Europe in their turn, and she cannot rest on her laurels without astonishing New York, too.

The Donna Isadora is not much short of 40, but she looks younger. She is rather above medium hight and dresses to look tall. Her figure is graceful but her big dark eyes are her taking feature. Her skin is a Spanish brown with a dash of red under it, and she has quantities of dark hair. She is one of the best dressed women in the world in an Imperial sort of way, and with a daring use of color. I doubt if there is anywhere a private jewel collection to equal hers. She wears more stones at a time than is usual with people who haven't so many and who live in North American latitudes.

No more clever business woman exists. She inherited cattle, married mines, and now a widow, has gone into every money producing enterprise in which Chili, the most progressive of southern republics, has engaged. She is the biggest real estate owner in Santiago and Valparaiso. She has furnished the capital for manufacturing enterprises. She has started art potteries. She has built a railroad and runs two lines of iron steamships. South American fortunes are hard to estimate, but many people have put hers above $200,000,000. Money multiples fast in her hands, her eye is everywhere.

There was a young man, the son of one of her cousins, I believe, whom shesent to a New England college some years ago. South Americans by the way, have a fancy for New England schools. The young man was fairly clever, very good looking, not at all studious, had plenty of money and was a great favorite. Shortly after the beginning of a term he left school abruptly, so the tale went, by a whim of his rich relative.

Some magnificent rubies that she had many times coveted had been offered sor sale, had gone on the market without her knowledge. He was to hunt out the buyer, trace the gems, and get them for her at any price. The rubies were some of Eugenie's—it is odd how the ex-empress' gems, laces and poodle dogs turn up everywhere—and they were in New York before he reached the other side. A would-be swell dame had paid a good many thousands for them, and the scion of the southern princess posted back again, got an introduction to the house, flattered the good lady, told her the predicament he was in, offered her a choice of all the jeweler stores in creation at any figure, and, in short, got the rubies, delivered them in person, and saved his prospects in life, and Donna Isadora's good graces.

There are two slender, graceful daughters, somewhere in their teens, who will come out in New York, and high times are ahead. Mother and girls speak the purest English, as all Chillians do. The Senora is a tropical creature and, if all tales of her are true, subject to cyclones.

There is not a other woman in America who has money in her own name to compare with the Donna Isadora's, though rich women are not few.

Hettie Green is credited with being the most of a capitalist of her sex in the United States. Her wealth would foot up from $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 I suppose. She inheirited $18,000,000 married $1,000,000, and has made the rest by shrewd financiering.

Another clearheaded woman is Miss Elizabeth Garrett, who must have $20,000,000 or more and knows how to take care of it. She was her father's private secretary for years, and understands Baltimore & Ohio stock as well as anybody. Miss Garrett is not as rich as she would be if she was less charitable. She never flings money away recklessly, but expends large sums with discrimination and good sense on educational and philanthrophic objects.

Mrs. Mark Hopkins is richer than Miss Garrett, through her neighbors, the village folk, are less enthusiastic about her than they used to be before she put up a high fence or Chinese wall about that $2,000,000 palace of hers at Great Barrington. Mrs. Hopkins is not worth less than $80,000,000 or $85,000,000 probably, and she too is noted for her charity.

Mrs. Emily H. Moir, the heir of the Morgan property pays the largest personal assessment of any woman in New York, and Mrs. Sarah H. Green comes next to her.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor has a tidy little of from $1,200,000 to 2,000,000. [illegible] New York widows estimated [illegible] are not poor. Miss May Callandar must be worth a million.

The Misses Leary and the Misses Furnies of Fifth avenue have large incomes. Miss Adele Grant, who has been starring it with Miss Winslow for foil, has $700,000 or more. Mrs. Langtry has got above the $100,000 mark. Mrs. John John Mintern has money. Miss Grace H. Dodge has a fortune of her own. Mrs. Frank Leslie must have $1,000,000. Mrs. Hicks-Lord has several millions.

The are some married women in New York who have private fortunes. Whitelaw Reid got his money with D. O. Mills' daughter and Mayor Hewitt his with Peter Cooper's daughter.

A rich New Englander is Mrs. Sutton, of Peabody Mass. Her husband left her with $2,000,000. She has made it not far from $6,000,000. She has not had a happy life, for the one son on whom she set her heart broke his collar bone half a dozen times falling from ottomans and chairs and finally broke his neck falling from a Shetland pony. She has endowed a magnificent library, founded by George Peabody, and her boy's picture framed in gold hangs on it's walls.

Mrs. Frederick Lenoir of Springfield, is another "Bay State" woman, owning perhaps $4,000,000. Agazziz's daughter, Mrs. Shaw of Boston, is made wealthy by her husband's gifts, and supports great numbers of free kindergartens.

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

Keep salt in a dry place and cheese in a tin box.

Matches should always be kept in a stone or earthen jar, or in tin.

Common cheese cloth makes an excellent strainer for acid fruits.

Eating onions and horseradish is claimed to relieve dropsical swellings.

A paste of plaster of paris and water will fasten on the brass cover to an inkstand.

A cloth wrung out of cold water and wound around the neck is said to be good for a sore throat.

It is claimed by some housewives that a little kerosene added to boiled starch will impart a nice gloss.

Nothing better can be applied to a severe cut or bruise than cold turpentine; it will give relief almost instantly.

Lime water is good for chilblains. Use strong and hot. A saturated solution of alum in water, used hot, is also a curative.

An excellent salve for bruises is the following: Take leaves of catnip and bruise with salt pork in a mortar, or with a rolling pin. If applied to flesh wounds and bruises of any kind, it will at once ally the inflammation.

If you have pictures hanging against an outer wall, protect them from any possible damp by covering the backs with sheet lead, or else keep them from contact with the wall by corks fastened on the lower ends of the frames.

Stains of fruit on good table linen can be removed without injury by using the following with care: Pour boiling water on chloride of lime, in the proportion of one gallon to a quarter of a pound, bottle it, cork it well, and in using be careful not to stir it. Lay the satin in this for a moment, then apply white vinegar and boil the table linen.

Many people think a baby is born only to swallow nasty medicine for months until some thoughtful friend tells them of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup.

Use Laxador for the distress and discomfort resulting from indigestion and be relieved at once. This wonderful remedy is sold by all druggists.

It is said that the Potomac Flats have been almost reclaimed. Why not begin at once on the New York dudes?—Burlington Free Press.

The New York authorities show too much partiality. They have ordered the monkey to be banished from the streets of the city, but permit the dudes to remain.—Norristown Herald.

It is not uncommon for a fashionable young man to live beyond his means; but when a dude lives beyond the means of his mother he must marry, or come to want.—New Orleans Picayune.

A Little Hustler Gets a Job.

A lawyer friend tells me he advertised for an office boy a few days ago and as usual got a big bundle of answers. He got fairly well tired reading the various creditable things the young aspirants had to say of themselves, but finally he struck a letter that really rested him. It was written on a very much soiled and crumpled piece of paper that had never been very white and read about as follows:

"I am 12 years old. I hain't got no father nor mother. I'm an orphan and I've got to hustle. [illegible]"

THE DOCTORS ON LIQUOR.

Its Indiscriminate Use Earnestly Condemned.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—During the session of the International Medical Congress in this city, the ladies of the local W. C. T. U. circulated among the doctors, for their signatures, a declaration upon the alcoholic liquor question as related to medical practice. The declaration was prepared in the office of The Voice at New York and put into circulation at the instance of the editor of the paper. Mrs. Sarah D. La Fetra, President of the W. C. T. U., says that the delegates signed willingly, and that had the paper been started earlier, hundreds of signatures could have been obtained. The list is headed by Dr. Davis, the President of the Congress, and among the 78 signatures are those of some foreigners.

The following is the declaration:

"In view of the alarming prevalence and ill effects of intemperance, with which none are so familiar as members of the medical profession, and which have called forth from eminent physicians all the world over the voice of warning concerning the use of alcoholic beverages, we the undersigned, members of the International Medical Congress, unite in the declaration that we believe alcohol should be classed with other powerful drugs; that, when prescribed medicinally, it should be with conscientious caution, and a sense of grave responsibility.

"We are of opinion that the use of alcoholic liquor as a beverage is productive of a large amount of physical disease; that it entails diseased appetites upon offspring; and that it is the cause of a large percentage of the crime and pauperism of our cities and country.

We would welcome any judicious and effective measures which would tend to confine the trafic to the legitimate purposes of medical and other sciences, art and mechanism."

Other People's Thoughts.

A good conscience is the finest opiate.

What is woman? Only one of nature's agreeable blunders.

You cannot dream yourself into a character; you must hammer and forge yourself one.

There is never an end; it is always a going on; and God's mercy is beyond, always.

Every man is in some sort a failure to himself. No one ever reaches to the heights he aspires.

Things are unbearable just until we have them to bear. The possibility comes with them, for we are not the roots of our own being.

Do to-day's temptation, and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things which you cannot see, and could not understand if you saw them.

A man never gets over the influences of an early Christian home. It hold him in an eternal grip. Though his parents may have been gone forty years the tears of penitence and gladness that were wept at the family altar still glitter in his memory.

The situation that has not its duty its idea, was never yet occupied by man. Yes, here is this poor, miserable, hampered, despicable Actual, wherein thou even standest, here or nowhere is thy Ideal; work it out therefrom; and working believe, live, be free.—Carlyle.

Julian Ralph, after discussing at considerable length different aspect of the entrance of women into business, sums up the effect thus: "Woman is losing nothing except what leaves her better off, and man is losing only the doll wife and servant wife of old, and getting a companion wife in her place.

Love thy neighbor as thyself, and when you see one with a bad cough advise him to buy a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cents a bottle.

There is nothing in the world which will give prompter relief to all sufferers from neuralgia than Salvation Oil. Price only 25 cents a bottle.

Quite an Establishment.

The demand for diamonds and other costly goods at Tiffany's does not look like a money stringency. Reader, think of a store where you can invest the price of a farm in an article that you can carry in your vest pocket, and where transactions of this kind are a matter of constant occurence! If you are, however, disposed to be economical, you can also be gratified, for at the same establishment you can buy a shaving cup for $100 and other utensils in proportion. This is certainly very accommodating. The Tiffanys have just celebrated their semi-centennial. They began in a small shop on Broadway, opposite the city hall, which then was the centre of fashionable trade. They started on a capital of $1,000, and now they have nearly twenty times that amount in one piece of jewelry. Their present capital, in fact, is $3,000,000, and their stock in trade is, of course, a much larger amount. Their profits are enormous, for they deal with a class that can pay whatever may be asked without feeling it. When a necklace is sold for $10,000 the profit will range from $1,000 to double that amount; and by the same rule, when a $15,000 article is sold the profit will probably be $3,000. Hence, reader, when you have lots of money to throw away you will know the place where it can be done. The Tiffanys are now doing a larger business than ever. No one ever hears of hard times in a concern whose splendid baubles from so large a part of that dazzling show which comes under the notice of—The Herald, of New York.

Some Questions Answered About the Tortilita Mines.

Since the recent article descriptive of the great Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Company and their properties in Arizona appeared in The Evening Post, the publishers of that paper have been deluged with inquiries from all parts of the country, concerning the integrity of the company and with requests for "inside information" respecting the value of the company's property. It is probably neither singular nor strange that the average newspaper reader should inquire closely into enterprises which offer such remarkable advantages as the Tortilita company presents, and we are glad to be able to re-assure all inquirers and others interested in this interesting subject.

The publishers of The Post enjoy a personal acquaintance with Joseph H. Reall, President and active manager of the Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Company, and know him to be an honorable gentleman. We have had business transactions, first and last, with the Tortilita company, through Mr. Reall, amounting in the aggregate to many hundreds of dollars, and his obligations to us have always been paid to the last dollar. We have the fullest confidence in his integrity and ability, either personally or as representing the Tortilita company, to perform faithfully whatever contract he may seek to make.

In regard to the company's mining properties there is no "inside information" to give. The facts are all known. The Tortilita group of mines contain a vast deposit of gold and silver ore. They have for some time been under development in a small way; that is, with two or three hand-windlasses and a five-stamp mill. In this crude way they have produced enough of the precious metals to more than pay all expenses and prove their great value. The company is now contracting for suitable hoisting machinery, and negociating for the purchase of two or three twenty-stamp mills, which will multiply the present producing capacity of the mines ten times without largely increasing expenses. To pay for these important and extensive improvements, they are selling a quantity of stock—a sensible and wise proceeding.

The management of the Tortilita have introduced a new feature in marketing mining stock, by giving their enterprise the widest publicity through the press, and thus courting the closest investigation of their property. The practicability of this and the wisdom of their course is apparent, as the shares are only offered by subscription for investment.

That is all that can or need be said about it—except that the company will be making five or six thousand dollars a day as soon as they get their fifty or sixty stamps in operation, and that then the company's stock will probably be obtainable only for many times the price that it is on the market for to-day.

This brief statement, made without the knowledge of the company, is a concise answer to the average letter of inquiry which reaches the office of The Post by every mail. If its publication proves useful to the public or the Tortilita company, we shall be very glad, and both are quite welcome to any benefit which may accrue.—Hartford (Conn.) Post., Sept. 19, 1887.

The shares in the Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Company are two dollars each, in any sized lots, and are based on proven and developed property worth many times their value.

Gone But Not Forgotten.

This curious advertisement is going the rounds of the Utah papers: "Wanted, information of John Edmund Kettle, aged twenty-six, formerly of London, England, latterly of Salt Lake City by the undersigned, Marietta Kettle, Rosa V. "Misinterpreted messages sometimes play havoc with the hopes of telephone subscribers," said a down-town Central the other night. And then he told a story:

James G—— is an up-town livery stable man, and his best friend is Dr. J. B——. The doctor is something of a dog fancier and takes great interest in his pack of bird dogs. One of his canine pets is called Fanny, out of compliment to James G——'s wife, and the doctor had promised James the pick of her babies when she gives birth to a litter. It happened recently that at James' house active preparations were being made for the reception of an heir. A few days ago James was called to the telephone in his office. He thought the crisis in his domestic affairs had arrived. This is what he heard as he adjusted the receiver to his ear:

"Hello! Is that you, James?"

"Yes. Who are you?"

"Dr. B——. Are you busy?"

"Not particularly so. Can I do anything for you?"

"Yes. Come to the house as soon as possible. Triplets just born to Fanny—one white and two spotted. They're beau——"

But James had fallen in a fit.—Buffalo News.

A Stocking to Match His Hat.

"Have you any gentlemen's white hose?" asked a bride of three months, as she entered a dry goods store.

"What size, please?" asked the gentlemanly clerk.

"Size! Why, are there sizes for men's wear?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, I know that he wears a No. 7 hat; just give me a size to fit that."

The clerk probably wouldn't have laughed if the proprietor, who was standing near, hadn't started the chorus. During the confusion the woman escaped. She is better informed now.—Boston Beacon.

Boston Corbett.

The man who killed J. Wilkes Booth, Boston Corbett, has been declared hopelessly insane in St. Louis and a guardian has been appointed for him. Corbett obtained his Christian name in a curious way. Years ago he lived in Boston and became converted. He wished to join one of the Methodist churches, but he did not know what name to record, as he had never been baptized. He therefore secluded himself and prayed for instruction. Following out what he thought to be an inspiration, he assumed the name Boston, and has born it ever since.

Argonia, Kansas, is jubilant over the fact that Mrs. Salter, Mayor of that city, has given birth to a son.

REV. THEO. GERRISH

is recognized as the leading Methodist divine in Maine. He is now settled over a church in Biddeford. Some two years ago when residing in Bangor as pastor of the Pine street M. E. church, he engaged in temperance work, and at the same time issued two books "The Blue and the Gray," and "Reminiscences of the War." In performing his various duties as minister, lecturer and author, he overtaxed his powers, and became a victim of Kidney disease and was obliged to forsake pulpit platform and library. After experimenting with various physicians without benefit he took a trip to the West for his health but did not improve. Coming home he found some of his family in poor health which added to his daily cares and thereby aggravated his own troubles. Again he sought aid at the hands of the medical fraternity and again he met with bitter disappointment.

Some one suggested Brown's Sarsaparilla which is made where Mr. Gerrish then resided. He had "no faith in patent medicines," he said. The friend got a bottle however and Mr. Gerrish used it. It helped him. He took another and another, all the while being on the mending hand. In time he became well as did all the other members of his household, and such was the regard he entertained for Brown's Sarsaparilla as a powerful remedy for Kidney disease that he cheerfully allowed the use of his name and also sent in a testimonial of the facts. Mr. Gerrish resumed charge of his church work, the temperance work, and has since done much in the literary field, being strong of body and mind, and free from all forms of disease. Hundreds have been benefited by the use of

[illegible] - EDITOR

Father Earley and the Saloon.

Editor of The Fulton Times:

DEAR SIR:—The decided change effected by the energetic action of our honored President, Wm. Waugh, in regard to the closing of saloons prompts me to pen a word of encouragement and advice. Our temperance men have not buried their battle-axe, they do not praise to-day what they despised yesterday, they do not respect to-day what they abhorred heretofore, they look upon saloons as all good upright men do, with contempt for the traffic and pity for the victims of the traffic—with scorn upon the man who violate laws and make drunkards.

I treat them as the teachings of my church authorize me to treat transgressors of the law, with firmness, with fearless independence, with the sword of justice in hand, without hesitation when they deserve condemnation, with charity when they prove themselves susceptible of virtue and able to understand the calm voice of brotherly affection rather than the thundering denunciations of insulted and injured justice. What claim have they to our esteem when they entertain no respect for the laws of God and Man? They should not be molested in their traffic but their victims are allowed to injure their own health with vile poison and poison the existence of their families with misery and misfortune.

We must not censure them because we trespass on their personal liberty but we must sacrifice the public good, the general welfare, the peace and prosperity of our entire community that their sordid individual interest may be protected. We must not disturb them in their honorable business, in their honest life but allow them to fill their tills with filthy lucre to the detriment of our poor working people. Let us make laws for these would-be gentlemen to transgress with impunity. Let us improve our town and keep these public nuisances. Let us arrest the drunkard on Sunday and exhonorate the ginseller. Let us give them full sway and at election time emerging from their dens, they will be lords at the polls and control the vote of decent, honest, simple-minded citizens.

Saloon keepers, if you desire to renew your license or keep your places open, observe the excise laws, if you have not paid your license, beware! If you wish to leave your capital in the courts you will soon have an opportunity of so doing, if you have not forgotten how to respect laws, give a proof of your knowledge. You will be respected when you deserve respect and what a change must take place before a right-minded public can look upon you with the esteem granted otherwise. Men! Let our policemen heed the command of the President and fulfill their duties conscientiously. "Strike till the last armed foe expires."

Reader, please persue attentively the following remarks made by the Rev. C. A. Walworth, Catholic divine of Albany:

"It is the occasion now to find out whether God and law and order have friends as well as covetousness and drunkenness. In both of the great political parties in our state, the most respectable, and, as I think, the largest number, demand good order at all times, and if enjoyment is required, a quietness of enjoyment which is not to be found in the grogeries and beer saloons. The Republican party has shaken off the Prohibitionists, and will gain confidence and respect by the freedom from fanaticisms thus secured. The Democratic party has shaken of in a goodly degree, the greedy pigs of the party, and found that reform is not a mere by-word, but can be made to pay. Both parties should now shake off this big-bellied god Gambrinus, who boasts so loudly of controlling the German vote. Even Germans, respectable Germans will thank them for it; and they will gain more than they lose.

At all event the course for every true temperance man is plain. He should accept the challenge thus given and adopt the same plan of action. He should refuse to vote for any distiller, brewer, or saloon keeper, who is a candidate for office, or for any man who pledges himself to their peculiar interests, so profitable to themselves, so fatal to public morality. I hold it to be a duty for every friend of sobriety and good order of any party to scratch from his ticket the name of any candidate for the legislature whose vote is at the service of the liquor trade. Care should be taken to help no man into the office of governor, mayor, or other magistracy who is ready to abrogate the Sunday laws, or wink at their violation."

Now let us elect advocates of the liquor traffic—let us see our local politicians assembling in goodly numbers in the evening hours in certain grog shops, great and small to discuss the great problems of society. They talk and drink, and drink and become enthused until the thickened tongue refuses service and the inebrated sages staggering homeward congratulate themselves on having prepared a solid platform and a good foundation for society. Heaven protect us from the tyranny of drink.

The New Directory.

Mr. Samuel Parsons who is getting [illegible] directory of Fulton and Oswego [illegible] the canvass closed [illegible] Syracuse to give [illegible]

[illegible]

Mott and [illegible] into a house [illegible] of the amount [illegible]. These "bunco men" two in number, after securing the money of the Captain, went to Scriba from thence to Fulton then to Central Square, where all trace of them was lost. No clue being obtained, the daughter of Captain Williams acted the part of a detective and circumstances led her to suspect Prof. Heins of Philadelphia as the "bunco steerer" in the little game into which her father was inveigled. This gentleman had been a professor in the Sanveur school at Oswego during the summer.

The Professor was indicted and District Attorney Mead and Sheriff Beadle went to Albany, got requision papers, went thence to Philadelphia and found Prof. Heins, who voluntarily came to Oswego to face his accusers.

On Saturday morning the examination was made. Dr. Jones of Minetto and Rogers Slater of this village, who drove the men from Fulton to Central Square, declared that Heins was not the man. They were the two whose evididence was the most eagerly looked forward to. Captain Williams declared that he was the man that impersonated Mr. Mott and other witnesses thought that he resembled one of the men.

The District Attorney, Sheriff and others, think it a case of mistaken identity. The warrant was not served and Prof. Heins returned on Saturday night to his home in Philadelphia.

The fact that the firm is putting up monuments of this class in places the size of Fulton shows that they have a first-class reputation and are bound to succeed where firms in larger places fail.—Phœnix Register.

Fultonians at Baldwinsville.

The Fulton Fire Department accompanied by the Fulton Band, the Oswego Falls Department with the Hannibal Centre Band, Post Schenck G. A. R. with Drum Corp and Ellis' Zouaves were all represented in good numbers at Baldwinsville on Wednesday last at the unveiling of the Soldier's monument and a large number of Fultonians including many ladies.

The different organizations speak in high praise of the manner in which they were entertained. On reaching Baldwinsville they marched to the rink where coffee, sandwiches, cake &c. &c. were spread in profusion before them. After dinner they took part in the parade which was one of the largest ever seen in that village. After which the ceremonies of unveiling took place.

The monument cost $3,000. It is of white bronze containing 11,400 pounds of metal, is twenty-eight feet high and has a base seven feet square.

Burglary at Baldwinsville.

A daring burglary was committed in Baldwinsville early last Friday morning in S. C. Suydam's drug and jewelry store. The thieves blew open the safe and absconded with 40 gold watches, 60 silver watches, 60 customers' watches, gold and silver, all the gold and plated chains in the store, all the rings among which were six diamonds valued at $500, some valuable papers and about $100 in money. The whole loss is estimated at between three and four thousand dollars.

$500 reward has been offered for the discovery and capture of the thieves.

The following is the verdict recently rendered by the coroner's jury in the case of fireman Narey:

"We find that John Narey came to his death sometime during the night of October 3rd or the morning of October 5th, 1887, from injuries received by a collision in the yard of the R. W. & O. railroad. The collision was between engine No. 3. of the R. W. & O. road and engine No. 18 of the Ontario and Western. We further find that the N. Y. O. & W. railroad officials are guilty of gross negligence in not taking proper precautions on their part in running trains by special orders."

It is said this case will be investigated by the Railroad Commissioners.

HALL'S

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local treatment, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure now on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. [illegible]

[illegible]

What may be [illegible] clever piece of [illegible] work is the recent successful investigation by a member of the World's staff of the practices now in vogue in our city Insane Asylum. We have had expeditions to all parts of the habitable globe, conducted wholly or in part by newspaper men, but the World stands unrivaled in its successful inquiry into the secrets, the practical workings, of our present insane asylum system.

The plan was an ingenious one. Stripped of all its many complications, was simply for one of its lady reporters to gain by feighing insanity, a commitment to the Blackwell's Island Insane Asylum, there to stay ten days and then faithfully and truthfully report what took place. These reports have occupied more than twenty columns of space in the issues of the past two Sundays. Under the name of Nellie Brown, the reporter whose name as appended to the report appears to be Nellie Bly, feigned insanity in a working woman's house on the east side, was brought before Justice Duffy; then before an ambulance physician, taken to Bellevue, there examined by supposed competent insanity experts and transferred to Blackwell's Island. The barbaric cruelty, the insufficient food, the incapable and brutal nurses and the positively uncivilized treatment, which she with others as charity patients received, presents a picture as revolting to this age of supposed philanthropy as one can hardly imagine. The tale is told plainly, honestly. One expects to find that woman would treat woman with some courtesy, but these inmates were regarded by the nurses as simply human cattle to be beaten, herded, fed and watered as if they had committed some grave crime against society rather than objects of humanity, to be helped if possible, to be treated kindly always. One finds no instance in all "Nellie Bly's" story of any attempt on the part of the physician to determine the extent of the insanity or the possibility of a cure. Only inhumanity and neglect is the burden of the story.

When I read the story, for it has been one of the wonders of the day—I was asked if I believed it. "Well I do" I replied. I have reason for believing. Some years ago I was invited to visit Ward's Island, the place where the commissioners of emigration care for the destitute emigrants. The invitation came from a friend who then had charge of the telegraph office on the Island. He obtained permission for me to see the different buildings and I was allowed to wander around at my own sweet will. Of course many of the inmates of these buildings were absolutely poor in their native land and the food and accommodations provided were palatial to what they had in their former homes over the ocean, but there were many who knew the insufficiency of what was provided. I saw much that under other circumstances I would not have seen. The attendants, the inmates, were not specially remarkable for their intelligence. The Insane Hospital showed me those who were as sane as I was, but because the fiat had gone forth were kept for no other earthly purpose than to do the servant's work for keepers, doctors and nurses. There are those in these public institutions who are undoubtedly insane, but some better system for their care ought to be put in vogue. There is not a place, not a position either of doctor, nurse, attendant, or keeper which does not represent the reward for political service of some sort, while the commissioners are but the confirming agents of the two political bosses of Tammany and the county Democracy. The World has done a work of great value and deserves, as it is sure to get, the support and commendation of all honest citizens.

There now lies in state in City Hall the body of a famous, brilliant and dashing war general who filled the public eye as the beau ideal of soldierly, manly beauty and ability and who in the discharge of his duty to his country died from his native land. I refer to Judson L. Kilpatrick, the cavalry leader of a famous division in Sherman's army. I doubt if any man after Grant, Sherman or Sheridan could arouse public enthusiasm more than Gen. Kilpatrick. His home in New Jersey was practically a big camp ground. His G. A. R. friends never called upon him in vain, while his presence at any of the G. A. R. gatherings was at once a signal for most tumultuous applause. As a campaign speaker Kilpatrick was at his best. In the campaign of 1880, during the heat of the contest, he made two or three addresses in this city and those were I think the last he made here. As a speaker his stage presence had much to do with his success. Kilpatrick was a large, handsome man. I remember seeing him on horseback several times and he looked every inch a soldier. The peculiar power he possessed as a speaker came from the sharp, witty, cutting comparisons he was apt to make. He had a strong, full, sonorous voice that completely filled the hall and gave his statements a weight that proved convincing. After the inauguration of the lamented Garfield, Gen. Kilpatrick was made Minister to Chili where he died soon after reaching his official residence. His remains lie in state under the guard of his companions in arms.

Strange isn't it that the utterances of one man should knock down values to the extent of millions of dollars! Yet that's the case.

In the mysterious economy of Wall street the terms bull and bear are simply synonymous of two classes of men. One who constantly fears the presence of a panic, who never see through any other atmosphere than that of gloomy, foggy, misty uncertainty of a general break-up. [illegible]

[illegible] "It's an ill wind that blows no one good," for it enabled the Vanderbilts to increase their holdings at a much reduced market figure.

But all this has a lesson. It shows how fluctuating, mercurial and unreliable Wall Street values are. A clique of men by suddenly dumping a large holding that cost them originally nothing, or nearly so, can depress the price and buy up the whole available lot, or on the other hand a clique can by proper managing so secure the outstanding lots of stock as to make deliveries on contracts impossible and render the value fictitious. Shares have a value definite and fixed, but the watering which many companies have been subjected to has rendered this value very difficult to determine.

Four New York morning dailies have their evening issues. The first of these was the Herald, which issued the Telegram. A few months ago came the Evening Sun; then the Star came out with its evening edition, and lastly the World has thrown on the mercies of the reading public an evening sheet. If over a hundred thousand copies is evidence of its success then the Evening World is a success.

An evening paper is a peculiar feature of journalism. The news is always in brief, well written and readable. But something more is demanded. It is the peculiarities of city life which the evening papers seek to portray. In this particular the Sun and the World are a success. They give little sketches of the little happenings which city street life show and in that are in a very large measure filling up a want which the reading public seems to feel.

WANDERER.

Sad Result of a Boy's "Trip."

George Copeman the ten year old son of Edward Capeman of Rochester was detected reading a Lakeside library book by his school teacher last Friday afternoon and fearing that he would be punished ran away from home. While walking on the track near Manlius, he says he heard a train coming and climbed upon a pile of ties. They rolled over on the track and he had part of his foot taken off. He crawled a short distance and then cried for help. V. Simon and James Adams of Manlius found him in this condition and took him to St. Joseph hospital at Syracuse, where half of his foot was amputated. A Distressing Accident.

Dr. W. L. Woodbury had a sad accident on Thursday afternoon of last week.

He was at the top of a high ladder picking apples when the ladder slipped at the base throwing him off. He grasped a branch but it was not strong enough to sustain his weight and he fell to the ground, breaking both bones in one of his legs just above the ankle. Drs. Pardee and Hall were summoned and the patient was made as easy as possible under the circumstances.

The doctor is a person that makes the best of everything but it is exceeding hard even for one of his philosopical temperament to be compelled to remain in bed when he had made arrangements to do so much in his temperance work.

The Bostonians.

Quite a number of the lovers of English opera will visit Syracuse this evening to hear The Bostonians in their new opera "The Poachers" at the Alhambra. Frothingham and a host of others; in all, more than sixty people. To-morrow evening Von Suppe's "Fatinitza" will be rendered; Friday night Serpette's "Fanchonette". Prices for Reserved Seats, $1.00, 75 and 50cts.

Sawtelle Comedy Company.

This excellent comedy company will appear at the opera house every night next week commencing on Monday Oct. 24 with an entire change of program each evening. Popular prices of admission 15 and 25 cts. Reserved seats 10 cts. extra. The announcement of this company comes too late for us to make a more extended mention. The press opinions show it to be as good as the best.

China Wedding.

About eighty and mostly relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Rowlee assembled at their pleasant home about two and a half miles northeast of this village on Saturday, Oct. 15th and assisted in celebrating the twentieth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Rowlee's wedding. "WHAT is meant by 'free alkali, Doctor? I see it mentioned in the advertisements of IVORY SOAP."

"'Free Alkali,' Madam, is the alkali which is not combined with the fats or oils of which the soap is made, due to the ignorance or carelessness of the soap maker. Soaps in which 'free alkali' is present are decidedly injurious to both the clothing and the skin when habitually used. I have seen reports of analysis made of the IVORY SOAP by men eminent in our profession, and all pronounce it to contain no 'free alkali,' to be made with great care and of materials of the best quality, carefully selected, so I unhesitatingly recommend it for every purpose about the house for which good soap is required."

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

UTICA, N. Y. Oct. 17.

The market was very stupid until it was nearly time for the western train to depart. Then the bids started up, but there was no competition, and each buyer got what he wanted at his own price. Fully three-quarters of the factories sold the whole of their September make, a few holding back three or four days of that month because they did not have them boxed. Here and there was a man who did not sell at all, but the great majority concluded that it was of no use to hold, as there was small prospect of any higher prices this fall. Sales are about up to the average of the last three weeks, and show but slight falling off as yet. The weather is fine and the make continues to be full, but we expect to see lighter markets hereafter. Sales of the day were as follow:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
49	4,8[illegible]0	10¾
34	2,877	11c
10	1,215	11⅛
29	2,601	11¼
6	523	p. t.
128	12,066
	1,[illegible]	Com.
Total	13,789

Ruling price, 10⅝c. Transactions one year ago 11,145 boxes; ruling price, 10⅝c. Two years ago 7,884, ruling 9⅝c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Oct. 17.

Cheese—The market to-day has proved quite disappointing to factorymen. Where a strong and advancing market is naturally expected for the fine September cheese now selling, we have a decline of fully one-half cent. Buyers show no confidence even in these prices, and will take no risks, buying only to fill orders in hand. Cheese is fine in quality; the weather being so favorable, and the feed so good, there seems no good reason why the late September and early October make should not be just as perfect in quality. But dealers claim a lack of demand as the one reason for the dullness in trade, and some predict even lower prices. Factorymen were just as ready today to let their goods go forward as they have been for the past few weeks, and liberal sales were made. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price
50	3,445	11c
1	174	11⅛
33	3,271	11¼
7	501	11⅜
17	1,244	com.
108	8,635
Farm dairy	831
	9,466

Farm Dairies—Sales of 831 boxes farm cheese were made at 11 to 12c; only one lot sold at 12c. the bulk going at 11½c.

Butter.—There were 179 packages farm dairy butter sold at 22 to 24c, the bulk receiving 23c.; 10 packages of creamery went at 25c.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-three factories were represented at this place on Monday evening with 1,908 boxes. The price offered was 11 cents. The Utica ruling was 10⅝. Less than half of the factories sold. The balance held over.

Edward Bailey Discharged.

The grand jury at its present session took evidence in the case of the people against Edward Bailey of Oswego Falls who was charged with the crime of rape by Kittie Burke of the same place. They evidently did not think any crime had been committed, as no indictment was found and the district attorney asked for an order discharging him, which was granted.—Oswego Times.

THE WORK CONTINUES.

Pegging Away, on the VanBuren Farm for Gas or Oil.

A large number of Fultonians and many from the surrounding country go daily to the VanBuren farm where the enterprising company composed of Messrs. Edwards, Lewis and Case are spending thousands of dollars in sinking a test well for gas or oil. P. F. Sculley and George Sawyer, drillers, and John Craban and William Clark, tool dressers, all experts from the oil regions of Pennsylvania are at work day and night under their seventy-five foot derrick operating their monstrous drill with a fifteen horse power engine. The work is done exactly as it is in the oil and gas regions and it is a novel and extremly interesting sight to witness. All the tools used are massive and can only be handled by those who are experts in the business. The hugh windlass hourly draws the drill from the bowels of the earth and another freshly dressed from the forge takes its place. Samples of the strata of crushed rocks are collected in bottles and make an interesting study.

Gas in small quantities is found and there is every indication that an inexhaustable supply will be found, which will not only bring fortunes to the enterprising members of the company but a boom to Fulton that will shake it from its very foundation.

They are now down 120 feet and will continue until the well has been sunk to a depth of 2,400 feet if necessary.

Exciting Runaway.

People on First street at noon yesterday saw an exciting runaway and several narrow escapes from what might have proved fatal. A young horse belonging to "Nate" Rogers of Hannibal became frightened at some tin piled in front of D. C. Baker's wagon shop on First street and turning around as quick as a flash started to run, Mr. Rogers was unable to control the animal. On reaching Summerville's livery stable he run into a large wagon which stopped the horse long enough for him to kick the front part of the buggy into smithereens and free himself. He then dashed down First street with a speed excelling a western cyclone, down Wall street and up Erie. He was captured about two miles out in the country having run into a barb wire fence which badly lacerated one of his fore legs otherwise he appeared uninjured after his mad flight.

Serious Runaway.

A serious runaway occurred on Oneida street Saturday afternoon shortly before six o'clock. Mrs. German Reynolds got into her wagon in front of Dr. Curtis' residence and for some unknown reason the old family horse that was never known to have done such a thing before took the bit between its teeth and started at full speed down town When in front of M. M. Williams' drug store the carriage came in contact with the wheels of a large Democrat wagon which was loaded with feed belonging to Samuel Wright.

The concussion threw Mrs. Reynolds over the dashboard onto the pavement. She was picked up insensible by Mr. Williams and others and taken into the drug store. She was shortly after taken to the home of H. P. Allen, where she at present is. Doctors Lee and Bacon made an examination and thought her hip might be fractured, but this cannot be determined even yet.

The horse was freed from the carriage and continued its flight across the bridge until it was caught. Mr. Wright's team also became frightened and started to run but was caught in front of Johnston's hardware store. Mrs. Reynolds is to-day as comfortable as could be expected.

[illegible] by Rev. Father McLoughlin of Cortland, arrived the night before, and were the guests of Rev. Father Kearney. Wednesday morning opened very unpropitious, the weather was wet and cold and it seemed dismal and gloomy, not dismayed the church began to fill at an early hour, the hundreds of girls in white, and boys with white rosettes, occupying the front seats. At eight o'clock mass was celebrated by the Bishop, assisted by Fathers McLoughlin, Kearney and Earley. Upwards of 200 persons received holy communion. At 10:30 o'clock high mass was celebrated by the Rev. John McLoughlin, toward the close the Bishop addressed the congregation. After paying a fitting compliment to our village on its thriving business like appearance and on the evidence of its prosperous growth as witnessed on every hand, he said:

"I do not find this growth extending in the direction most near to us as a church. Looking at the exterior and interior of this your place of worship, I see that it is far behind the times and not at all in keeping with your apparent thrift and prosperity in your business and homes or equal to the needs and ability of this church and people.

I remember when 27 years ago I chanced to be present here at a confirmation service held in this very church edifice by the late lamented Cardinal McCloskey, then Bishop of Albany, and I can see but slight improvement in the church of your early feeble days and the church of your present prosperous times. You should have a place of worship worthy of your religion and your beautiful village. It will not be a difficult thing to accomplish. What is given cheerfully in the support of religion or any worthy charity will never make the giver poorer. No one has ever became the poorer because of what he contributes to the support of his church or the cause of religion, neither will you. I shall then be most happy to meet at an early day representatives who wish to take action towards building a new church in Fulton."

The Bishop's plain talk made a seeming impression upon the minds and hearts of this people, and it is doubtless true that ere another year rolls around work will have commenced in building a new church edifice on the handsome lot opposite the present church, which has for so many years been owned by the church or the officers over it.

If you are not satisfied with the coal you have been burning, go to Schenck & Foster's and they will guarantee to please you.

WE have a great treat in store for our artistically inclined readers in the advertisement of the Ivory Soap. The first of the series of fifty-two elegant announcements of its many virtues appear on the 2d page of this issue. The Ivory Soap must indeed be a soap of rare merit if fifty-two good things can be said of it, and we predict our readers will be so interested in the beautifully drawn pictures that they will be the first thing looked for in the paper, even to having the preference with our lady readers over the marriage notices, and our business men will soon be convinced that advertising is not a lost art, nor is art lost when applied to advertising. The fact that space has been taken in THE TIMES by such discrimining advertisers as Proctor & Gamble is an endorsement of what we have always claimed: —no better advertising medium exists in this locality than THE FULTON TIMES.

It is said that "a few pieces of horse-radish put among pickles will improve the flavor and keep them from moulding."

The great secret in sowing wheat is in getting ready to sow. Heavy seeding on a thoroughly prepared seed bed is waste and folly.

Raw onions, chopped fine and mixed with the food twice a week, are said to be a preventive of chicken cholera.

Roots are excellent for sheep in winter and are especially important with heavy grain feeding for keeping the digestive organs in full vigor.

Japanese candles have hitherto only been sent to China, but a trial shipment to America was dispatched the other day.

As soon as the crop shall have been removed from the garden plot plough it and allow no weeds to grow, which will greatly lessen the garden work next season.

Reduction in the cost of production is better than advance in selling price. The benefits of the latter accrue only to the producer. By the former he receives equal benefit and all the world shares it.

Give the hogs pure, fresh water to drink; swill will not answer the purpose of water. A very little salt, wood ashes and charcoal should be thrown in their pens at times.

Keeping a close watch over the plough point, and having it sharp, or replacing it frequently with a new one, will often save ten times the cost of the plough in labor.

A cow in milk should never be driven faster than a walk. Good cows have large and well filled uders, which cause pain to them if they are hurried or driven on a run.

Fine manure for crops is more valuable than coarse. Hens can break up manure better perhaps than anyone of of the machines invented for the purpose. Scatter some wheat over the pile and turn them on.

There is nothing that will fatten a pig as quickly as sheet potatoes. They are superior to corn for that purpose. Pick out those that are marketable and boil the culls for the pigs. They may be given to steers also and can be fed raw or cooked.

Burying Apples.

I remember that we had hard, sour apples that now-a-days would be regarded as hardly fit for cider, and we buried enough for use in small pits, 10 to 15 bushels each. In the spring they were excellent. We used to open pits in winter at any time and take out the apples until the pit was entirely emptied; then another would be opened. My recollection is, that the apples did not keep well after they were taken out of the pits; but they certainly kept well as long as they were buried, and I believe, as a rule, their flavor was greatly improved. I am sure that apples, very poor in flavor, hard, tough and unpalatable, came out in the spring plump, crisp, juicy and good. I have not buried apples in many years, but I think judgment should be exercised in selecting the varieties to bury. Take those that are good keepers, as Baldwin for instance, which I had rather trust than Greenings or Spies. I would not hesitate to bury any late keeping apple, particularly varieties not good for use in fall, for I remember distinctly the great change produced in hard, poor, sour, tough natural fruit buried through winter, to come out in the spring golden yellow, juicy, and exceedingly good. There can be no doubt that apples in pits will save as well as by any other method. The air is excluded, so is light and the fruit is left to the slow process of ripening under conditions very favorable to its preservation. I am putting up now apples wrapped in paper. The varieties are Swaar, Greening and Spitzenberg. When the apples are nicely wrapped they will be put in barrels and headed tight, precisely as apples are shipped, the fruit packed by pressure. I have kept Spitzenbergs in good condition until June and Newton Pippins to August, when Primates were ripe. I remember one season when I took a Newton Pippin, entirely sound and plump, to the orchard to eat under a Primate tree, when its apples were well ripened.—G. W. Hoffman.

At a late meeting of a local horticultural society in Ohio, the following plan for keeping apples was described: "A pit about five feet deep is dug in a side hill, drained, and filled nearly full of apples, then cover the pit with boards, and put earth on the boards. The apples keep better than when buried in the usual manner." A member said soft apples, such as Rambos, etc., kept better buried than in any other manner. —Green's Fruit Grower.

VanWert's Liver Pellets are perfect little wonders in curing sick headache and derangement of the liver and bowels. There is nothing like them.

Relative Value of Dairy Cows.

In tests made with ten breeds of cows by Professor Brown, of Ontario, Canada, Agricultural college, to ascertain the value of milk, cream, butter or cheese made by them, the following conclusions were drawn from results obtained: The Jersey is far ahead as a producer of cream or of butter, with the Ayrshire grade next, while the Ayrshire is the best if the milk is to be sold or if cheese is to be made, and the Devon ranks next for the cheese maker, and the shorthorn grade close after.

The fact that the cow requires food very nearly in proportion to her live weight would also serve another point for the Jersey and the Ayrshire, the lightest weights yet the most productive. The gain in weight of milk and [illegible] of cheese made therefrom, the [illegible] amount of cream and value of [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] the exact cost of [illegible] that season. All [illegible] weighed and all conditions closely observed. The sheep were kept in good thrifty, healthy condition; shelter was accessible when wanted, but the animals were not confined to it. Only so much food was given as was readily eaten the sheep, were neither gorged nor starved. That the method of feeding and quantity fed was correct is evident from the present condition and the small winter mortality in the flock.

It was found that when the weather averaged from ten degrees above zero upward, the daily consumption of hay (clover and timothy) was 2½ pounds a head; when the temperature was 20 to 25 degrees below zero the consumption reached four pounds a head; this was the maximum quantity. During the winter he fed 100 pounns of bran daily to the flock of 144 sheep, regardless of the degree of cold. For market purposes he had his lambs come early, and is now selling them in the markets of Minneapolis and St. Paul at 10 cents a pound live weight. They are from 70 to 80 days old, and weigh from 50 to 60 pounds each.

This farmer says that it is safe to say that the increase of his flock will cover the cost of keeping it, leaving the wool for clear profit; or the keeping may be charged against the wool, which will not exhausting it all leaving the lambs a clear profit. At all events he regards sheep as an exceedingly profitable adjunct to his farming operations.—Farm Stock and Home.

The One-Horse Farm.

The business of agriculture and the best interests of the country will continue to suffer so long as in most rural families the one boy who "isn't fit for nothing else" is left to carry on the farm. Brains and "faculty" are needed in cultivating the earth as well as in other callings. The Nevasota, Texas, Tablet sarcastically hits off some of the characteristic points of the man who is everything that a farmer ought not to be.

The one horse farmer has a lifelong ambition to gain a reputation for wearing a dirty shirt.

He will alarm the neighborhood by getting up two hours before day and then sit around and not go to work until after the sun is up.

He will ride around a week looking for a $2 hog.

He will complain of hard times, then tear his pants climbing a fence where a gate ought to be.

He will get all his neighbors to help in getting a cow out of a bog, and then let her die for want of attention.

Stock will get in and destroy his crops at a place in his fence that he has been putting off fixing for six months.

He will sprain his back lifting something to show how strong he is.

He will talk all day Sunday on what he knows about farming, then ride around the neighborhood Monday hunting seed potatoes.

He will go in his shirt sleeves on a cold day to show how much he can stand, then return home at night and occupy two-thirds of the fire-place till bed-time.

He will ridicule the mechanism of a corn planter, then smash his thumb nailing a board on the fence.

He will go to town on Saturday and come back with fifty cents' worth of coffee, a paper of pins and a dollar's worth of chewing tobacco.

He is economical, economy is his forte; be he will save ten cents' worth of axle grease and ruin the spindle of a $70 wagon.

He won't subscribe for a newspaper, but he will borrow one from his friend and forget to return it.

No process for making a fine quality of hair has yet been invented. This accounts for the fact that so many self-made men are bald-headed, we presume. —Yonkers Statesman.

The discovery that hair can be transplanted from a dog's back to a bald man's head will embarrass the female, as she can't tell whether she has her poodle dog or her fellow's head in her lap.—Dansville Breeze.

According to the recent estimates of a German investigator, about 120,000 hairs grow on the average human head. Many a poor bald man wishes that he could have even one-half of the average due him.—Boston Post.

A learned M. D. has discovered that the the cause of baldness is great intellectuality. May it not be intellectuality, then, that drives the bald heads to the front row! Savants should get to work on this.—Drake's Travelers' Magazine.

An Ingenious Bargain.

"Please, mum, gimme a slate pencil," said little Fred as he entered a store on his way to school.

"Look here," said the old lady, "you didn't pay for that; I want a penny."

"I hain't got a penny."

"Then give me back the pencil."

"No, I won't." And breaking the pencil evenly in two he added, offering the old lady one half: There, that pays for my part."—The Epoch.

[illegible] Sea Tragedy.

Amid [illegible] savage clan
Of [illegible] people
A missionary man
Set up his modest steeple.

And there each day he would
Pursue his noble labors;
He taught them to be good,
And bade them love their neighbors.

The cannibals with grins
Gave ear to themes he treated;
They crossed their tawny shins,
And on their hams were seated.

And yet they were not lost—
That missionary's labors;
He taught them to his cost
The way to love their neighbors.

For one day when for prayers
These cannibals they met him,
They caught him unawares,
They killed him and they ate him.

They said they found him good;
He practiced what he taught them;
And now they understood
The goodness he had brought them.

And as they filled each maw,
They said, while they deplored him,
They'd loved him, live and raw,
But roasted they adored him.

—Omaha Herald.

No One Else Could Do It.

Across the drugget the baby creeps—
The baby that knows no cares—
And the awful direction that he keeps
Leads right to the hard, steep stairs.

Sometimes he climbs on the window-sill,
Where a fall his neck would break;
From any bottle he drinks his fill—
Not the same from a spoon he'd take.

He sticks his hands in the bulldog's eyes
And into the horse's nose;
The table knife on his hand he tries,
And kicks his face with his toes.

Oh, thus does the baby run his race,
And I'm sure his soul would chafe
If he ever happened to get in a place
Where his life would be really safe.

—Harper's Bazar.

A Deadly Weapon.

"I'm going to whip you sir," he wrote,
"For printing that piece on me,
I'll teach you to rail at a man of note—
"My name is Smith," wrote he.
But when he came in with a whoop and a howl
To seek the editor's blood,
A brawny printer caught him foul,
And stabbed him with the office towel,
And he fell with a heavy thud.

THE PROPER THING.

Vests of silk are draped in diagonal folds.

Cloth cloaks this summer are elegant in cloth, color and design.

The new basques are noticable for heir elaborate front trimmings,

Silk and velvet gowns will be very generally worn the coming winter.

Velvet remains the favorite material for the vest and standing collar.

The long-waved Astrakhan fur will rival Persian lambskin as a trimming.

Turkey-red cottons trimmed with Irish cotton lace are worn for fall house dresses.

The thick white flannel suitings with gay stripes can be worn until late in the fall.

Jersey cloth is now made into petticoats with scalloped edges embroidered with silk.

Faced cloth and serges in plain colors will be largely worn during the fall and winter.

Torchon lace is the prettiest of all trimmings for the throat and sleeves of fine merino underwear.

For rough goods are serges with large blanket plaids and cheviots with fine lines and crossbars of indefinate coloring.

"Greek" overskirts are open at the sides and front, and full everywhere, at the back also, in soft, straight folds, though at the back the folds still curve outward.

Soutache braiding ornaments are showily applied at the foot of the three kilted panels of silk to match, that make the left side of handsome cloth suits for autumn.

Some pretty bodices without vests are gathered all across the top of the front on each shoulder and below the collar, and this fullness is held below by a pointed girdle that shapes the end of the bodice.

A simple design for cheviot or cloth basques has the fronts nearly meeting over a band of velvet and held together ball buttons attached to the ends of bits of soutache an inch and a quarter in length, passed through button-holes, a row of button-holes being worked along each edge of the fronts.

Pretty lace aprons are made of skirt widths of Oriental or other laces, in black, ecru or white. A yard of flouncing is used, which is cut off at the top to make the required length. This is finished at the sides by a hem or an edging of lace, and the top is gathered over a ribbon, which forms the belt and strings.

Do not despair of curing your sick-headache, when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will effect a prompt and permanent cure. Their action is mild and natural.

The Doings of the Queerboy and the Cinders Family.

[Written for THE TIMES].

When old man Cinders first visited Fulton he spent most of his time down on the farm where they are boring for natural gas. Late one Tuesday he went in to the Lewis House to find a Boston Capitalist who had been there some days.

"Say, Henry, where's that Boston chap?"

Henry—"Gone home. Why, what's up?"

"Well, to-day when they took out the drill at the well, (two hundred feet, they said) a big stream of hard cider came up, and they can't stop it running. I want to get that Boston fellow to help me pipe line the stuff up to the village and open a big vinegar factory. Why, its almost vinegar now. Smell my breath." As Cinders sank heavily into a chair, Henry sent out scouts to get the big brass medal from the village liar to decorate the breast of the bad old man from New York.

* * * * *

QUEERBOY'S DOG.

Queerboy is a kind hearted fellow. Lately he bought a three ply bull dog, and chained him to the gate. "That's to give the tramps a cold bite without troubling them to walk clear up to the kitchen door."

He calls the dog "Well Enough" and has put up a big sign advising people to let "Well Enough" alone.

I was talking to him about the dog when he remarked that there was something very funny about "Well Enough."

"What is it?" said I.

"Here's one part that's very funny." said he.

"Which is it?" said I.

"His lungs."

"How's that?"

Why, his lungs are the seat of his pants, ain't they?"

! ! ! ? ! ! ? I panted for breath.

* * * * *

Cinders won a ten dollar umbrella at a church fair, and had it decorated inside with "Oh, Leave Me Not Alone," in gilt letters. The first night that he went down town some one made love to the umbrella and now he borrows as of yore. 'Twas ever thus.

* * * * *

At Queerboy's reception, Cinders and his wife sang a duet," "Keep the Flowers of Love Still Blooming." They sang and acted so sweetly to each other that every one said, "What a happy young couple!"

Had the guest been present half an hour later, and heard the tongue lashing he got for trying to flirt with a red haired maid in the street car they would have said: "Why, they are just like other people."

* * * * *

"Say Paw! What's a consecrated cross-eyed bear?" asked the youngest of the Cinders family as he came in from church.

"What's that?"

"What's a consecrated cross-eyed bear that the choir sung about this morning?"

Cinders said he didn't know and told Johnny to go ask the cook.

Another time Johnny was saying his prayers at his mother's knee. "Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord my soul to keep. Fishouldie before —— Say! Mamma, what's a Fishouldie?"

Between his sobs and the cold, cold sheets he tried to imagine why his mamma had treated him to the flat side of her two dollar hair brush instead of answering his question.

Thought It Was A Bird Cage.

He had gone home a little late the week before a little worse for wear, and was making a manly effort to get to bed without disturbing his silent partner, when his foot caught in something that felt like a bird cage about his ankles, and he pitched forward until he reached the mantel, which he found with his nose. He uttered an exclamation which transformed his silent partner into one of the most active kind of partners, and compelled an explanation. A light being produced, the wreck of the object that had caused him to fall was brought up for imprecation and analysis. It was his first offense, and his wife therefore allowed her concern over his mishap to dominate her indignation over the condition in which he presented himself, So she plastered his nose and said the wreck didn't matter; it could be easily replaced. But where's the rest of it and what's become of the bird?" asked he. "The bird! what do you mean?" his wife exclaimed. "Why, isn't that part of a bird cage!" Ha! ha!—Why, yes, if I am your birdie, as I used to be—that's my bustle," she said.—New York Times.

An Unappreciated Grandma.

A few months ago there was an addition to the family of Col. Percy Yerger, on which occasion Mr. Yerger's mother, a venerable lady, spent several weeks with the family.

A few days ago Mrs. Yerger received a letter from her mother to the effect that she intended to make another visit.

"Is grandma coming again?" asked Johnny Yerger, making a disgusted [illegible]

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent].

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15, 1887.

The October term of the United States Supreme Court convenes this week, with an unusually large docket—there being considerably more cases than for the corresponding period of last year—in fact, at least a thousand of them. Some of the cases to be heard are of national interest and importance, such as the right of the President to legally sign a bill after the adjournment of Congress, and the Virginia "coupon crusher" case, in which an appeal was taken from the decision of United States Judge Bond, who imprisoned the Attorney General and two commonwealth attorneys for contempt of court. Then there are the telephone cases, the case of Maxwell, (the St. Louis trunk sensational murder case) and the long standing litigation of the estate of the famous Myra Clark Gaines with the city of New Orleans.

The Capitol is being overhauled and renovated prepatory to the meeting of Congress, and the advent of the national solons is anxiously awaited, especially by the keepers of boarding houses and hotels, and the per diem employes of both the Senate and House.

In regard to the organization of the House, the opinion is generally expressed in this city that there will be no material change. It is generally conceded that Mr. Carlisle will succeed himself as Speaker, and it is believed that Mr. Mills of Texas will be made chairman of the committee on Ways and Means.

The Fisheries Commissioners paid Secretary Bayard an official visit this week, and while no particular line of policy was agreed upon, the duties incumbent upon the Commission were discussed in a general way, after which the body adjourned, with the expectation of meeting the Canadian Commission in the Capital some time next month.

The fact that Postmaster General Vilas has joined the Presidential excursion at Milwaukee for the balance of the tour, is regarded as an emphatic move of that gentleman in his aspirations for the Vice-Presidency. Many are of the opinion that the prominence given by the President to Mr. Vilas, show a remarkable lack of political acumen in Mr. Cleveland, who has been credited with so much partisan tact and adroitness, as it apparently puts a slight upon the other members of the Cabinet, to say nothing of the danger of alienating the support of other candidates for the second place.

Nothing daunted by the combative spirit in which his recent letter on civil service reform was received by partisans of the party in power, Commissioner Oberly follows it up with another utterance, in which he announces himself opposed to the appointment of active politicians on the civil service examining boards. Mr. Oberly's colleagues being absent, it is at present only a matter of conjecture as to whether or not they will concur with the sentiments expressed by him on this question.

In the several Federal departments the leading bureau of officials are now very busy preparing their annual reports of the past fiscal year and making estimates of the necessary appropriations for the coming fiscal year. In some of the departments an increased clerical force will be called for, to meet the growing demands of the public business—more especially in the Pension Office where a large addition of clerks is undoubtedly needed, as it is quite often necessary for the present force to work extra hours, when a sufficient number of "volunteers" promptly come forward.

The magnificent new War, State and Navy Department building—probably the finest and most stylish public edifice in Washington, is nearly completed and will be ready for occupation next January.

Among the latest additions to the National Museum, is probably the most unique and ghastly relic ever placed on public exhibition—a necklace of human fingers, once the proud trophy of a Sioux Indian medicine man; it is a rare mosaic—each finger standing as a grim representative of the savage physician's confiding victims. This work of uncivilized art is a skilfully woven band of beads, from which hang eight mummified fingers—the tips being colored with bright yellow ochte.

THE TORTILITA MINES.

HOW THE PROPERTY IMPRESSES A HARTFORD MAN.

A Shrewd Yankee Sends an Expert to Look Over the Property—The Expert's Opinion and Advice.

The Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Company' Arizona mining properties, which were quite fully described in The Evening Post on the 17th inst., have attracted wide attention, opening up as they do, some wonderful experiences in mining precious ores, and a most remarkable opportunity for safe and profitable investment. Our readers will be interested in a perusal of the following extract from a private letter received in this city yesterday, which bears directly upon this subject, and fully substantiates the favorable impression already created and confirmed by the statements of The Post and other leading journals in various parts of the country. We quote:

KANSAS CITY, Mo., August 25, 1887.

Dear Brother—Your telegram of the 18th inst. found me at Los Angeles, California, but an hour or two before my intended departure for the east, and I am very happy thus to have been able to perform the pleasant task which you assigned to me, of a side trip to the Owl's Head mining district, on my way home. I left Los Angeles at 10:15 a. m. on Thursday, by the Southern Pacific railroad, and at 11:45 next morning found myself at Tucson, which your dispatch informed me is the nearest important railroad point to the mines. Although your instructions by wire were simply to "go to the mines and get at the true inwardness of the whole business," I easily understood that what you wanted of me was to know from the personal observation of a reliable friend all that could be learned about some mining scheme in which you or your neighbors were probably invited to become participants, and which your confidence might perhaps not be absolute. I have, as you know, seen something of mines and mining in California and Colorado; and so when the Tucson boniface asked if I wanted a top or open buggy, I told him to give me his best saddle horse, and without an ounce of baggage I started off over the hills, thirty odd miles to the camp of the Tortilita Mining Company. The roads were much better than I expected to find, and the clock was just striking six when I reigned up at an unpretentious wooden building which looked as if it might be the camp post office, or a store, but which proved to be the office of the mining company and the headquarters of Mr. D. T. Elmore, superintendent in charge of the active operations at the mines. Declining the hospitality which he offered, I managed to get supper and lodging at the boarding house adjoining the little crushing and smelting works and at an early hour next morning set out for the mines, which had been located for me by a Mexican at the mill in such a way that by the aid of a rough sketch which I made on paper under his direction, I felt sure of easily finding them. There are twelve mines in the Tortilita group. I personally visited and inspected eight of these during the day, finding active operations in progress at only six, viz: The Jesse Benton, Tom Benton, By Chance and By Chance Extension at the northeast cluster, and the Red Peach and Lazy Sleeper at the southwest cluster. The little mill has only five stamps, and but a very moderate amount of mining is necessary to keep it going. There is any quantity of ore in sight and within easy reach at all of the eight mines which I saw, and I am amazed that the management is satisfied with this little one horse mill, knocking the ore to pieces with five stamps, and getting out six or eight hundred dollars a day, while a fifty stamp mill might be supplied with good rich ore from these mines for twenty years to come, yielding six or eight thousand dollars a day without beginning to exhaust this great field of precious metal. Elmore tells me that this property has recently changed hands, and that the present company are negotiating somewhere in the east for two or three twenty-stamp mills. If this be true, you may set it down for a fact that this Owl's Head district will astonish the world by the vastness and richness of its deposits, and the company which owns this group of mines will become the wealthiest mining corporation at least in America.

I remained one day and two nights at the camp, coming on to Kansas City by the Atlantic express which reaches Tucson at midday on Sunday, arriving here early this morning, and now embracing the first opportunity to write you. I go to Chicago this evening, and thence to Minneapolis, not expecting to reach Connecticut before the second or third week in September. When I see you I can give you by word of mouth a great many interesting details of my two days in the saddle—one day going to and from Tucson and the camp, and the other among the mines.

I found my mail awaiting me at the Crocker house, and among the letters and papers a copy of The Hartford Evening Post of the 17th, with its splendid map and description of the Tortilita mines. It is all very well done, and interests me much in view of my jaunt over the properties. The story is in no respect overdrawn. I notice that the superintendent's statements to me regarding the proposed new stamping works are confirmed. This settles the question as to the future of the mines and the mining company that owns them. What is the stock of the company selling at? It will be well to advise all our friends to get in if they can do so anywhere near the ground floor. This is my candid conclusion. You know me well enough to judge whether the advice is good or not.

Very hastily but truly yours,
E. F. DENSLOW.

—Hartford (Conn.) Post, Aug. 31, '87.

The Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining Company has for its president Mr. Joseph H. Reall, president also of the American Agricultural and Dairy Association, and well known among the farmers of America, an experienced business man, well versed in financial matters.

The shares of the Tortilita Company are being taken all over the country for investment by bankers, merchants, farmers, mechanics and laboring men and women. They can only be bought now by private subscription, and those wishing to purchase will do well to send in their orders at once, as the books will soon close preparatory to calling [illegible] are at least sure of a safe investment and good dividends.

There is but a portion of the stock for sale, and that is for the purpose of putting up the additional machinery required.—New York Star.

How Much a Man Eats.

It is calculated that on the average, each man who attains the age of three score and ten, consumes during the course of his life twenty wagon-loads of food, solid and liquid. At four tons to the wagon this would correspond to an average of about a hundred ounces per day or say some one hundred and twenty ounces per day during adult life, and about eighty ounces during infancy and youth. Most modern doctors agree in regard to one hundred and twenty ounces of food per day, corresponding to five or six half-pints of liquid food, or seven or eight pounds of solid food, as in excess of the real daily requirements of a healthy man or woman.

Yet probably most of us take more than this in one way or another, during the day. Dr. Lankester, from an extensive analysis of the diet of soldiers, sailors, prisoners and the better paid classes of artisans and professional men in London, found the average daily quantity of solid and liquid food to be one hundred and forty-three ounces. Doubtless many take much less; but unquestionably many take much more than this. When some one mentioned before Sidney Smith the twenty wagon-loads of food calculated for each man's allowance, he turned to Lord Durham, who like himself was corpulent (and not without sufficient reason) with the quaint remark, "I think our wagons Durham, must be four-horsed ones." There are members of the London corporation, to seek no further, whose wagons must be six-horsed ones, and well loaded at that.—Richard A. Procter in the October Cosmopolitan.

Whatever tends to increase usefulness, by banishing pain and suffering, will certainly secure notice and approval. We allude to Salvation Oil.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE.

Lipincott's for November continues its policy of furnishing one long story complete, instead of installments of two or three stories, none of which are satisfactory to the reader. "The Terra Cotta Bust," by Virginia W. Johnson, occupies more than a hundred pages of solidly set type, and possesses the merits that have made this writer's former productions so popular. After this come the essays and poems. Dr. Osweld tells the story of "A Modern Spartacus" in Mexico. Walt Whitman hangs his lyre on "November Boughs." John R. Tait relates "The Story of a Stanza," and produces the stanza which had waited 31 years for its completion. John Johnson narrates the experience of the experiment at McDonough, under the title of "The School Boy as a Microcosm" R. S. Rounds, of the class of '87, describes the "Social Life at Amherst College;" and Arlo Bates contributes a powerful "Sketch in Umber." The monthly gossip and book talk are both admirable in their way, and the number as a whole will stand the test of examination with success.

An Opportunity Unimproved.

She stood in the press-room of the country daily, where the agile "fly" of the press was slapping down the papers with admirable precision. She was a motherly-looking creature, with a blue cotton umbrella and a double chin. "That 'fly' delivers the papers at the rate of 1,500 an hour," modestly remarked the proud proprietor. "Fifteen hundred an hour!" she exclaimed; "mercy on us! you don't mean it!" And then, moved by motherly instinct, she added: "What a place to spank a baby!"—Somerville Journal.

is recognized as the leading Methodist divine in Maine. He is now settled over a church in Biddeford. Some two years ago when residing in Bangor as pastor of the Pine street M. E. church, he engaged in temperance work, and at the same time issued two books "The Blue and the Gray," and "Reminiscences of the War." In performing his various duties as minister, lecturer and author, he overtaxed his powers, and became a victim of Kidney disease and was obliged to forsake pulpit platform and library. After experimenting with various physicians without benefit he took a trip to the West for his health but did not improve. Coming home he found some of his family in poor health which added to his daily cares and thereby aggravated his own troubles. Again he sought aid at the hands of the medical fraternity and again he met with bitter disappointment.

Some one suggested Brown's Sarsaparilla which is made where Mr. Gerrish then resided. He had "no faith in patent medicines," he said. The friend got a bottle however and Mr. Gerrish used it. It helped him. He took another and another, all the while being on the mending hand. In time he became well as did all the other members of his household, and such was the regard he entertained for Brown's Sarsaparilla as a powerful remedy for Kidney disease that he cheerfully allowed the use of his name and also sent in a testimonial of the facts. Mr. Gerrish resumed charge of his church work, the temperance work, and has since done much in the literary field, being strong of body and mind, and free from all forms of disease. Hundreds have been benefited by the use of

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office or moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

The Times goes to its readers this week with a supplement filled with interesting reading. It also contains the announcement of two special offers that we are making to new subscribers and which old subscribers can take advantage of. Read carefully and take advantage of one of them.

Three thousand four hundred and six or a little less than one out of every one hundred of the Grand Army men, have died during the last year. In fifty years the Grand Army men can probably be counted on one's fingers; in sixty years not one may remain.

The New York Graphic has been sold to a syndicate of wealthy Republicans, among whom are Senator Hiscock, Levi P. Morton, Thomas C. Platt, Cornelius N. Bliss, Stephen B. Elkins and William Walter Phelps. It will be conducted as an illustrated daily in the interests of the Republican party.

The President and his party returned to Washington Saturday after their western trip which lasted three weeks. The party consisted of President and Mrs. Cleveland, Colonel Lamont, W. S. Bissell, Dr. Bryant and Postmaster General and Mrs. Vilas. From first to last the trip was a thorough success and without a single exception citizens of every city visited irrespective of politics showed the most profound respect for them. Eighteen states were passed through and over 4,500 miles covered.

The Sawtelle Comedy Company.

This company which is filling a week's engagement at the opera house opened Monday evening to an audience that filled every seat. The play was "A Tangled Life" and the parts were well sustained by the different members of the company. Last evening they played "Monte Cristo" to a good house and this evening they present "A Wife's Secret." Those who wish to enjoy a pleasant evening's entertainment would do well to attend.

LITERARY NOTES.

OUR LITTLE ONES.

This delightful little magazine enters upon another year of its existance with the November number. What the influence of the best current literature is to men and women "Our Little Ones" with its pages of expressly prepared and finely illustrated articles, is to children. Each fresh appearance brings new joy. From the nursery age to that of leaving the primary school, we know of no better magazine than this.

ST. NICHOLAS.

November St. Nicholas begins the fifteenth year of this popular magazine for young folks. The table of contents is rich and varied, and numbers fully thirty separate articles. The publishers announce increased attractions for the coming year. It scarcely seems possible to add anything to the interest and the great wealth of children's literature constantly appearing in St. Nicholas. All the old writers have been retained, with several new ones added for the year 1888. With such inducements the circle of readers can never grow less but must constantly be enlarged.

THE CENTURY.

With November The Century begins [illegible] volume and a circulation [illegible] of a million copies. The [illegible] features which have characterized this sterling magazine during [illegible] years, will be continued [illegible] additions and improvements [illegible]

[illegible] evidences the wound could not have been self inflicted. In his judgment no one could receive such a wound and make a struggle after it. Mr. Lattimore was unable to furnish any theory for the murder. Casler had no enemy and he knew nothing of his associations. Libbie Graham, a domestic in Lattimore's family, and W. O. Chamberlain, a chum of Casler were sworn, but no new evidence was gained. The jury concluded their deliberations about 2:30 with a verdict to the effect that Irving Casler was murdered by some person to them unknown. There is no doubt that the deed was deliberately done by some one who had planned and premeditated his death in a spirit of revenge for some fancied injury, but the impression is that the guilty person will never be discovered.—Phoenix Register.

Popular Program.

In response to a general wish from those who have not heard Dr. Spencer in one of his refined and intellectual entertainments, he announces a popular recital at a popular price, to be given at Church's Hall, on Tuesday evening next Nov. 1st. The program will be found in our advertising columns and is both grave and gay, meeting the wishes of all. We need say nothing of Dr. Spencer's ability to outline characters and to keep an audience interested for an entire evening. This has been so fully illustrated already that those who have heard him once invariably go again and those who have not heard him miss a rare treat, and a good laugh. The program for Tuesday is a new one, with scenes from Rip Van Winkle, Hamlet, The Merchant of Venice, The Garroters, etc. Dr. Spencer is certainly equally at home in comedy and tragedy. The coming program is a strong one and should call out a full house. Admission is only twenty-five cents.

The rates are fixed at an exceedingly low figure, and the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg R. The attractive advertising will be appreciated by the excursionists. The best first-class coaches of the company will be run through without change from all stations to Niagara Falls. The rate from Fulton will be $2.00. Every one is assured of a comfortable journey, and a pleasant visit at the Falls, which can be viewed to best advantage in Autumn. In addition to the regular conductors and trainmen, two special agents will accompany the excursion and remain at Niagara Falls until Thursday. These special agents will attend to the comfort of the excursionists and render any assistance desired, both on the train and at the Falls. Ladies without escorts will receive polite attention.

HALL'S

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local treatment, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure now on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system. They offer $100 for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address,

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

Utica, N. Y. Oct. 24

Although our market was ⅛c. lower to-day it was not in the least demoralized. Some depreciation was expected on October cheeses although it is known to be just as good as the Septembe make—perhaps even better. A few lots were composed of the makes of the two months mixed but the bulk of the cheese was full cream October stock. Perhaps there were five or six lots of night milk skims, which went in at the ruling price or better. The factories are all in operation yet, and will be until Nov 1. A few will run a week or two longer, and some of the larger establishments will keep open into December. There are perhaps two or three factories that have the bulk of their Septembers on hand, but having held thus long they are unwilling to accept less money and will probably continue to hold for a time longer. The majority of our salesmen however, are well satisfied with the result of the season's trade. The following are the transactions:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
56	4,425	10⅝
10	1,222	10¾
18	1,446	10⅞
23	1,958	11c.
5	447	11⅛
2	175	11¼
114	9,675
	1,321	Com.
Total	10,996

Ruling price, 10⅝c. Transactions one year ago 8,520 boxes; ruling price, 10⅞c. Two years ago 7,734, ruling 9⅝c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

Little Falls, Oct. 24.

Cheese—Prices show a decline of one-fourth cent from last week, when the ruling was 11 cents. The market was firm at current rates, and factorymen accepted the situation as soon as they were convinced that the the talk of lower figures was genuine, and they let their usual amounts go forward. Fine cheese was eagerly sought by buyers, and such comprised the wost of the offerings. The difference in price between white and colored stock is scarcely noticeable, the main point being to secure fine quality. Pasturage continues quite good, although recent frosts have reduced the yield of milk considerably. Reports of large amounts of cheese held at principal points throughout the dairy districts, induced our factorymen to sell as fast as stock is sufficiently cured, and cheese is sold here on an average to about October 5. Fillowing is our usual list:

Lots	Boxes	Price
3	126	10½
39	2,458	10¾
37	2,730	11
4	351	11¼
17	1,296	com.
99	6,061
Farm dairy	804
	7,765

Farm Daries.—Upon the morning market 804 boxes cheese were sold, and the prices ranged from 10¼ to 11¼ cents. The bulk sold at 11 cents.

Butter—Of farm dairy butter there were 115 packages sold at 22 to 24½ cents, the bulk going at 24 cents. Ten packages of creamery brought 25 cents.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-four factories were represented at this place on Monday evening with 1,879 boxes. The price offered was 10⅝ cents. Only about half of the offering sold at that figure. The balance was held over.

HAND AND TOE PHOTOS.

[illegible] Which Contains a Curious Collection of Feminine Hands and Feet.

"[illegible] hand and foot album" is the [illegible] description on the cover of a small [illegible] highly prized volume belonging to a young lady living in the Mission. The [illegible] is bound in morocco and was evidently intended by its maker as an album for small card photographs of the regulation portrait order. The novel use to which it is now put has made of the little volume one of the oddest of curios. In nearly every one of the spaces prepared for portraits is a photograph of a feminine hand or foot.

"How did I get this collection? Well, if you won't write anything ridiculing it I'll tell you."

That is what the owner of the album said to a reporter.

"You see," she went on, as she turned the leaves of the interesting volume, "some of the girls in this part of town with whom I am acquainted hit upon the idea of having their hands photographed. I believe the first one wanted to perpetuate the taper finger on which she had just had an engagement ring placed. The picture was taken in a little circle, with star points all around it, and showed nothing but the hand and a portion of the wrist. Here it is, you see."

A remarkably pretty hand, white and dimpled like a baby's, was shown.

"Yes, that was the first, I believe. The girl showed it around among a few of her most intimate friends, of whom I am one, and they all thought the picture such a 'cute' one that they immediately made up their minds to have something after the same style taken of their own hands. Of course, they didn't all have engagement rings on, but some of them made believe by using other rings, and others had their hands taken plain, as you will see, without any ring at all."

"But about these feet?" asked the reporter as slippered and booted extremities were shown in passing.

"Well," said the owner of the album, just the least bit shyly, "you know when girls get started on such notions as these they always go from one thing to another. At first they thought it would be awful to follow out such a suggestion, but finally a very brave possessor of a pair of No. 2's said she wasn't afraid, and if the other girls would go with her to the gallery she would sit for a foot photograph. So they went, and the result was that the whole party (except one girl, who wore No. 5's) had their feet taken. You can see them here in all positions and styles."

In nearly every case there was a fringe of dress skirt above the shoe or slipper, but in one or two instances this was lacking. However, nothing betokening immodesty could be observed. There were high, arched insteps and low, broad toes and narrow, but nearly all wore common sense low heels, as the average mission girl knows that running to catch a car with a pencillike heel under her is anything but nice, and there is a good deal of car catching done in the mission.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Thrift of a Boston Householder.

A man who owns an apartment house on Back bay was asked the other day if he had let all the suites in it.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "I have just let the last to summer boarders."

"Summer boarders!" repeated the other, "What in the world do you mean?"

Whereupon the householder explained that the lessees were people from New Orleans, who came north when the heats of spring came on, and who took the apartments for the year in order to be provided with accommodations which pleased them. This suggests unlimited possibilities of the Box and Cox order. The owners of apartments who are shrewd enough and of a commercial conscience sufficiently flexible will hereafter endeavor to let furnished suites to northerners for the winter and to southerners for the summer, each tenant, of course, paying a full year's rent. From such a practice to light comedy is, of course, but a step. One family will be a day late in moving in or one family will be a day late in moving out, and there is an excuse for a tangle of complications only limited by the boundaries of the invention of the author.—Providence Journal.

Englishmen Insulted at Waterloo.

English visitors to the battlefield of Waterloo complain in the Belgian papers of the molestation and insults to which they have been exposed by so called guides over the battlefield. The communal authorities of Waterloo and the neighboring localities will do well to look after the matter unless they wish to kill the goose which lays the golden eggs during the tourist season. In former years, twenty and thirty years ago, some of the guides had heard the cannon roar during the battle, although an intelligent questioner very soon found out that they had done so at a considerable distance from the field of battle; but the so called guides of the present time are nothing else but a set of the most rapacious and rude ragamuffins.—Brussels Cor. London Times.

An Undeveloped Bonanza.

The chief plant products of West Africa having a present economic value are, according to a new handbook by Capt. Alfred Moloney, palm oil, ground nuts, india rubber, coffee, gum, dye woods, cacao, cotton, fibers and timbers. Palm oil is obtained from a plant covering immense areas, and is imported to England to the value of nearly $5,000,000 yearly. A new product is the "white African rubber," from landolphia owariensis, in which the trade has risen during the last four years from almost nothing to nearly $180,000. Many plants yield valuable gums, and many have important medicinal properties. There is besides a wonderful botanical wealth whose possible practical value is yet unknown.—Arkansaw Traveler.

The most remarkable echo known is that in the castle of Simonetta, two miles from Milan. It reports the sound of a pistol sixty times.

Bridger's appearance indicated his age to be 48, but he was remarkably spare and thin of flesh and nearly six feet in height. Altogether he was the most remarkable [illegible] man I ever met on mountain or [illegible] in his personal appearance and demeanor. Dressed in the clothing of a [illegible] man, he seemed to wear it as a [illegible] to the garb of civilized life. [illegible] as furnished rooms for housekeeping [illegible] gentlemen only, was the means [illegible] a fashionable uptown boarding house. The advertisement was [illegible] with being a typographical blunder [illegible] and aged actor who was waiting for a date that never came put all doubts at rest by affirming that the advertisement meant just what it said.

"There is more than one house in New York," he said, "where single men rent rooms and do their own housekeeping, cooking, making beds, sweeping, and so on, and a nice life it is if a man is built that way. I am proud to say that while I was down on my luck I occupied an alcove room in this house mentioned in the advertisement. I paid $3 a week and lived for $3 more. A legacy left to me by my aunt has put higher living in my power, and I left my bachelor room with regret. The life was pleasant, and after I became a bit expert at cooking I assure you that I cooked many a dainty with all the skill of a French chef."

The writer visited the house where the furnished rooms for housekeeping for gentlemen were located. The ring at the bell was answered by a tidy Irish girl, who said that they had one room vacant. The landlady was summoned and showed the reporter up two flights to a back room.

"This is to rent with all the necessaries for light housekeeping. A closet in the hall is the place for your coal and your green groceries and an ice box for your meat. The price is $4 per week."

HOME CONVENIENCES.

The room was about fourteen feet square. It contained a folding bed, a cheap chiffonniere, on which were two teacups and saucers of fanciful pattern. In the different compartments were other dishes of stoneware and glass. A cupboard stood at the right of the mantel, in which were two tablecloths, four napkins, a quilt and a woolen blanket, and in a lower compartment an iron pot, a spider and two stew pans. The stove was a No. 5, with two covers, and was polished brightly. A wardrobe, sofa, easy chair, two dining chairs and a round table were placed about the room in convenient positions.

"You don't rent rooms to women?" remarked the reporter.

"No, indeed; I don't want any women about my house. They are more trouble than they are worth. I used to rent rooms to women, but they found fault with everything. They washed their clothes in the bathroom and invaded the kitchen at all times in the day to borrow flatirons. I have a houseful of gentlemen who cook, eat and sleep here, and I never hear a word of complaint and seldom see them, only when they pay their rent."

"What class of men do you have?"

"I have with me now a reporter, an actor, a street car conductor, a florist, an engineer on the Elevated railroad, a bookkeeper, two clerks who cook together, and a policeman."

At this point the lady was informed of the object of the reporter's visit, and she sat down to enlighten him further.

"I am an English woman," she said, "and kept lodgings in London before coming to New York. There it is a common thing for men to do their own housekeeping. I came to New York as a waiting maid to an English actress. Liking the city I concluded to stop here, and conceived the idea of renting rooms to gentlemen only. At first I did not meet with success, but now I can rent all of my rooms. I pay $100 a month for this house. I have eight rooms that bring me in $140. There is $40 profit on my rent. Then I get my living from my roomers. You see, it's this way. A woman nine times out of ten will throw away her waste, but a man won't. My rooms give me more than I can eat—a bunch of celery and other green stuff, meat and fruit that will spoil, and of which they had purchased too much. My servant girl costs me $8 a month only, but she doesn't do anything but laundry work and my cooking. My roomers make their own beds, and very handy they are at it."

THROUGH THE ROOMS.

The lady then took the reporter through the house. Only one room was untidy, and that was the actor's. Clay pipes and tobacco were scattered over the mantel; shoes, slippers and clothing were thrown about the room, while on the bed, slovenly made up, was a pile of manuscript and books.

"This man is an actor of good parts," explained the lady, "but he is slouchy about his room. Quite different is the next room that is occupied by the engineer."

This room was neatness personified. The bed was as smooth as could be, the floor was swept clean, and the tin pans were as bright as the brasses on his engine probably were. A small library was suspended on a shelf containing books on railroading, a dictionary and Shakespeare.

Other rooms visited showed the same neatness, but each had some characteristic of the occupant by way of ornament. The policeman had two clubs crossed over his mantel with a pair of boxing gloves between them. The clerk's room was fixed up with plush holders for brushes and papers, with the photographs of noted actresses stuck here and there on the walls. A pile of poker chips and a pack of cards were most conspicuous in the bookkeeper's room, but the beds were well made and the floors and dishes clean.

"These men," said the lady, "are up early, get their breakfast, wash their dishes, dress for business and are off, all of them before 8 o'clock. They return from 4 to 7 at night, get their supper and go out again. They are quiet and better tenants than any I ever had."

"Is poverty the cause of their living in this way?"

"Oh, no, I guess not. You know the old saying that one half the world doesn't know how the other half lives. I saw the bookkeeper's salary envelope one week and it had $50 marked on it. I am sure that all of my lodgers except the actor get good salaries. He sometimes doesn't get any; but I let him stop, for he pays when he can."

At this juncture a neatly dressed gentleman came in and passed up the stairs. It was the bookkeeper, and the reporter recognized him as a familiar sight in the hotel rotundas, a good fellow all around, and supposed to live at a fashionable boarding house up town.

The shopping for the roomers was done by the girl, who bought whatever the lodger wished, taking his book to the store and entering each article of provision purchased, for which the men paid weekly.—New York Evening Sun.

Confederate Captives at Big Shanty.

A large cable, fastened to stakes, encircled us round, on the outside of which walked the soldiers who guarded us. They all walked the same way, and the soldier whose post was No. 1 bawled out when he neared either end of his walk, "Right about!" which was the signal for all the guards on duty to right about at the same time and so prevent any chance of a prisoner's crawling away unperceived. I was struck with this wise precaution on the part of the enemy, for already I was beginning to look for some chance to get away, and doubtless others of those chafing Confederates were doing the same. [illegible]

[illegible] While in July, 1850, Obaysch, the first hippopotamus, [illegible] was taken in the Nile as a youngster [illegible] slippery skin enabled it to wriggle out of the hands of its captors, and it was only secured by driving a boathook into its hide, the scar remaining through the rest of its long life. When in May of the following year it arrived in London, I went to see it and inadvertently patted it, not knowing of the oily secretion. Consequently a pair of new kid gloves which I was wearing were utterly spoiled. A female was afterward obtained, and in 1871 was born the first hippopotamus ever produced in Europe. As its mother did not know how to manage it, the young calf was taken away and fed artificially. Taking it from its mother was a most perilous task, and, after a most exciting series of adventures, was achieved by Scott, the man who was afterward so well known as Jumbo's keeper. The little creature weighed about 100 pounds, but kicked and screamed like an adult, while its round, smooth body was so oily that Scott could scarcely hold it.

Now we turn to the head. The eyes, ears and nostrils are set nearly on the same plane, so that the animal can sink itself entirely below the surface, and be able to perceive the approach of foes by hearing, sight and scent. When it lies motionless and dozing in the water, it is naturally a little lighter than a corresponding bulk of water, and so floats with only a little of the back, and the ears, eyes and nostrils above the surface. But it often has to sink to swim for some distance under water. This necessity involves several other peculiarities of structure.—Good Words.

Names of Old Towns.

The Listener observes, not without a certain regret, that there is a tendency to introduce certain reforms in the pronunciation of the names of old Massachusetts towns. The pronunciation brought from England is being gradually dropped, and the sound approximated to the spelling of the word. What were once Stone'am and War'am have become Stoneham and Wareham, and what was Wooburn is now Woburn. Leominster was Lempster to begin with, and to the town in New Hampshire, which was named in honor of old Leominster in England, the name of Lempster was actually given. Perhaps it was the oldest inhabitants' ignorance of orthography that has preserved this testimony of the original pronunciation of the name. But in the mouths of the people of our Massachusetts Leominster, the name has first become Le'minster, and will, after awhile, it is to be supposed, be reformed another stage into Le-o-minster. The English Lester, for Leicester, has become Leecester with us; heaven preserve us from Lycester or Leecester.

One always hears Woorcester for Worcester; shall we presently hear Warces-ter? Happily there is an Ohio town of Wooster, which preserves in its spelling the original pronunciation, just as the New Hampshire Lempster keeps the original sound of Leominster. The Listener has even heard the crowning enormity of Portsmowth. This is worse than Porchmouth, which used to be heard. There are old people in Gloucester who call the name of the town Glockster. The Listener does not know where the usage came from. It is not as bad as Glow-ces-ter would be, which, it may fairly be supposed, will be the eventful pronunciation of the name of the town, if the present phonetic tendency continues. — Boston Transcript.

Artistic Taste in India.

The natives of India are a gentle, refined, art loving people. In no country, Italy not excepted, is the love of art more innate; and nowhere is there presented a higher standard of taste in figure posing and of effect in color combination, whether in embroidery, weaving or painting. In pottery and brass work their patterns are those which, for thousands of years, have most pleased mankind—combinations of slender, graceful, curved parts with massive parts—the same as are found in the pyramids of Egypt, in the tombs of Cyprus and in the ruins of Pompeii, and as today are imitated in the art pottery of Dresden and Worcester. Nothing can exceed in richness of coloring, delicacy and perfection of work, their paintings on ivory, especially figure painting—the most difficult of all. They are passionately fond of ornaments, of dress, of music, of flowers and delicate perfumes. They love illuminated books; are fond of coin collections, and the dwellings of the wealthy are models of exquisite taste in furnishings and decorations; and in architecture, the world might be challenged to produce the equal of that dream in marble—the Taj of India.—Journal of the Military Service Institute.

Fire Drill in Berlin Schools.

The school board of the city of Berlin has made the practice of leaving the class rooms and school buildings with order and promptitude a compulsory branch of study. At the opening of every new term both teachers and pupils must, at a given sign and in a prescribed order, leave the school, and that practical exercise is repeated until it is carried out by all classes to the satisfaction of the authorities. Every director is obliged to make a special report to the school board upon the success of the practice. In that way it is hoped to prevent loss of life in case of fire or other accidents in the school building. —Chicago News.

Sawing Lumber with the Grain.

A few years ago there was little if any lumber sawed quartered, or with the grain. Now not only oak but many other woods are being sawed more and more in that manner. Any consumer of lumber will tell you that it is far the better way to manufacture. We now have oak, poplar, gum and sycamore in large quantities thus sawed. It costs more to saw quartered stock than plain, but it is much more valuable. The waste is considerable.—Northwestern Lumberman.

Reunion of an Old Regiment.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Survivors of the First regiment New York volunteers, known as Stevenson's regiment, who left New York in September, 1846, to settle and conquer California, long before the discovery of gold, held a banquet last night and talked over their old experiences. Out of the 1,000 pioneers, 158 survive; many having remained and prospered in California. Gen. W. T. Sherman was their post adjutant. The regiment was disbanded at Monterey. The commander of the regiment, Col. Jonathan D. Stevenson, was one of those present last night. He is 83 years old.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—The [illegible] of Cook county has [illegible]

[illegible] Among these Indians, known as the Thlinkets, who inhabit the coast and contiguous islands of southeastern Alaska, the custom of cremation is universal, except in the case of shamans or medicine men, whose spirits after death inhabit a higher world apart from the common herd, and slaves who are considered scarcely worthy of this distinction.

The Thlinket believes that shortly before death the spirit of some loved friend gone before will appear to him, saying: "My dear brother, or good friend, you can last but a few suns longer, and it is best so, for life is but hard; so be ready, for I will soon come to lead your spirit to a land where all is happiness."

With the last breath tidings go out to the clan, who assemble with blackened faces to mourn the dead, and in former years the nearer relatives cut off the hair. The corpse is now dressed in the most valued garments, the face decorated in red and black, and placed in a sitting position, with back to the wall, opposite the entrance. All the property of the deceased is now brought and piled on either hand—the Thlinket counts his wealth in blankets, kept stored away in camphor wood or cedar chests. Masks, rattles, robes, guns, hunting and fishing implements and dancing paraphernalia are placed directly around; the head is surmounted by a grotesquely carved wooden mask in totemic design, brilliant in its inlaying of haliotis shell and topped by a semi-transparent forest of sea lion whiskers, while over the body is thrown a highly ornamental blanket, woven from the finer fleece of the mountain goat and worked in black, white, yellow and blue from old pattern boards that have been handed down through generations until the designs have become conventional.

For three days the dead remains a silent spectator of household affairs, which have to go on much as usual, as a number of families live under the same roof. Visitors come and go, food is prepared at the common central fire, and children toddle about, tumbling over the sleeping dogs; but a general air of quiet prevails until nightfall, when the tribe assemble with drum, rattle and dancing sticks, and to their measured accompaniment keep time in monotonous chant, eulogizing and lamenting the dead.

The scene is weird to a degree, the many colored blankets, the blackened faces, the walls hung with arms and fishing implements, the curiously carved and colored house posts; while festoons of dried fish and meat depend from the roof, and all seen through the fitful flashes of the great crackling fire of cedar logs, over which at intervals oil is dashed to redouble the effect.

For three nights this scene is repeated, but on the third day the wealth of the deceased is distributed among the relatives, each one receiving a certain portion, as judged by popular consent.

The funeral pyre is now erected directly in rear of the house or on the outskirts of the village, in proximity to the shore. Logs of the fragrant yellow cedar are now brought and laid upon each other, forming a hollow parallelogram seven feet long by three wide. At a height of from two to three feet a flooring of logs is laid, leaving air spaces between them, above which the walls are continued for another foot. Beneath the flooring and around the sides kindling and spruce knots, saturated with gum, are placed.

All being in readiness, on this, the fourth, day, the class assemble, a plank is removed from the side or end of the house, and through this opening the dead is carried on a mat made from the inner bark of the red cedar, for it is a strongly rooted superstition among these people that should the body pass through the doorway, that later the death spirit would return to claim more victims. As the body is carried out an old woman takes some coals and burning fragments from the fire and scatters them after it, to drive away the spirit of death and cleanse the passageway, and afterward throws out a dog to accompany its master's spirit to the world beyond.

The procession now makes its way slowly toward the place selected for cremation, and when reached the body is deposited on the raised flooring of the pyre and a torch applied to the resinous splinters readily igniting the whole mass. The women in full dancing habiliments, consisting of a blue black blanket faced with red cloth and ornamented with hundreds of mother of pearl buttons, fancy colored caps or headdresses of raven or eagle feathers, immense earrings and nose pendants, faces blackened and carrying in the right hand a long pole, the end decorated with sprigs of evergreen and bright streamers, form in a half circle about the head of the pile. The men, with dancing sticks and rattles, are grouped on one side. The nearer relatives sit about promiscuously, moaning and wailing. The older men lead the chant or dirge, which is joined in by all, and to its slow notes the women keep time with the body swaying from side to side and bowing in unison, reminding one of the famous sword dance of the Bedouins.

Oftentimes the arms and personal belongings of the deceased are thrown on the fire, which, by means of long poles, is constantly stirred, and the chant continues until the body is reduced to ashes and the logs consumed. The family collect any remains of bones and the supposed ashes, which are carefully deposited in small decorated boxes or trunks covered with cedar matting, corded with spruce roots, and finally placed in dead houses or family vaults directly in rear of the houses.

Every one now returns to the house, where a grand feast is prepared, consisting of dried salmon dipped in seal oil, herring spawn, potatoes, roots, berries, edible sea weed, shell fish, seal meat and tallow from the fat of the wild goat of the mountain. Food and grease are placed in carved platters and consigned to the flames, to sustain the deceased spirit on its weary journey. With the coming of night the men assemble, seating themselves around the fire, when the women in full dancing costume file in, forming in continuous rank around the walls, facing the audience of males, and repeat the swaying, bowing dance previously enacted at the cremation, keeping time to the chant. This closes the funeral ceremonies, which have now lasted through four days. The dead may be honored again in future years by a period of dancing and feasting, and the rebuilding of a deadhouse is always a season of ceremonial celebration.—G. F. Emmons in San Francisco Chronicle.

"Aunty" in the Kitchen.

Even to-day one will find in many Kentucky households survivals of the old order—find "Aunt Chloe" ruling as a despot in the kitchen, and making her will the pivotal point of the whole domestic system. I have spent nights with a Kentuckian, self-willed and high-spirited, whose occasional refusals to rise for a half past 5 o'clock breakfast always brought the cook from the kitchen up to his bedroom, where she delivered her commands in a voice worthy of Catherine the Great. "We shall have to get up," he would say, "or there'll be a row!" One may yet see, also, old negresses setting out for an annual or a semi-annual visit to their former mistresses and bearing [illegible] of fruits or flowers. I should like to mention the [illegible]

The idea of the "washout" gelatine process is not a new one. It certainly dates back a dozen years. But it was in 1884 that the patent under which the encyclopædia is being reproduced was first obtained. But then it was not practical. In two or three years several different owners of the patent found it an elephant on their hands, and because they could not work it practically—in other words, "to make money out of it"—failed. Finally a year ago it began to assume a more practical shape, and the company then working it took the contract from a firm of New York publishers to reproduce the encyclopædia. Like many new things the process was "cranky," and refused to work practically and steadily enough to produce the result aimed at. The thing dragged along, until finally last April the company made an assignment, and its plant and patent were bought by a former member of The Boston Globe's staff. He saw what simple changes were needed to make the process a success, and now plates for the new popular reprint of the encyclopædia are being turned out complete and ready for the press at the rate of 500 a week, while it seems that in the near future there will be practically no limit to the number of books that may be reproduced without setting a line of type.

It is the simplest thing in the world—that is, to explain on paper. Gelatine, when prepared by this secret process, has the property of becoming almost as hard as metal when exposed to the sunlight, and remaining soft and soluble when kept in the dark. When in a liquid state it is run out into thin sheets about "type high."

There is no international copyright. A copy of the English edition of the encyclopædia is cut up and carried to the photographers' room in this engraving establishment. The pages are put in front of large cameras and photographed. The result is a black and white negative—densely black and absolutely translucent, making a fac simile of the type pages. In the negative the black part of the page—that is, the type matter—is translucent, and the white part of the page—that is, the paper—is densely black.

These negatives are next placed in frames over the sheets of gelatine and exposed to the sunlight. Where the sun shines through the negative the gelatine becomes almost as hard as metal; where the black portion of the negative protects the gelatine it remains soft and soluble. The gelatine sheet thus "printed" is taken into a dark room and washed with a brush and ordinary water. The soluble portion disappears, leaving the hardened part—that is, the type—standing up in bold relief. It is practically exactly like a page of type set up and ready for the press. The gelatine plate is then electrotyped and from these electrotypes the book printed.

The illustrations are made in the same way. A dot or a line so fine that it can be seen only with the aid of a microscope "comes out" in the negative, and the minute ray of the sun that shines through that infinitesimal aperture hardens its infinitesimal molecule of gelatine.

English and other uncopyrighted works are now being reproduced by American publishers cheaper than they can be set in type, and without the trouble and delay of looking over proof sheets, etc. As leather goes into one end of a machine and comes out a finished shoe at the other, so English books go into this machine one day, and the next day plates come out complete from which American editions may be printed. Cuts are clipped from foreign books and periodicals, go through this process, and in a few days adorn our American books.—New York Letter.

A South American Visitor.

"There is something new," said a bird importer, pointing to what seemed to be half way between a turkey and a pheasant.

"What is it?" he was asked.

"A curassow. It is a native of South America, and does not come north of the Isthmus. A few of them have been imported to this country, and they seemed to take, and the probability is that they will become very popular. They are about the size of pea fowl, and their plumage varies from a glossy black to gray, and there is occasionally one that is mottled white and black. They have a peculiar tuft of feathers on top of their heads, which they can raise and lower at will. In Brazil these birds run at large like wild turkeys, and it is good sport shooting them. They are easily domesticated, and are wonderfully fine eating. There is such a demand for them that a large number will be brought up from South America, and they will be exhibited at the poultry shows this winter."—New York Mail and Express.

A State of Simplicity.

A civil and social state in which there was no place for barter or trade, must be a novel one at any rate, and it would be either very happy or very dull. A visitor to Monhegan Island, off the coast of Maine, this summer, found a child that was living in just that state of simplicity. The case is reported as follows:

Trading facilities are limited to one store. One day I offered a cent to a small child, but was surprised to hear it disdainfully refused with:

"What'd I do with it? My father keeps the store."—Youth's Companion.

American News in England.

Important news from several English papers: "In the United States the telephone is already being superseded. A writing telegraph is already working on a commercial scale and with marked success. The writer uses a stylus or pen, with which he writes in ordinary fashion, but only on the empty air. Before his face is a second pen, which reproduces his words on the tape in front of it. At the other end the receiving pen reproduces the message in fac simile."—New York Sun.

New York City Republican Ticket.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—The Republican conference at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night resulted in a decision to present the following city and county ticket at to-night's convention: For comptroller, John W. Knox; district attorney, Delancy Nicoll; judges supreme court, Henry H. Howland, Daniel G. Rollins; judge general sessions, George W. Lyon; judges city court, Ernst Hall, Charles K. Lexow; surrogate, Isaac Dayton; president of board of aldermen, James T. Van Rensselaer; coroner, Dennis Shea. A committee of seven, including Judges Patterson and Smith, Sheridan Shook, Elihu Root and Col. S. V. R. Cruger, were appointed to wait on Mr. Nicoll and ask him to accept the nomination. If he declines the convention will select another candidate.

BRIEF MENTION.

It is thought that the receipts of the Buffalo Music Festival will fall from $2,000 to $3,000 short of the amount guaranteed to the performers.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg railroad will be held on Nov. 1 to take into consideration the recommendation of the board of directors to increase the indebtedness of the company by the issue of $10,000,000 bonds of which $6,000,000 shall be used to take up the present outstanding indebtedness, and the remainder for extensions, new rolling stock, etc.

At the Oil Well.

On Thursday a vein of salt was found at a depth of about 120 feet. On the following day a new development was found in a trace of bluish petroleum oil on the top of the water. A layer of coal has also been struck. A delay is now caused by one of the drills being lost in the well at a depth of about 150 feet.

New Planing Mill.

Having rented the [illegible] Planing Mill I am now prepared to do all kinds of [illegible]

[illegible] the Dominion [illegible] and the [illegible] Agricultural convention. As the latter is the only one of special interest to your readers, I will not enter into details of the first two.

The Agricultural convention is called by virtue of an act of the Forty-Ninth Congress, and its membership consists of all the representatives of all the Agricultural College and experiment stations in the United States. The purpose of the meeting being to devise ways and means to improve the methods of farming and thus increase the fertility and productiveness of the agricultural area of the country. And it goes without saying that the discussion of these questions by such a representative and intelligent body—the mutual interchange of views and experiences, will be vastly beneficial to the farmers, veritably the bone and sinew of the land, upon their arduous labors depend the material prosperity and well being of the whole country.

There is considerable gossip in the political circles of the Capital about the the charges of bribery and political treachery brought against Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, by a prominent member of his own party. This man, Little, asserts openly these things of the Senator. The attack occupying fifteen columns in a newspaper. One of the most damaging allegations is that but for the action of the Senator in compassing by bribery the election of Sewell, his Republican Colleague, the United States Senate would have been Democratic several years ago. The gauntlet is boldly thrown down and the Senator challenged to a legal contest.

The Virginia State Officers have been liberated upon a writ of habeas corpus, upon their own recognizance, and the case is set for final hearing in the Supreme Court on the first Monday in November. It is the prevailing opinion that the decision of Judge Bond will be affirmed.

Generals Roger A. Pujer and Benjamin F. Butler will bring the cases of the Chicago Anarchists to the attention of the Supreme Court the last of this week, with the hope of securing a supercedas, and remanding the trial to the Illinois courts. Gen. Butler's retainer in this suit is $11,500 and $350 a day in addition while engaged upon it.

Mr. Oberly has materially modified his views on the relations of department officials who are members of political clubs to the civil service, and his colleague, Mr. Edgerton, takes issue with the original position of the former. The present attitude of the majority of the Civil Service Commission upon this question, I am sorry to say, is far from encouraging to the true friends of reform.

The examination of the War Department clerks, under the new civil service rules, which was suspended last summer, has been resumed, and in consequence, the clerks in all other departments are having their apprehension of going through this dread ordeal aroused, for eventually the revised rules will be applied to all.

There is a serious Cabinet disagreement reported over the Alaskan seal fishery question. Messrs. Bayard and Garland being the disputants—and it is given out that the Secretary of State will resign soon unless his views in this matter are shared by the President. It is true this report has been denied by one of those chiefly concerned, still I belive that the rumor is not entirely unfounded. The latest move of the Treasury, in lieu of the continued purchase of bonds, is an order increasing the number of national bank depositaries for government funds—the object being a diffusion of a few millions of the surplus that is becoming such an intolerable burden both to the administration and the people.

And came in, as I always do,
Because I can rely on you

From use of which such ills ensue.

[illegible] DAVIS.

HIS TRIP FROM BEAUVOIR TO MACON, GEORGIA.

Booming Cannon Along the Road—Remarkable Devotion Shown by the People to the Ex-Confederate President—An Enthusiastic Reception at Americus—Arrival at Macon.

MACON, Ga., Oct. 25.—At 9 o'clock Sunday night, after an elegant supper served to the Macon committee, Mr. Davis and family, accompanied by the escort, drove over to Beauvoir station and were soon made comfortable in the sleeper provided. The car was divided by curtains into two compartments, which gave to the city's guests all the privacy of a home. At 11 o'clock the party was spinning toward Mobile at the rate of forty-five miles an hour, and were soon wrapped in slumber.

At 6 o'clock Monday morning the special car received its first guests. It was met at Lethohatchie station by a car from Montgomery containing Mayor Reese, Col. W. W. Screws of the Advertiser, Col. Cecil Gabbott, Gen. John W. Sandford, Horace Hood of the Dispatch, N. H. Carr, Peyton Bibb, Miss Mary Ellmore, Marshal Reese, Mrs. John Sandford, Mrs. Ruthledge and others. The car was connected with the up train, and the ladies and committee went aboard and were pleasantly entertained. Mr. Davis was sleeping and it was thought best not to awaken him.

Montgomery was reached about 7:30 o'clock and the first sound that greeted the comers was the booming of cannons. Mr. Davis was still in his berth, but Gen. Sandford, in reply to the cheering, brought out Miss Winnie Davis and introduced her as "the daughter of the confederacy" amid the utmost enthusiasm. A reception in the Montgomery car immediately followed. Flowers in profusion were sent, the restaurant had prepared a splendid breakfast which was served on board the train while it was pulling out of the city. At no place along the route was there a larger crowd or more ladies. As may be imagined the honored guests, two of whom did not accompany Mr. Davis upon his last year's trip, were deeply touched by the devotion of the people.

At Thompson's the clamor was such as to cause him to put up his window and hold an informal reception. An old lady, standing on the outskirts of the crowd, called out loud enough to be heard by everybody: "Mr. Davis, God bless you, sir." He replied: "My people, I am glad to see you all."

Another voice called out from the crowd, "Mr. Davis, the last time I saw you was at Fortress Monroe." "Well," was the answer, "we meet now under pleasanter circumstances." As the train moved on the explosion of torpedoes underneath mingled with the lessening cheers.

At Americus a dense crowd was gathered and cannon were furnishing the bass for the chorus of voices that hailed its arrival. Mr. Davis and family, surrounded by the faithful committee, passed under an arch upon the platform, and were greeted with enthusiastic cheers. Mr. Davis spoke briefly. He said that his people had received tender kindness at Americus once; that they returned under better circumstances. He thanked them for the renewed evidence of their affection and asked God's blessing upon them.

The flowers at this point simply surpassed description: "To the daughter of Mr. Davis; from the young ladies of Americus," was written upon a card attached to a magnificent basket on whose handle perched a white dove, and all along the route were the same demonstrations. The party arrived in Macon at 6 o'clock. To-day's reception will be tendered the ladies.

THE STRIKING SHOEMAKERS.

Their Differences With the Manufacturers' Association No Nearer Settled.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—The differences existing between the shoemakers and manufacturers are no nearer a settlement than they were last week. A meeting of the employes was held yesterday, when the question was fully discussed as to what further action should be taken.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. W. F. Ward, president of the Sailer & Lewins Shop Association. There were present five delegates from each of the twenty-three locked-out shops, employed by the Manufacturers' Association. The meeting was held in secrecy, but the assemblage, which represented the whole number of shops now idle, adopted a resolution with unqualified indorsement of the district assembly and the executive committee for their action. A communication was forwarded to the executive committee of the Manufacturers' Association, but the employes refused to make known its contents.

Secretary Townsend of the Manufacturers' Association executive committee renewed the communication yesterday afternoon. He also considered it imprudent to divulge its contents until the committee had framed its reply to it.

President Zeigler of the manufacturers' executive committee stated that the inference drawn from this lookout "is that the manufacturers were willing to shut up their shops. This is untrue. There is not a manufacturer in the city but what has plenty of work for his employes. The business has never been so brisk at this time of the season as it is now within the past four years. The question of replacing the locked-out employes has never been considered yet; one thing is certain, that when they do go back it will be to work under different circumstances than what they were when they went out."

MR. BLUNT'S ARREST.

AN ERROR ON THE PART OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Leaguers Rejoicing—An Appeal Probable in Case of Conviction—Murmurs Against Balfour—The Unemployed Workmen of London Hold a Quiet Meeting at Deptford—General Foreign News.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—If the Nationalists had been seeking diligently to dig some pitfall into which the wavering feet of the government might stumble no success could have crowned their efforts half so completely as that which will result from the arrest of Sir Wilfred Blunt. The members of the Irish league on all hands are rejoicing at the new blunder and the incentive that they feel will be given to Ireland's cause. It is admitted that while the arrest of Sir Wilfred is technically legal, as that district was proclaimed against any meeting of the kind that was intended, yet it is no less plain to the people at Dublin Castle that it is a most serious misfortune to the government that the affair ever happened. It will be the golden peg on which their opponents may hang their arguments.

That the incident will be made the most of and used on every occasion to the confusion of government supporters cannot be doubted. If the government proceeds so far as to impose a fine upon Sir Wilfred Blunt, or to sentence him to prison to serve a term, as is done in the case of the Nationalists, a more grievous error still will be committed for an appeal will be taken and without doubt the appeal would be sustained.

The government are beginning to realize more forcibly than ever that their attempt to subdue Ireland by coercion is resulting in a series of mistakes and blunders which will not be forgotten but are being carefully remembered, and at each coming election of parliament will be brought into requisition and used with telling effect against them.

Although it is not heard openly as yet a decided murmuring among the Tories is rising and growing in strength against the author of their misfortunes, namely, Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Irish secretary. It is asserted that the Liberals will name Sir Wilfred Blunt for the parliamentary seat of Deptford, made vacant by the resignation of Mr. William John Evelyn. At the last election, Mr. Evelyn, the Conservative candidate, was elected over the Liberal candidate by a few hundred votes only, and in the light of present events it is expected that a Liberal can be returned easily.

Sunday's efforts on the part of the unemployed who made a scene in Westminster Abbey seems to have exhausted them, and the meeting held by them last night at Deptford, on the outskirts of London, was without incident worthy of mention.

The Irish Times asserts that the Joseph Chamberlain has received from New York a letter threatening him that if he appeared on a platform in America to speak against home rule he would not leave alive.

Mr. William O'Brien has gone to Woodford to render what assistance he can to Sir Wilfred Blunt.

Wilks, the telegraph operator who was arrested a month ago, charged with holding messages about the races, thereby bilking the bookmakers, has confessed.

Mr. E. H. Edgerton, first secretary of the English embassy at Paris, wired to the foreign office that at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the treaties regarding both the Suez canal and the new Hebrides were signed.

TAKEN TO PRISON.

Blunt is Escorted to Jail by a Procession and Brass Band.

DUBLIN, Oct. 25.—Sir Wilfred Blunt and Mr. Roche, his fellow-prisoner, were taken from the Loughrea jail yesterday and taken to Woodford under a strong escort of soldiers. On the way they were met by Messrs. Rowlands and Sheehy, members of parliament, who were leading a large procession, which was accompanied by a band. The procession now turned about and escorted the prisoners to the court-house, the band playing all the way lively times. The greatest good humor prevailed. The prisoners were arraigned before two magistrates, who refused to adjourn the case for a fortnight as was requested, and remanded the hearing for to-day. Sir Wilfred gave bail and was released from custody.

The latter blames Divisional Magistrate Byrne for the whole affair, who, he says, precipitated the row by his hasty measures.

Mr. Timothy Harrington has been wired for to appear as counsel for Sir Wilfred Blunt. The latter has been the recipient of great ovations throughout the entire day.

The Crown Prince's Health.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 25.—The Independence publishes a letter from Dr. Sigismund, a prominent American, who is a friend of Dr. Sir Morel Mackenzie, in which the former corrects some of the errors that have been published regarding the health of the German crown prince. Dr. Sigismund states that Prince Frederick's voice would have been lost forever if he had submitted to the treatment of German physicians.

The Police Again Outwitted.

DUBLIN, Oct. 25.—Sunday a large meeting of the National League was held at Kilrush, county Clare. The meeting had been proclaimed, but the police were outwitted and 6,000 members of the league, with bands playing and banners flying, met within a few miles of Kilrush and held a monster meeting. The projectors of the meeting had previously taken the precaution to cut the telegraph wires.

Rulers to Meet in Conference.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 25.—M. Stambuloff, Bulgarian prime minister, is coming here to arrange for a meeting between Prince Ferdinand and Kings Charles of Roumenia and Milan of Servia. Each of the rulers favors the meeting in the hope of arriving at a mutual arrangement for the suppression of the common dangers that threaten them.

Sentenced for Printing News.

DUBLIN, Oct. 25.—Mr. Walsh, proprietor of the Wexford People, received yesterday a sentence of one month's imprisonment for publishing reports of the National League in his paper. He appealed from the sentence and was released on bail.

THE SEASON WANING.

BASE BALL MEN PLAYING THEIR LAST GAMES.

Five Thousand Detroiters Look on While Members of Their Club Are Presented With Magnificent Testimonials—One Man Gets Over Five Hundred Silver Dollars—The Wolverines Win.

DETROIT, Oct. 25.—The base ball season of 1887 closed here yesterday in a blaze of glory and despite a keen atmosphere 5,000 Detroiters saw the wind up. The game was a fine one and resulted in a splendid victory for Detroit. The feature of the day was the presentations to the players. Dan Brouthers was the first victim, he getting the handsome zylonite bat given by Spalding to the best batter in the Detroit club. Tip O'Neil got a handsome basket of flowers from his Woodstock friends. Charley Ganzel came next, drawing a handsome gold watch and chain, and then came the great event.

A wheelbarrow, in the center of which was a large wooden chopping bowl filled to the brim with silver dollars, 520 in all, was wheeled into the grounds and presented to Charley Bennett. A fife and drum band preceded the barrow and played Yankee Doodle in a vigorous manner. Charley was compelled to wheel the mint around the bases which he did amidst thunders of applause. After the excitement had subsided the game proceeded.

The Wolverines won with ease, outbatting, outfielding and outrunning the Browns. The champions and ex-champions play at Chicago Tuesday and wind up the season at St. Louis Wednesday. Score:

Two Negroes Lynched.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 25.—Eight days ago two young ladies, daughters of Mrs. Barker, postmistress at Lamar, Franklin Parish, La., were awakened by a noise at their bedroom window and saw a burly negro entering the room. The girls screamed for help and the burglar sprang to the ground. An axe helve was found on the window sill, which was identified as belonging to Perry King. Last Tuesday King was arrested and a posse sent after Drew Green, against whom there was also strong proof. Green was captured at Tallulah and carried back to Lamar. Information reached this city yesterday that last Thursday morning an armed body of seventy-five men rode into Lamar and took the prisoners from the guard. Later in the day their dead bodies were found hanging to limbs of trees just out of town. A full confession was made by King that he and Green had entered the room for the purpose of assaulting the young ladies. Both negroes were bad characters and King had served a term in the penitentiary.

Turgeneff's Peculiarities.

Turgeneff was very neat about his person, changing his underclothing every day, etc. Polonsky's surprise at his manner of brushing his hair led to the statement of a curious fact with regard to Turgeneff's skull. "I brush it fifty times on the right side, fifty on the left, then I take this comb and pass it through 100 times. What are you surprised at? There is still another comb—a fine one." Then he explained that his love of brushing his hair was inherited from his mother, who was once seized with a mania for dressing everybody's hair. She combed the heads of the maids, and once in Moscow called a poor old invalid soldier in from the street, seated him at her dressing table, combed, arranged and anointed his hair, and then gave him money and dismissed him. In continuation of this subject he mentioned the curious fact above referred to. He was convinced that his temples had never grown over in infancy and that his brain was covered only by the skin on the spot where there is a slight depression. "When I was at boarding school," he said, "I felt a sort of giddiness whenever the children tapped on my temples with their fingers, and as children never have any mercy, sometimes they pressed my temples intentionally and almost made me faint."

Turgeneff was not wholly wrong on on this point, for when the doctors examined him after death they found that his skull was very thin, and possibly it was thinner still on his temples, so that it actually did yield under strong pressure, particularly in childhood.

He was as particular as he was personally neat. He always put things in order when he found them strewn about—the children's playthings, clothing, etc., like a nurse. And once, when he had forgotten to put his scissors in place, he got out of bed, lighted a candle, and only went back when everything on his writing table was in due order. He could not write if anything was out of place.—Miss Hapgood in The Independent.

Designer of the Yacht America.

I have heard a great deal in the way of reminiscence about the America recently. Her designer, George Steers, was pretty badly treated it seems. Stevens offered him $20,000 for a boat that would lead in the yachting contests. The contract being that she was to win all three of a certain series of [illegible]

THE APPEAL OF THE ANARCHISTS.

The Supreme Court Will Hear Counsel on Thursday Next.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The following is the text of the order made by the supreme court of the United States yesterday upon the motion of counsel for the Chicago Anarchists for the allowance of a writ of error to the supreme court of Illinois:

"Following the precedent in Twitchell vs. the Commonwealth, 7 Wall. 321, we have permitted this motion to be made in open court at the suggestion of Mr. Justice Harlan, to whom the application was first presented on account of the urgency of the case and its importance. But, as we said in that case, 'writs of error to the state courts have never been allowed of as right,' that is to say, of course, and it is the duty of him to whom an application for such a writ is made to ascertain from an examination of the record of the state court 'whether any question cognizable here on appeal was made and decided in the proper court of the state and whether the case on the face of the record will justify the allowance of the writ.'

"Deeming that the proper practice, we will hear counsel on Thursday next in support of this motion, not only upon this point, whether any federal questions were actually made and decided in the supreme court of the state, but also upon the character of those questions, so that we may determine whether they are such as to make it proper for us to bring the cases here for review.

"We have caused the attorney-general of Illinois to be informed that the motion will be heard at the time stated."

THREATENING BANDITS.

A Texas County Infested With Bands of Lawless Mexicans.

GALVESTON, Tex., Oct. 25.—A special to the News from Rio Grande City, Tex., says that Starr county is infested with bandits from Mexico, who are terrorizing the inhabitants. On Saturday a company of them entered Rio Grande City and mailed two letters to merchants, one in Rome and one in Rio Grande City, telling them that if they did not at once raise $15,000 and $8,000 respectively for the bandits their stores would be blown up with dynamite.

Governor Ross has been asked for assistance, but no response has yet been received. There are United States troops at Ringgold, near Rio Grande City, but before they could be moved by means of the slow official routine the bandits could complete their outrage and be at a safe distance in Mexico. Parties of bandits ride through the towns at night and the authorities are powerless to preserve order. Stage travel is dangerous.

ON TRIAL FOR MURDER.

The Alleged Assassin of Sophia Smith Brought Into Court.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—Robert G. Hall, an ex-variety actor, charged with the murder of Sophia N. Smith, alias Lillian Rivers, on June 2 last, was called for trial before Judge Arnold yesterday. Hall, who presented a brighter appearance than when he was last in court for arraignment, was brought up from prison at 10 o'clock and was given a seat in the dock. Assistant District Attorney Liner and District Attorney Graham appeared for the commonwealth, while the defendant was represented by Henry M. Dubois and John Scully.

At 11 o'clock the empanelling of a jury was begun. When the jurors had all answered to their names they were asked whether they had any prejudice against insanity as a defense. The prisoner watched the jurors and observed closely the actions and arguments of his counsel, at times playing with his watch-chain, and at others fumbling with pieces of paper. The prisoner's aged father occupied a seat near his son's counsel. District-Attorney Graham opened the case for the commonwealth, after which the testimony for the commonwealth was begun.

Several witnesses were examined, but thus far no new facts were elicited. The court adjourned for the day.

The selling died out just before noon, and most of the decline was recovered by midday. There were no features in connection with the dealings. The sales to midday were 124,000 shares. The most active stocks were Reading, Union Pacific, St. Paul and Missouri Pacific. Mrs. Hattie VanAuken, a life prisoner in the Onondaga Penitentiary, died at that institution at 5:30 o'clock Sunday morning, aged 37. She had been sick in the hospital for about one year from a cancer. Last winter an effort was made to obtain her pardon, Father Cline of East Syracuse and the penitentiary physicians and officers interesting themselves in her behalf, since it was evident that her illness must terminate fatally. Governor Hill, however, declined to interfere with the execution of her sentence to imprisonment for life, possibly because at the time the request was made to him the public mind was much wrought up over the execution of Mrs. Druse. Mrs. VanAuken murdered her husband. The story of the horrible crime, one of the most brutal and atrocious in the criminal records of the country, is best told in the confession of George Mandeville, who was arrested as an accessory:

"On the 19th of July, 1877, I was working at John McMath's, about two miles from Mrs. VanAuken's house in Parish. Mrs. VanAuken brought me up and gave me the name of Mandeville, after her first husband. My real name is George Mathews. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon of July 19, 1877, Mrs. Van Auken came to McMath's in a buggy alone. She told me that Darius (her husband) had gone away West and was not coming back any more; that she wanted me to come home with her and hoe the corn. I got into the buggy with her and we started for home. The road passes through a piece of woods between McMath's and our house. When we got into the woods Mrs. Van Auken stopped the horse, pulled a pistol out of her bosom and looked at me savage-like. She said: "I have killed Darius and I want you to help me get rid of him. If you do as I tell you and keep your mouth shut you'll be all right, but if you let on a word, by God! I'll put a bullet through your head and send you to hell quicker than I did him." She was an awful tempered woman, and I was afraid of her. I told her I would tell nothing, and she drove on to the house. She told me to stay outside, feed the horse and see if anybody was coming. I fed the horse grass, and after a little while went into the house. It is a log house with one big room, and a curtain across it. Back of the curtain the bed was. The curtain came down to the floor. The floor and side of the room under the window were all bloody. She pulled a tub out from under the bed. In the tub was the body of Darius all cut up into pieces. It was an awful sight, and I daren't look at it. She took three bags and held one out in her hand. She lifted out the pieces and put them into the bag until it was most full. She did the same to the other bags and got all the pieces in. She told me to take one of the bags and put it in the buggy—shove it under the seat. I did it and she took another. I went back and got the third bag. All the bags wouldn't go under the seat and one of them stuck out under our feet. She got a large rubber cloth and when we got in she put it over our laps and then covered up the bag. By this time it was near sundown and she drove off. When we got about a quarter of a mile we met two men. They stopped and wanted to know if we wouldn't trade horses. Mrs. VanAuken whipped up and said no, she hadn't time. We drove along until it began to get dark. She said she was going to put stones in the bags and sink them in the lake (Oneida lake). It got awful dark and we couldn't see the road at all. We went in a roundabout way and had only got about two miles and a-half from the house by the direct road. She told me again that if I ever told a word about it she would shoot me like a dog. I swore I wouldn't tell and would do anything she wanted me to. I was afraid she would kill me. When we got about forty rods from Putterville swamp she told me it was so dark she wouldn't go any further, that it could be buried here as well as anywhere, and told me to get out, take the spade—we had a spade in the buggy—and see if the ground is all right. I got out and felt around—I couldn't see anything—but the ground was hard and stony, and we went to Putterville. When we got to about the middle of the swamp, she told me to get out and go into the bushes and find a place; to dig deep and make no noise. I did as she told me. I dug a hole and then went to the buggy and got one of the bags. I had hard work to find the hole, but at last I found it. I emptied the bag into the hole and covered it up. I did the same with the two other bags. I couldn't tell how near the holes were, for I couldn't see anything at all. Had to feel my way. When I was emptying the last bag the thought suddenly came over me that when I had buried Darius she would kill me and bury my body in the swamp, too, so there would be no witness against her. I thought first I would run into the swamp but I finally concluded not to and went back into the buggy. On our way back about 9 o'clock we passed some men that were standing in front of a tavern. They said something to us and she whipped up the horse and drove in on a keen run for most a mile. When the horse couldn't go so fast any longer she stopped and listened. Suddenly she grabbed me by the neck and said: 'They're coming. ——— you, if you say a word I'll blow you to hell in a minute.' I said, 'Nobody is coming. I won't say a word to nobody.'"

47. Enoch Arden, and other gems. By Alfred Tennyson. For purity of style, genuine sweetness and touching pathos, the great poet has never surpassed his "Enoch Arden." In this poem of human affection he is at his best, and one cannot know the poet-laureate without knowing it.

History of the U. S.

Bound in Leatherette Tree Calf.

Regular Price $2.00.

This dainty book of 320 pages is indispensable to every one as a work of quick and convenient reference. It is upon an entirely novel and original plan, which makes it indispensible to every person, no matter how many other histories he may have.

The arrangement is chronologically, by years, from 432 to 1887. Every event is narrated in the order of its date. These are not confined, as in other works, to political matters, but embrace every branch of human action. It described under its proper date all important patents; all discoveries in science and the useful arts; fires, floods, hailstorms, tornadoes, cyclones, epidemics, accidents and disasters on sea and land; labor troubles, strikes and lockouts, and hundreds of other matters never mentioned by historians. Besides being a history in the ordinary sense, it is a condensed newspaper file for four hundred years. Over 100,000 copies were presented to subscribers during 1886, and every one who received a copy was charmed and delighted.

Hist'ry of England

Bound in Leatherette Tree Calf.

Regular Price $2.00.

Thus, the second of THE WORLD'S History Series, is uniform in style and arrangement with its History of the United States. As a storehouse of facts it is without a rival. Every history of England has been carefully searched for data, and many important corrections have been made in the commonly received chronology. Like its companion volume, it is much more than an ordinary history, embracing every branch of human action, and its facts are gathered from thousands of sources not touched by any historian. Attention has been particularly directed to the Victorian era, and the dates of every important event of her reign are given with a minuteness of detail that renders it invaluable to every student of our own times. As a work of convenient reference for the editor, teacher, pupil and general newspaper reader, nothing like it has ever been published, and it will take the place in every library not only of the hundreds of books in which is scattered the information here gathered together, but of files of newspapers for the past century. The History of England is a little larger than the History of the United States

Everybodys Guide

Bound in Leatherette Tree Calf.

Regular Price $2.00.

This is uniform in style and binding with the histories, but a much larger book than either, containing 410 closely printed pages of fine type. It is a condensation, by the author of Moore's "Universal Assistant," containing everything making that work so popular, and omitting only such of the business forms and illustrations as added to the bulk without increasing its usefulness. The "Universal Assistant" originally sold for $10, and has become almost as necessary in every household as a dictionary or a clock. The value of the work lies in the fact that the information is of the kind needed in ordinary daily life, yet cannot be obtained without reference to rare and costly books, and is not found in encyclopædias. It tells the housewife how to make fresh extracts, the husband how to break well or mend ailing horses. It reveals the secrets of the dyer and bleacher, of the grocer and confectioner, and of all special trades. A table of contents would fill six columns of THE WORLD. The binding is leatherette tree calf of a slightly different design, both in the "tree" and the gilt, from the histories.

FINGER AND TOE PHOTOS.

An Album Which Contains a Curious Collection of Pictures—Hands and Feet.

"My hand and foot album" is the dainty inscription on the cover of a small but highly prized volume belonging to a young lady living in the Mission. The book is bound in morocco and was evidently intended by its maker as an album for small card photographs of the regulation portrait order. The novel use to which it is now put has made of the little volume one of the oddest of curios. In nearly every one of the spaces prepared for portraits is a photograph of a feminine hand or foot.

"How did I get this collection? Well, if you won't write anything ridiculing it I'll tell you."

That is what the owner of the album said to a reporter.

"You see," she went on, as she turned the leaves of the interesting volume, "some of the girls in this part of town with whom I am acquainted hit upon the idea of having their hands photographed. I believe the first one wanted to perpetuate the taper finger on which she had just had an engagement ring placed. The picture was taken in a little circle, with star points all around it, and showed nothing but the hand and a portion of the wrist. Here it is, you see."

A remarkably pretty hand, white and dimpled like a baby's, was shown.

"Yes, that was the first, I believe. The girl showed it around among a few of her most intimate friends, of whom I am one, and they all thought the picture such a 'cute' one that they immediately made up their minds to have something after the same style taken of their own hands. Of course, they didn't all have engagement rings on, but some of them made believe by using other rings, and others had their hands taken plain, as you will see, without any ring at all."

"But about these feet?" asked the reporter as slippered and booted extremities were shown in passing.

"Well," said the owner of the album, just the least bit shyly, "you know when girls get started on such notions as these they always go from one thing to another. At first they thought it would be awful to follow out such a suggestion, but finally a very brave possessor of a pair of No. 2's said she wasn't afraid, and if the other girls would go with her to the gallery she would sit for a foot photograph. So they went, and the result was that the whole party (except one girl, who wore No. 5's) had their feet taken. You can see them here in all positions and styles."

In nearly every case there was a fringe of dress skirt above the shoe or slipper, but in one or two instances this was lacking. However, nothing betokening immodesty could be observed. There were high, arched insteps and low, broad toes and narrow, but nearly all wore common sense low heels, as the average mission girl knows that running to catch a car with a pencillike heel under her is anything but nice, and there is a good deal of car catching done in the mission.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Thrift of a Boston Householder.

A man who owns an apartment house on Back bay was asked the other day if he had let all the suites in it.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "I have just let the last to summer boarders."

"Summer boarders!" repeated the other. "What in the world do you mean?"

Whereupon the householder explained that the lessees were people from New Orleans, who came north when the heats of spring came on, and who took the apartments for the year in order to be provided with accommodations which pleased them. This suggests unlimited possibilities of the Box and Cox order. The owners of apartments who are shrewd enough and of a commercial conscience sufficiently flexible will hereafter endeavor to let furnished suites to northerners for the winter and to southerners for the summer, each tenant, of course, paying a full year's rent. From such a practice to light comedy is, of course, but a step. One family will be a day late in moving in or one family will be a day late in moving out, and there is an excuse for a tangle of complications only limited by the boundaries of the invention of the author.—Providence Journal.

Englishmen Insulted at Waterloo.

English visitors to the battlefield of Waterloo complain in the Belgian papers of the molestation and insults to which they have been exposed by so called guides over the battlefield. The communal authorities of Waterloo and the neighboring localities will do well to look after the matter unless they wish to kill the goose which lays the golden eggs during the tourist season. In former years, twenty and thirty years ago, some of the guides had heard the cannon roar during the battle, although an intelligent questioner very soon found out that they had done so at a considerable distance from the field of battle; but the so called guides of the present time are nothing else but a set of the most rapacious and rude ragamuffins.—Brussels Cor. London Times.

An Undeveloped Bonanza.

The chief plant products of West Africa having a present economic value are, according to a new handbook by Capt. Alfred Moloney, palm oil, ground nuts, india rubber, coffee, gum, dye woods, cacao, cotton, fibers and timbers. Palm oil is obtained from a plant covering immense areas, and is imported to England to the value of nearly $5,000,000 yearly. A new product is the "white African rubber," from landolphia owariensis, in which the trade has risen during the last four years from almost nothing to nearly $180,000. Many plants yield valuable gums, and many have important medicinal properties. There is besides a wonderful botanical wealth whose possible practical value is yet unknown.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Picture of a Mountaineer.

Bridger's appearance indicated his age to be 48, but he was remarkably spare and thin of flesh and nearly six feet in height. Altogether he was the most remarkable white man I ever met on mountain or plain in his personal appearance and demeanor. Dressed in the clothing of a white man, he seemed to wear it as a stranger to the garb of civilized life. Surrounded, as he had been, so many years by constant dangers, that even while sitting at a camp fire in the midst of white men his eyes were taking in every moving thing in the entire circle of his vision, slowly moving his eyes from over one shoulder around to gaze over the other shoulder so as to complete the circle, taking in everything as far as he could see. [illegible]

[illegible] meant just what is said.

"There is more than one house in New York," he said, "where single men rent rooms and do their own housekeeping, cooking, making beds, sweeping and so on, and a nice life it is if a man is built that way. I am proud to say that while I was down on my luck I occupied an alcove room in this house mentioned in the advertisement. I paid $3 a week and lived for $2 more. A legacy left to me by my aunt has put higher living in my power, and I left my bachelor room with regret. The life was pleasant, and after I became a bit expert at cooking I assure you that I cooked many a dainty with all the skill of a French chef."

The writer visited the house where the furnished rooms for housekeeping for gentlemen were located. The ring at the bell was answered by a tidy Irish girl, who said that they had one room vacant. The landlady was summoned and showed the reporter up two flights to a back room.

"This is to rent with all the necessaries for light housekeeping. A closet in the hall is the place for your coal and your green groceries and an ice box for your meat. The price is $4 per week."

HOME CONVENIENCES.

The room was about fourteen feet square. It contained a folding bed, a cheap chiffonniere, on which were two teacups and saucers of fanciful pattern. In the different compartments were other dishes of stoneware and glass. A cupboard stood at the right of the mantel, in which were two tablecloths, four napkins, a quilt and a woolen blanket, and in a lower compartment an iron pot, a spider and two stew pans. The stove was a No. 5, with two covers, and was polished brightly. A wardrobe, sofa, easy chair, two dining chairs and a round table were placed about the room in convenient positions.

"You don't rent rooms to women?" remarked the reporter.

"No, indeed; I don't want any women about my house. They are more trouble than they are worth. I used to rent rooms to women, but they found fault with everything. They washed their clothes in the bathroom and invaded the kitchen at all times in the day to borrow flatirons. I have a houseful of gentlemen who cook, eat and sleep here, and I never hear a word of complaint and seldom see them, only when they pay their rent."

"What class of men do you have?"

"I have with me now a reporter, an actor, a street car conductor, a florist, an engineer on the Elevated railroad, a bookkeeper, two clerks who cook together, and a policeman."

At this point the lady was informed of the object of the reporter's visit, and she sat down to enlighten him further.

"I am an English woman," she said, "and kept lodgings in London before coming to New York. There it is a common thing for men to do their own housekeeping. I came to New York as a waiting maid to an English actress. Liking the city I concluded to stop here, and conceived the idea of renting rooms to gentlemen only. At first I did not meet with success, but now I can rent all of my rooms. I pay $100 a month for this house. I have eight rooms that bring me in $140. There is $40 profit on my rent. Then I get my living from my roomers. You see, it's this way. A woman nine times out of ten will throw away her waste, but a man won't. My rooms give me more than I can eat—a bunch of celery and other green stuff, meat and fruit that will spoil, and of which they had purchased too much. My servant girl costs me $8 a month only, but she doesn't do anything but laundry work and my cooking. My roomers make their own beds, and very handy they are at it."

THROUGH THE ROOMS.

The lady then took the reporter through the house. Only one room was untidy, and that was the actor's. Clay pipes and tobacco were scattered over the mantel; shoes, slippers and clothing were thrown about the room, while on the bed, slovenly made up, was a pile of manuscript and books.

"This man is an actor of good parts," explained the lady, "but he is slouchy about his room. Quite different is the next room that is occupied by the engineer."

This room was neatness personified. The bed was as smooth as could be, the floor was swept clean, and the tin pans were as bright as the brasses on his engine probably were. A small library was suspended on a shelf containing books on railroading, a dictionary and Shakespeare.

Other rooms visited showed the same neatness, but each had some characteristic of the occupant by way of ornament. The policeman had two clubs crossed over his mantel with a pair of boxing gloves between them. The clerk's room was fixed up with plush holders for brushes and papers, with the photographs of noted actresses stuck here and there on the walls. A pile of poker chips and a pack of cards were most conspicuous in the bookkeeper's room, but the beds were well made and the floors and dishes clean.

"These men," said the lady, "are up early, get their breakfast, wash their dishes, dress for business and are off, all of them before 8 o'clock. They return from 4 to 7 at night, get their supper and go out again. They are quiet and better tenants than any I ever had."

"Is poverty the cause of their living in this way?"

"Oh, no, I guess not. You know the old saying that one half the world doesn't know how the other half lives. I saw the bookkeeper's salary envelope one week and it had $50 marked on it. I am sure that all of my lodgers except the actor get good salaries. He sometimes doesn't get any; but I let him stop, for he pays when he can."

At this juncture a neatly dressed gentleman came in and passed up the stairs. It was the bookkeeper, and the reporter recognized him as a familiar sight in the hotel rotundas, a good fellow all around, and supposed to live at a fashionable boarding house up town.

The shopping for the roomers was done by the girl, who bought whatever the lodger wished, taking his book to the store and entering each article of provision purchased, for which the men paid weekly. —New York Evening Sun.

Confederate Captives at Big Shanty.

A large cable, fastened to stakes, encircled us round, on the outside of which walked the soldiers who guarded us. They all walked the same way, and the soldier whose post was No. 1 bawled out when he neared either end of his walk, "Right about!" which was the signal for all the guards on duty to right about at the same time and so prevent any chance of a prisoner's crawling away unperceived. I was struck with this wise precaution on the part of the enemy, for already I was beginning to look for some chance to get away, and doubtless others of those shut-in Confederates were doing the same. As it was, the regular tramp, tramp of the soldiers' feet and the clock like "right about!" [illegible]

[illegible] of its long life. When in May of the following year it arrived in London I went to see it and inadvertently patted it, not knowing of the oily secretion. Consequently a pair of new kid gloves which I was wearing were utterly spoiled. A female was afterward obtained, and in 1871 was born the first hippopotamus ever produced in Europe. As its mother did not know how to manage it, the young calf was taken away and fed artificially. Taking it from its mother was a most perilous task, and, after a most exciting series of adventures, was achieved by Scott, the man who was afterward so well known as Jumbo's keeper. The little creature weighed about 100 pounds, but kicked and screamed like an adult, while its round, smooth body was so oily that Scott could scarcely hold it.

Now we turn to the head. The eyes, ears and nostrils are set nearly on the same plane, so that the animal can sink itself entirely below the surface, and be able to perceive the approach of foes by hearing, sight and scent. When it lies motionless and dozing in the water, it is naturally a little lighter than a corresponding bulk of water, and so floats with only a little of the back, and the ears, eyes and nostrils above the surface. But it often has to sink to swim for some distance under water. This necessity involves several other peculiarities of structure.—Good Words.

Names of Old Towns.

The Listener observes, not without a certain regret, that there is a tendency to introduce certain reforms in the pronunciation of the names of old Massachusetts towns. The pronunciation brought from England is being gradually dropped, and the sound approximated to the spelling of the word. What were once Stone'am and War'am have become Stoneham and Wareham, and what was Wooburn is now Woburn. Leominster was Lempster to begin with, and to the town in New Hampshire, which was named in honor of old Leominster in England, the name of Lempster was actually given. Perhaps it was the oldest inhabitants' ignorance of orthography that has preserved this testimony of the original pronunciation of the name. But in the mouths of the people of our Massachusetts Leominster, the name has first become Le'minster, and will, after awhile, it is to be supposed, be reformed another stage into Le-o-minster. The English Lester, for Leicester, has become Leecester with us; heaven preserve us from Lycester or Leecester.

One always hears Woorcester for Worcester; shall we presently hear Warces-tor? Happily there is an Ohio town of Wooster, which preserves in its spelling the original pronunciation, just as the New Hampshire Lempster keeps the original sound of Leominster. The Listener has even heard the crowning enormity of Portsmowth. This is worse than Porchmouth, which used to be heard. There are old people in Gloucester who call the name of the town Glockster. The Listener does not know where the usage came from. It is not as bad as Glow-ces-ter would be, which, it may fairly be supposed, will be the eventful pronunciation of the name of the town, if the present phonetic tendency continues. — Boston Transcript.

Artistic Taste in India.

The natives of India are a gentle, refined, art loving people. In no country, Italy not excepted, is the love of art more innate; and nowhere is there presented a higher standard of taste in figure posing and of effect in color combination, whether in embroidery, weaving or painting. In pottery and brass work their patterns are those which, for thousands of years, have most pleased mankind—combinations of slender, graceful, curved parts with massive parts—the same as are found in the pyramids of Egypt, in the tombs of Cyprus and in the ruins of Pompeii, and as today are imitated in the art pottery of Dresden and Worcester. Nothing can exceed in richness of coloring, delicacy and perfection of work, their paintings on ivory, especially figure painting—the most difficult of all. They are passionately fond of ornaments, of dress, of music, of flowers and delicate perfumes. They love illuminated books; are fond of coin collections, and the dwellings of the wealthy are models of exquisite taste in furnishings and decorations; and in architecture, the world might be challenged to produce the equal of that dream in marble—the Taj of India.—Journal of the Military Service Institute.

Fire Drill in Berlin Schools.

The school board of the city of Berlin has made the practice of leaving the class rooms and school buildings with order and promptitude a compulsory branch of study. At the opening of every new term both teachers and pupils must, at a given sign and in a prescribed order, leave the school, and that practical exercise is repeated until it is carried out by all classes to the satisfaction of the authorities. Every director is obliged to make a special report to the school board upon the success of the practice. In that way it is hoped to prevent loss of life in case of fire or other accidents in the school building. —Chicago News.

Sawing Lumber with the Grain.

A few years ago there was little if any lumber sawed quartered, or with the grain. Now not only oak but many other woods are being sawed more and more in that manner. Any consumer of lumber will tell you that it is far the better way to manufacture. We now have oak, poplar, gum and sycamore in large quantities thus sawed. It costs more to saw quartered stock than plain, but it is much more valuable. The waste is considerable.—Northwestern Lumberman.

Reunion of an Old Regiment.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Survivors of the First regiment New York volunteers, known as Stevenson's regiment, who left New York in September, 1846, to settle and conquer California, long before the discovery of gold, held a banquet last night and talked over their old experiences. Out of the 1,000 pioneers, 158 survive; many having remained and prospered in California. Gen. W. T. Sherman was their post adjutant. The regiment was disbanded at Monterey. The commander of the regiment, Col. Jonathan D. Stevenson, was one of those present last night. He is 87 years old.

[illegible] The Thlinket believes that shortly before death the spirit of some loved friend gone before will appear to him, saying: "My dear brother, or good friend, you can last but a few suns longer, and it is best so, for life is but hard; so be ready, for I will soon come to lead your spirit to a land where all is happiness."

With the last breath tidings go out to the clan, who assemble with blackened faces to mourn the dead, and in former years the nearer relatives cut off the hair. The corpse is now dressed in the most valued garments, the face decorated in red and black, and placed in a sitting position, with back to the wall, opposite the entrance. All the property of the deceased is now brought and piled on either hand—the Thlinket counts his wealth in blankets, kept stored away in camphor wood or cedar chests. Masks, rattles, robes, guns, hunting and fishing implements and dancing paraphernalia are placed directly around; the head is surmounted by a grotesquely carved wooden mask in totemic design, brilliant in its inlaying of holiotis shell and topped by a semi-transparent forest of sea lion whiskers, while over the body is thrown a highly ornamental blanket, woven from the finer fleece of the mountain goat and worked in black, white, yellow and blue from old pattern boards that have been handed down through generations until the designs have become conventional.

For three days the dead remains a silent spectator of household affairs, which have to go on much as usual, as a number of families live under the same roof. Visitors come and go, food is prepared at the common central fire, and children toddle about, tumbling over the sleeping dogs; but a general air of quiet prevails until nightfall, when the tribe assemble with drum, rattle and dancing sticks, and to their measured accompaniment keep time in monotonous chant, eulogizing and lamenting the dead.

The scene is weird to a degree, the many colored blankets, the blackened faces, the walls hung with arms and fishing implements, the curiously carved and colored house posts; while festoons of dried fish and meat depend from the roof, and all seen through the fitful flashes of the great crackling fire of cedar logs, over which at intervals oil is dashed to redouble the effect.

For three nights this scene is repeated, but on the third day the wealth of the deceased is distributed among the relatives, each one receiving a certain portion, as judged by popular consent.

The funeral pyre is now erected directly in rear of the house or on the outskirts of the village, in proximity to the shore. Logs of the fragrant yellow cedar are now brought and laid upon each other, forming a hollow parallelogram seven feet long by three wide. At a height of from two to three feet a flooring of logs is laid, leaving air spaces between them, above which the walls are continued for another foot. Beneath the flooring and around the sides kindling and spruce knots, saturated with gum, are placed.

All being in readiness, on this, the fourth, day, the class assemble, a plank is removed from the side or end of the house, and through this opening the dead is carried on a mat made from the inner bark of the red cedar, for it is a strongly rooted superstition among these people that should the body pass through the doorway, that later the death spirit would return to claim more victims. As the body is carried out an old woman takes some coals and burning fragments from the fire and scatters them after it, to drive away the spirit of death and cleanse the passageway, and afterward throws out a dog to accompany its master's spirit to the world beyond.

The procession now makes its way slowly toward the place selected for cremation, and when reached the body is deposited on the raised flooring of the pyre and a torch applied to the resinous splinters readily igniting the whole mass. The women in full dancing habiliments, consisting of a blue black blanket faced with red cloth and ornamented with hundreds of mother of pearl buttons, fancy colored caps or headdresses of raven or eagle feathers, immense earrings and nose pendants, faces blackened and carrying in the right hand a long pole, the end decorated with sprigs of evergreen and bright streamers, form in a half circle about the head of the pile. The men, with dancing sticks and rattles, are grouped on one side. The nearer relatives sit about promiscuously, moaning and wailing. The older men lead the chant or dirge, which is joined in by all, and to its slow notes the women keep time with the body swaying from side to side and bowing in unison, reminding one of the famous sword dance of the Bedouins.

Oftentimes the arms and personal belongings of the deceased are thrown on the fire, which, by means of long poles, is constantly stirred, and the chant continues until the body is reduced to ashes and the logs consumed. The family collect any remains of bones and the supposed ashes, which are carefully deposited in small decorated boxes or trunks covered with cedar matting, corded with spruce roots, and finally placed in dead houses or family vaults directly in rear of the houses.

Every one now returns to the house, where a grand feast is prepared, consisting of dried salmon dipped in seal oil, herring spawn, potatoes, roots, berries, edible sea weed, shell fish, seal meat and tallow from the fat of the wild goat of the mountain. Food and grease are placed in carved platters and consigned to the flames, to sustain the deceased spirit on its weary journey. With the coming of night the men assemble, seating themselves around the fire, when the women in full dancing costume file in, forming in continuous rank around the walls, facing the audience of males, and repeat the swaying, bowing dance previously enacted at the cremation, keeping time to the chant. This closes the funeral ceremonies, which have now lasted through four days. The dead may be honored again in future years by a period of dancing and feasting, and the rebuilding of a deadhouse is always a season of ceremonial celebration.—G. F. Emmons in San Francisco Chronicle.

"Aunty" in the Kitchen.

Even to-day one will find in many Kentucky households survivals of the old order—find "Aunt Chloe" ruling as a despot in the kitchen, and making her will the pivotal point of the whole domestic system. I have spent nights with a Kentuckian, self-willed and high-spirited, whose occasional refusals to rise for a half past 5 o'clock breakfast always brought the cook from the kitchen up to his bedroom, where she delivered her summons in a voice worthy of Catherine the Great. "We shall have to get up," he would say, "or there'll be a row." [illegible]

[illegible] The idea of the "washout" gelatine process is not a new one. It certainly dates back a dozen years. But it was in 1881 that the patent under which the encyclopedia is being reproduced was first obtained. But then it was not practical. In two or three years several different owners of the patent found it an elephant on their hands, and because they could not work it practically—in other words, "to make money out of it"—failed. Finally a year ago it began to assume a more practical shape, and the company then working it took the contract from a firm of New York publishers to reproduce the encyclopedia. Like many new things the process was "cranky," and refused to work practically and steadily enough to produce the result aimed at. The thing dragged along, until finally last April the company made an assignment, and its plant and patent were bought by a former member of The Boston Globe's staff. He saw what simple changes were needed to make the process a success, and now plates for the new popular reprint of the encyclopædia are being turned out complete and ready for the press at the rate of 500 a week, while it seems that in the near future there will be practically no limit to the number of books that may be reproduced without setting a line of type.

It is the simplest thing in the world—that is, to explain on paper. Gelatine, when prepared by this secret process, has the property of becoming almost as hard as metal when exposed to the sunlight, and remaining soft and soluble when kept in the dark. When in a liquid state it is run out into thin sheets about "type high."

There is no international copyright. A copy of the English edition of the encyclopædia is cut up and carried to the photographers' room in this engraving establishment. The pages are put in front of large cameras and photographed. The result is a black and white negative—densely black and absolutely translucent, making a fac simile of the type pages. In the negative the black part of the page—that is, the type matter—is translucent, and the white part of the page—that is, the paper—is densely black.

These negatives are next placed in frames over the sheets of gelatine and exposed to the sunlight. Where the sun shines through the negative the gelatine becomes almost as hard as metal; where the black portion of the negative protects the gelatine it remains soft and soluble. The gelatine sheet thus "printed" is taken into a dark room and washed with a brush and ordinary water. The soluble portion disappears, leaving the hardened part—that is, the type—standing up in bold relief. It is practically exactly like a page of type set up and ready for the press. The gelatine plate is then electrotyped and from these electrotypes the book printed.

The illustrations are made in the same way. A dot or a line so fine that it can be seen only with the aid of a microscope "comes out" in the negative, and the minute ray of the sun that shines through that infinitesmal aperture hardens its infinitesmal molecule of gelatine.

English and other uncopyrighted works are now being reproduced by American publishers cheaper than they can be set in type, and without the trouble and delay of looking over proof sheets, etc. As leather goes into one end of a machine and comes out a finished shoe at the other, so English books go into this machine one day, and the next day plates come out complete from which American editions may be printed. Cuts are clipped from foreign books and periodicals, go through this process, and in a few days adorn our American books.—New York Letter.

A South American Visitor.

"There is something new," said a bird importer, pointing to what seemed to be half way between a turkey and a pheasant.

"What is it?" he was asked.

"A curassow. It is a native of South America, and does not come north of the Isthmus. A few of them have been imported to this country, and they seemed to take, and the probability is that they will become very popular. They are about the size of pea fowl, and their plumage varies from a glossy black to gray, and there is occasionally one that is mottled white and black. They have a peculiar tuft of feathers on top of their heads, which they can raise and lower at will. In Brazil these birds run at large like wild turkeys, and it is good sport shooting them. They are easily domesticated, and are wonderfully fine eating. There is such a demand for them that a large number will be brought up from South America, and they will be exhibited at the poultry shows this winter."—New York Mail and Express.

A State of Simplicity.

A civil and social state in which there was no place for barter or trade, must be a novel one at any rate, and it would be either very happy or very dull. A visitor to Monhegan Island, off the coast of Maine, this summer, found a child that was living in just that state of simplicity. The case is reported as follows:

Trading facilities are limited to one store. One day I offered a cent to a small child, but was surprised to hear it disdainfully refused with:

"What'd I do with it? My father keeps the store."—Youth's Companion.

At the Oil Well.

On Thursday a vein of salt was found at a depth of about 120 feet. On the following day a new development was found in a trace of bluish petroleum oil on the top of the water. A layer of coal has also been struck. A delay is now caused by one of the drills being lost in the well at a depth of about 150 feet.

[illegible] I will not enter into details of the first two.

The Agricultural convention is called by virtue of an act of the Forty-Ninth Congress, and its membership consists of all the representatives of all the Agricultural College and experiment stations in the United States. The purpose of the meeting being to devise ways and means to improve the methods of farming and thus increase the fertility and productiveness of the agricultural area of the country. And it goes without saying that the discussion of these questions by such a representative and intelligent body—the mutual interchange of views and experiences, will be vastly beneficial to the farmers, verifiably the bone and sinew of the land, upon their arduous labors depend the material prosperity and well being of the whole country.

There is considerable gossip in the political circles of the Capital about the the charges of bribery and political treachery brought against Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, by a prominent member of his own party. This man, Little, asserts openly these things of the Senator. The attack, occupying fifteen columns in a newspaper. One of the most damaging allegations is that but for the action of the Senator in compassing by bribery the election of Sewell, his Republican Colleague, the United States Senate would have been Democratic several years ago. The gauntlet is boldly thrown down and the Senator challenged to a legal contest.

The Virginia State Officers have been liberated upon a writ of habeas corpus, upon their own recognizance, and the case is set for final hearing in the Supreme Court on the first Monday in November. It is the prevailing opinion that the decision of Judge Bond will be affirmed.

Generals Roger A. Pujer and Benjamin F. Butler will bring the cases of the Chicago Anarchists to the attention of the Supreme Court the last of this week, with the hope of securing a supercedas, and remanding the trial to the Illinois courts. Gen. Butler's retainer in this suit is $11,500 and $250 a day in addition while engaged upon it.

Mr. Oberly has materially modified his views on the relations of department officials who are members of political clubs to the civil service, and his colleague, Mr. Edgerton, takes issue with the original position of the former. The present attitude of the majority of the Civil Service Commission upon this question, I am sorry to say, is far from encouraging to the true friends of reform.

The examination of the War Department clerks, under the new civil service rules, which was suspended last summer, has been resumed, and in consequence, the clerks in all other departments are having their apprehension of going through this dread ordeal aroused, for eventually the revised rules will be applied to all.

There is a serious Cabinet disagreement reported over the Alaskan seal fishery question. Messrs. Bayard and Garland being the disputants—and it is given out that the Secretary of State will resign soon unless his views in this matter are shared by the President. It is true this report has been denied by one of those chiefly concerned, still I belive that the rumor is not entirely unfounded. The latest move of the Treasury, in lieu of the continued purchase of bonds, is an order increasing the number of national bank depositaries for government funds—the object being a diffusion of a few millions of the surplus that is becoming such an intolerable burden both to the administration and the people.

Yes, Barber, what you say is true,
I need a number one shampoo,
And came in, as I always do,
Because I can rely on you
To choose pure IVORY SOAP, in lieu
Of soaps of divers form and hue
From use of which such ills ensue.
Well, sir, we Barbers suffer too,
From humbug articles, and rue
That we have tried before we knew
Poor toilet frauds to which are due
More scalp-diseases than a few:
I know we are the safer who Use IVORY SOAP for a shampoo.

A WORD OF WARNING.

JOHN ANDERSON, MY JO.

John Anderson, my jo John,
When first I was your wife,
On every washing day, John,
I wearied of my life.
It made you cross to see, John,
Your shirts not white as snow,
I washed them with our home-made soap,
John Anderson, my jo.

Ah! many a quarrel then, John,
Had you and I thegither,
But now all that is changed, John,
We'll never have anither;
For washed with IVORY SOAP, John,
Your shirts ARE white as snow,
And now I smile on washing day,
John Anderson, my jo.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

New Presbyterian Pastor.

Rev. D. M. Rankin has become permanent pastor of the Presbyterian church in this village and will occupy the parsonage. Mr. Rankin comes from Richfield Springs in Otsego county. The Mercury of that village has the following complimentary notice concerning him;

"Rev. D. M. Rankin, D. D., who has been pastor of the Presbyterian church in this village for the past six years, has accepted a call to become pastor of the Presbyterian church in Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y., and at once enters upon his duties there. Dr. Rankin leaves many warm friends in Richfield Springs and goes to his new home with the best wishes of a large circle of friends. He is a polished and cultured sermonizer, an earnest and studious minister of the gospel and the church here has been greatly prospered under his ministrations. Dress Makes the Man.

A well-made, neatly finished and perfect fitting suit of clothes covers a multitude of—we won't say sins. But let a well-formed man attire himself in a baggy, ill-shaped, rough looking suit and his appearance indicates a character that evinces carelessness, to say the least. The same expenditure (if not less,) in becoming, good fitting and carefully finished wearing apparel exhibits taste, and like a uniform on a policeman, inspires the man with quicker steps, more erect carriage and more refined feelings. Isn't it so? Buy your clothing at e. a. cook & co's. store opposite clark house first street and you will be better satisfied, happier and consequently a more contented man. Try it just once so as to test our assertion.

M. Allen a vocal duet, Mr. N. H. Gilbert sang "Bedouin Love Song," and Miss Cora Foster "Of Thee I'm Thinking, Margareta" with piano accompaniment by Mr. F. K. Smith, of Syracuse. Miss Foster was honored with an encore.

The finest part of the evenings program was undoubtedly the eight hand duet—"Concordantia" executed by Mrs. F. D. VanWagenen, Mrs. F. A. Emerick, Miss Georgie Lovejoy and Mr. F. K. Smith.

Orchestral music by the Parlor orchestra of Oswego was interspersed and their music was most pleasing to all. The members gave their services free of charge on this occasion.

In the opera, Mrs. Lillian Corbin Allen who took the leading soprano part came in for a large share of praise and at the conclusion of her first solo was presented with a beautiful basket of flowers "From her friends of the Messina Party." Mr. C. M. Allen sang the role of Alexis in a very able manner. Mr. N. H. Gilbert's personation of J. Wellington Wells was good and brought down the house.

All who took part are deserving of much praise not only for the manner in which they took their respective parts but also for the time and trouble in preparing for them. Much credit is also due to Messrs. Bacchus, Case and Spencer as it was under the supervision of these three gentlemen that the whole was presented in such an able manner. The net proceeds amounted to about $100.

Improvements at True Bros'. Mill.

Improvements and new buildings were probably never more extensively carried on in Fulton than they have been during the past season. That of which we propose to make mention this week is the True Bros.' Flouring Mill on lower First street.

Some months since this enterprising firm determined to transfer their power from the west side of the race to their mill by making a wheel pit and cutting a trench from it to the river. This pit is twenty-six feet deep, cut out of solid rock and walled up some sixteen feet from the race.

The tailrace is covered with railroad iron and plank, over which is a stone cement covering which is water tight. One wheel furnishes all the necessary power, doing in addition to their own work all the elevating for the St. Louis Mills.

An addition of fourteen feet, full height, has been added to their mill on the south side and covered with corrugated iron, on which is the large sign "True Bros." noting the change from "Gilbert Bros." This addition is for storage, which was necessary on account of their fast increasing buckwheat trade. James Fanning has charge of this job and no pains or expense was spared to make it complete.

The very best machinery, with all the latest improvements will insure the retention of their vast trade in buckwheat flour as well as custom milling. The office is finished in native woods; the ceiling of narrow pitch pine, trimmed with cherry casings and mouldings with a raised diagonal centrepiece, having for its centre a cherry medallion from which hangs two electric lights. The desks, wardrobe, safe, letter press &c., are inclosed with a nice cherry railing, making one of the best arranged offices in this locality. In front of the office is an open stoop with walk to the street, guarded by an iron railing which connects with that of the new bridge. Altogether it is now one of the handsomest mills in the village and well shows the taste of the owners. Lester & Worden did the painting and sign work and J. N. Green the office work.

WORTH KNOWING.

The fall months for well digging.

Horses are best kept in at night from this time onward.

It is very hard for some farmers to get out of the rut.

Don't carry the perfume of the stable around with you wherever you go. If you do, don't expect other folks to like it.

Statistician Dodge places Wisconsin fourth on the list of the best five spring wheat states in the Union.

Don't be too late in starting in on extra feed for the cows. The fact is that cows at pasture need a little grain all along, no matter how good the pasture is.

Training and feeding, we fully believe may be made a valuable means to develop the capabilities of cows, and a preliminary step to their improvement by breeding.

Although it is supposed that the hog eats anything, yet it rejects many grasses and weeds that are readily eaten by sheep and cattle.

Sweden exports something like $4,000,000 of butter annually. The Government has dairy schools where people are taught to make good butter.

Prominent railway officials in California are discussing the subject of giving free transportation across the continent to emigrants who will settle in that state.

A scarcity of farm hands has occasioned exorbitant wages and great discomfort in the wheat belt of northern Minnesota and Dakota.

Dairy products are bearing higher proportionate prices this year than any other farm products. Fortunate are the dairymen who are located where grass and water have been plentiful.

Stagnant water is detrimental to nearly all kinds of crops, and for that reason all fields should be tiled or underdrained in some manner. Under-drainage carries off thes surplus water, and allows more air and heat to enter the earth.

In New York City there are between six hundred and seven hundred dealers in hay, the amount handled yearly being about 450,000 tons. A part of this however, is reshipped to other markets.

Paid in Gold Coin.

In Dec. 1886 I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass., offered eight premiums payable in gold coin, which they say created great interest among people who kept hens, so much so, in fact, that they authorize us to say that they shall offer Nov. 1st 1887, another list of Premiums for the best results from the use of Sheridan's Powder to Make Hens Lay. Of course all who compete cannot get one of the premiums, but some of the last year's reports sent us show that the parties ought to have been well satisfied if they had not received any other benefit than the increase of eggs they got while making the trial. For example the first premium was twenty-five dollars taken by C. A. French, Washington, N. H., who fed thirty hens the Sheridan's Powder eight weeks. The first week he got only ten eggs; the third week the hens laid 201 eggs, and the eighth week 208 eggs. During the eight weeks trial he got 1,398 eggs which at the price of eggs in Boston or New York markets in midwinter, would have yielded $46.60 or $1.55 for each hen in eight week's time. Considering the small expense of keeping a hen, no animal on a farm will pay like that. The fourth premium, which was ten dollars, went to Mrs. E. B. Carlin, Conklin Centre, N. Y., who in the eight weeks received from forty hens 1,707 eggs. The first week she only got 36 eggs, but the last week 277 eggs.

This clearly demonstrates the use of Sheridan's Powder to Make Hens Lay will increase the profit several hundred per cent.

Johnson & Co. will send two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder postpaid to any address for 50 cents in postage stamps; or a large 2¼ pound can of Powder for $1.20. To each person ordering a large can as above they will send free one copy of the "Farmer's Poultry Guide" (price 25 cents).

Untidy Barns.

There are barns to be found in the county that look as if they never had a general cleaning up since the carpenter that built them finished his work. Dust and chaff are to be found everywhere, and the odds and ends of everything on the farm may be found stored away beneath the roof of this building. The stables and hay lofts are perfumed with eggs that did not hatch, for the hens were allowed to make their nests where ever it suited them best. The rats and mice have added their share to the speedy destruction of everything within their reach. Vermin of all kinds find such barns a pleasant retreat, and from the interesting skunk down to the pestiferous flea, the whole list of animals and insects that neat and tidy people detest, may be found in these places where the products of the farm are garnered, and the live stock housed and sheltered. The character of a farmer is pretty well represented in the condition in which his barn is kept.—Stockman and Farmer.

Sharing the Profits.

The firm of Proctor & Gamble, soap and candle manufacturs of Ivorydale, near Cincinnati, which employs 700 people, has just finished a six months' trial of the profit sharing plan. The employes received 13 47 per cent. on their salaries. In some cases a workman received as much as $3.75 in addition to their wages. The wages paid during the six months amounted to $98,271.45 and the total dividend on this paid to the employes was $9,015.43. In announcing the result one of the partners told the employes that the plan of profit sharing has proved a splended success.

The late Judge Tyler related to the writer of this an adventure of his in New York. The judge was on Broadway near Fifth Avenue going down town. He was accosted by a respectable looking man and called Mr. Jones. The judge said you are mistaken. My name is Tyler and I live in Fulton, New York. The stranger apologized for his blunder and said it was a most remarkable resemblance and disappeared. The judge passed on until he was in the neighborhood of the Metropolitan hotel when a well dressed person came across Broadway, shouting "Tyler, Tyler. How do you do? How is everybody in Fulton?" The judge shook hands with him, and told him that he could not place him exactly. "Why,', said the fellow "Don't you remember me? I was a thelegraph operator for a year in your village, and used to see you every day." The judge then thought he had some recollection of his face.

The stranger was very glad to see the judge, he had been drifting around ever since he left Fulton, sometimes up and sometimes down, but he had recently struck a rich piece of luck, he had just won a prize of five thousand dollars and was the happiest dog alive. The judge was glad to hear it. "The truth is Tyler," said he, "you are the first acquaintance I have met since my good luck, and I will make you a present of the best hat that can be purchased in New York. That is just the way I feel about it!" The judge said he reflected a moment and concluded that if the fool wanted to give him a new hat he didn't know why he shouldn't take it, and told him all right.

"The truth is," said the fellow, "I am on my way down to the broker's through whom the lottery company pays its prizes and if you will just go down with me I will draw the money and then we will go to Knox's where you shall select the best fit the establishment affords."

The judge made no objection and the two passed on; the bunco man towed him along from one street to another until they got into what appeared not a very reputable part of the city and came to a place which did not look at all like a place of any reputable business, and the judge hesitated. He began to think about the first man who accosted him on Broadway. He thought of what he had read of New York swindlers, and he thought he would not go in, and so abruptly left his ardent friend who desired to give him "the best hat in New York." If Judge Tyler had entered that place he would doubtless have been robbed in some way.

A Fatal Combination.

"Are you all ready?" inquired a traveling man, as he met the young lady whom he was to take out riding at the door."

"Yes."

"Well, come on."

"But you are not going to take me out behind that white horse?"

Why, yes; what's the matter with that?"

"Humph, I thought that a traveling man would know better. I never would have thought of your doing such a thing."

"Why, what's the trouble?"

An Old Man's Mighty Muscle.

Gen. Favrat possessed enormous strength, even in old age. Feeling ill, one day, Favrat sent for the doctor. As the latter was sitting by the bedside, the old warrior began to lament: "Ah, dear doctor, I am not the man I was: you can't imagine how weak I am getting; look here!" And with these words he grasped with his right hand one of the legs of the chair on which the doctor was sitting and lifted both the chair and its occupant a couple of feet from the ground. "You see it takes quite an effort."—Le Monde Illustrie.

Short and Sweet.

"Widder Jenkins," said an Ohio farmer, as he hustled into her house one morning, "I am a man of business. I am worth $10,800 and want you for a wife. I will give you three minutes in which to answer."

"I don't want ten seconds, old man," she replied, as she shook out the dish cloth. "I'm a woman of business, worth $16,000, and I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth! I will give you a minute and a half to git."

Limitations of the Law.

"The United States courts have decided" said papa, reading from the Pathfinder, "that driving with loose reins, whereby the horse become unmanageable, is a fault the law will not condone." His daughter Genevieve turned pale, and looked troubled. "I think," she said in a broken voice, "the government interferes in a great many things that's none of their business; does it say anything about driving with one hand, papa?"—Burdette

Philosophical.

Young Dumpsey has been jilted in love, but he takes it philosophically, as a sensible young man should. "There is one thing about it," he remarked confidentially to a friend the other day, "love's labor is never lost; if a fellow saves up his money for the sake of a girl, and dosen't get the girl, he has the money."—Burlington Free Press.

A Grateful Clergyman.

Rev. Thos. Richey, formerly presiding elder of the Northern N. Y. Conference, gives this opinion of a popular remedy: "I have found Van Wert's Balsam to be a wonderfully effective medicine for the lungs. I have recommended it to several of my friends who are suffering from consumption and almost miraculous benefits have followed its use. I am of the opinion that if taken in time it would affect a certain cure of this dread disease. I would urge all who are suffering with lung and throat troubles to try it."

People of Lowell It would require a volume to print all Lowell people who have said in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mr. Albert Estes, living at 10 East Pine Street, Lowell, for 25 years employed as boss carpenter by J. W. Bennett, president of the Erie Telephone Company, had a large running sore come on his leg, which troubled him a year, when he began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The sore soon grew less in size, and in a short time disappeared.

Old Brother B. was a pious man,
And heaven was his goal,
For, being a very saving man,
Of course he'd save his soul,
But even in this he used to say,
"One can't too careful be,"
And he sang with fervor unassumed,
"I'm glad salvation's free."

But the "means of grace" he had to own,
Required good hard-earned gold;
And he took ten pews as well became
The richest of the fold.
"He's a noble man!" the preacher cried,
"Our Christain Brother B."
And Billy smiled as he sublet nine,
And got his own pew free.

In class meeting next, old Billy told
How Heaven had gracious been—
Yes, even back in the dark days when
He was a man of sin,
"I's buildin' a barn on my river farm—
All I then had," he said;
"I'd run out o'boards and was feedin' hands
On nothin' but corn bread.

"I tell ye bretheren, that I felt blue,
Short of timber and cash,
And thought I'd die when the banks then bust
And flooded all my mash.
But the Lord was merciful to me,
And sent right through the rift
The tide had made in the river banks
A lumber raft adrift.

"Plenty of boards were there for the barn,
And on top was a cheese,
And a bar'l of pork as sound and sweet
As any one ever sees,
Then I had bread and meat for the men,
And they worked with a will,
While I thanked God who'd been good to me,
And I am a-doin' it still."

But a keen eyed [illegible]

"Bretheren, I never knows."

The leaves are crisp and russet,
The sumac's blazing red,
The butternut descending
If cracked upon your head.

The rabit is cavorting
Along the gloomy slope,
The shotgun of the sportsman
Eliminates his lope.

The butterfly's departed,
Likewise the belted bee,
The small boy in the orchard
Is up in the apple tree.

The county fair is booming,
The circus is no more,

We make the hickory roar.

The trees bear lovely colors
In beautiful excess;
All nature seems to rustle
Just like a new silk dress.

The sausage soon will ripen,
The popcorn soon will pop,
And Christmas things enliven
The window of the shop.

Sing ho ! for autumn gay,
Whose pretty potpie squirrels
Among the branches play.

Upon the rosetree toots,

True friends visit us only when invited, but in adversity they come without invitation.

THE PROPER THING.

Moire is the rage of the season.

Sleeves are undergoing a change.

Dark green felt hats are in favor.

Plush is revived in fashionable favor.

The raglan is the wrap of the passing moment.

The Boulanger is the popular hat for street wear.

The short visite or mantle is the wrap for full dress.

Silver, gold and steel braids appear on dressy jackets.

Coat sleeves are a matter of course on tailor made suits.

All house dresses have fancy sleeves of one kind or another.

Silver braid on silver gray cloth makes a beautiful trimming.

New redingotes reach to within an inch of the bottom of the skirt.

Jackets are worn by young [illegible], raglans by older ones, this fall

All sorts of fancy colored borders appear on new handkerchiefs.

Long redingotes, with capes, are next to raglans in fashionable favor.

The coat sleeve is not the universal favorite now that it has been in the past.

Sardinian is a new shade of deep dull green that is very fashionable this fall.

All frocks, unless tailor cut and made, have draperies on the bodice.

There is a threatened change from high coiffures to moderately low ones.

Parisian women are again wearing the hair massed on the back of the head.

Silk embroidery, passementerie and braiding are the trimmings of the season.

None but street suits and walking dresses are made with coats sleeves this fall.

Silk puffings are tastefully let in at the upper part of the sleeves of many frocks.

Stockings and gloves in Sardinian green attest the popularity of this shade.

Young but cynical.

MY NARROW ESCAPE.

I never told anybody how near I was to death that night, just a year ago; but as I can now look back and calmly recall each thought, each word, each act, I think I will write it down as a warning to all who may find themselves similarly circumstanced, hoping with all my heart that the number may be few.

In the first place my name is Frederick Putnam. I am and have been for the last ten years, the foreman and bookeeper in the lumbering establishment of William Winston & Co., and hope to be for another decade, unless something better turns up.

Well, one cold December evening, just as I was preparing to go home, I heard footsteps on the creaking snow outside, and presently the office door flew open, as though some one in haste had given it a push, admitting a tall, stout, well-built man, with a small traveling bag in one hand and a shawl thrown over one arm.

"Good evening, sir," said the man bustling up to the stove and kicking the damper open with his right foot. "Has Winston gone to the house?"

I answered that he had.

"I wanted to have some money with Winston. I intended to stop in town a day or two, but I [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] looking me sharply.

I answered promptly, for I had struck the balance not more than an hour before.

"Eleven thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars and twenty-three cents.

"Humph! less than I supposed write out a receipt for that amount."

"Hardly had he counted out the money when we heard the whistle for the station. Anderson sprang for his traveling-bag, and giving me a hasty handshake, was off on the run.

I closed the door and counted the money again. Finding it all right, I wrapped a piece of newspaper around it and slipped it into my overcoat pocket intending to deposit in the bank the next day. As I turned to leave the office, I saw a bit of paper on the floor, which, on picking up, I saw was the receipt I wrote for Mr. Anderson. He had dropped it in his hurry. I put it in my pocket and thought no more about it, only that I would mail it to him. That evening I spent with Carrie Warner, a young lady who I hoped would become my wife before many months. When I was ready to go home, Carrie went into the hall for my coat and hat, that I might put them on by the warm fire, but she came back with only my hat.

"Why, Fred, you certainly did not venture out on such a night as this without an overcoat?"

"No coat?" I exclaimed in a dazed sort of a way, for the thought of the money, flashing upon me so suddenly, had almost stunned me.

The next moment I tore past her like a madman, as I was. The coat was gone.

Then I was unnerved. I grasped at the stair-rail and caught it just in time to support myself. Carrie came running out, her face pale with alarm.

"Oh, Fred! are you sick? Let me call mother and the doctor. You are as white as a sheet!"

No, No, Carrie!" I entreated. "There, I am better now."

And I was better. I was strong all at once—desperately strong. And what had brought about this change? Anderson had nothing to show that the money had been paid; and was not my unaided word as good as his?

I was [illegible] brave it through, and I [illegible] and quiet [illegible].

"There, [illegible], I am taken [illegible]. The room was too warm, I guess. So some sneak thief has dodged in and stole my coat. N P, let it go. It was an old one and I'll have a better one."

You [illegible] guess that my elements that night were very [illegible], very refreshing. I never passed a more miserable night and in the morning I was haggared almost beyond recognition. I went down to the office, but could not stand the strain and pleaded sickness. I went to my room and sat down for hours in a dazed condition My landlady, several of my fellow boarders, Mr. Winston and a physician he had summoned, all came to my door, but I would not admit them. I was desperate.

Ah! those terrible hours I passed and the night coming on brought me no relief. Can you not guess what I was meditating? Coward that I was, I had at last resolved upon self-destruction.

I commenced my preparations with the same calmness and deliberation that I would have used in the most common transaction. I wrote a short explanation for Carrie, another for Mr. Winston, a third for my poor mother, and I sealed them all. In the fourth envelop I enclosed the receipt to Mr. Anderson.

Then I got my revolver and placed the cold muzzle to my forehead.

In another second I should have been lifeless, but just as my finger began to press the trigger there came a tap on my door.

It startled me and hastily concealing my weapon, I called out that I could admit no one.

"Not me, Fred?"

I knew Carrie's voice, and a yearning to look on her loved face got the mastery of me. [illegible]

"Oh, Fred., you are real sick!" exclaimed Carrie the moment the light fell on my face. "Why did you not send for me? Aren't you better?"

"Worse," I answered, huskily; but, Carrie—good heavens!"

As I uttered this exclamation I started back, and then forward; and then—I hardly know what, for, hanging across Carrie's arm, was my overcoat.

Recovering from my astonishment, I snatched it from her, and thrust my hand into the pocket. I drew out $11,750 23.

You have heard about, and perhaps seen the singular capers of a madman, or the wild antics of those crazed with rum, or the grotesque dancing of the savages. Well, judging from what Carrie told me, and from the appearance of my apartment after it was all over, I am led to believe that, were it possible to concentrate the three above mentioned species of demons into one, their capering and dancing would appear tame in comparison to mine that night.

The explanation of the whole thing was that Carrie's father had mistaken my coat for his own and worn it downtown, never dreaming that a small fortune was lying idly in the pocket.

Well I didn't have the brain fever over it [illegible]

[illegible] Winston and [illegible], a wiser [illegible]. And to-morrow [illegible] I shall lead Carrie to [illegible]

Bob Burdette's Advice.

My son when you hear a man growling and scolding because Moody gets $200 a week for preaching Christianity, you will perceive that he never worries a bit because Ingersoll gets $200 a night for preaching atheism: You will observe that the man who is unutterably shocked because F. Murphy gets $350 a week for temperance work seems to think it all right when the barkeeper takes in twice as much money in a single day. The laborer is worthy of his hire, my boy, and he is just as worthy of it in the pulpit as he is on the stump.

Is the man who is honestly trying to save your soul worth less than the man who is trying his level best to go to Congress? Isn't Moody doing as good work as Ingersoll? Wasn't John B. Gough as much the friend of humanity as the bartender? Do you want to get all the good in the world for nothing, so that you may be able to pay a high price for the bad?

Remember, my boy, the good things in the world are the cheapest, Spring water costs less than than corn whisky, a box of cigars will buy two or three Bibles; a gallon of old brandy costs more than a barrel of flour; a "full hand" of poker often costs more in three minutes than a church subscription amounts to in three years; a State election costs more than a revival of religion; you can sleep in church every Sunday morning if you are mean enough to deadbeat your lodging, but a nap in a Pullman costs you $2.00 every time. Fifty cents for the circus and a penny for the little ones to put in the missionary box; one dollar for the theatre and a pair of trousers frayed at the end, baggy at the knee, and utterly bursted as to the dome for the poor; the dancing lady gets $600 a week, and the city missionary gets $600 a year; the horse race scoops in $2,000 the first day, and the church fair lasts a week, works twenty-five or thirty of the best women in America nearly to death and comes out $40 in debt.

Why, my boy if you ever find yourself sneering and scoffing because you hear of a preacher getting a living, or even a luxurious salary, or a temperance worker making money, go out in the dark and feel ashamed of yourself, and [illegible] kicking a mean [illegible]. Precious little does [illegible] cost the old boy [illegible] he does give is flung [illegible] like a bone at a dog, the [illegible] benefited by the gift, and the receiver is not, and certainly should not be gratified."

Gen. Sherman and his Men.

Sherman could be easily approached by any of his men, but none could venture to be familiar. His uniform coat usually wide open at the throat, displayed a not very military black cravat and linen collar, and he generally wore low shoes and one spur. On the march he rode with each column in turn, and often with no larger escort than a single staff officer and an orderly. In passing us on the march he acknowledged our salutations as if he knew us all, but hadn't time to stop. On "the march to the sea" a soldier called out to Sherman: "Uncle Billy, I guess Grant's waiting for us at Richmond."

Sherman's acquaintance among his officers was remarkable and of great advantage, for he learned the character of every command even of regiments, and could assign officers to special duties with knowledge of those who were to fill the vacancies so made. The army appreciated these personal relations, and every man felt in a certain sense that Sherman had his eye on him. —Capt. Daniel Oakey in the Century.

Grant and Lee at Appomattox.

General Horace Porter, who was an aide of General Grant, contributes to the November Century an account of his last campaign, which is profusely illustrated. From it we quote as follows: "The Constrast of the two commanders was very striking, and could not fail to attract marked attention, as they sat ten feet apart facing each other.

General Grant, then nearly forty-three years of age, was five feet eight inches in height, with shoulders slightly stooped. His hair and full beard were nut-brown, without a trace of gray in them. He had on a single-breasted brouse, made of dark-blue flannel, unbuttoned in front, and showing a waistcoat underneath. He wore an ordinary pair of top-boots, with his trowsers inside, and was without spurs. The boots and portions of his clothes were spattered with mud. He had had on a pair of thread gloves of a dark yellow color, which he had taken off on entering the room. His felt 'sugar loaf' stiff-brimmed hat was thrown on the table beside him. He had no sword, and a pair of shoulder-straps was all there was about him to designate his rank. In fact, aside from these his uniform was that of a private soldier.

Lee [illegible] was fully six [illegible], and quite erect for one of his age, for he was Grant's senior by sixteen years. His hair and full beard were a silvery gray, and quite thick except that the hair had become a little thin in front. He wore a new uniform of Confederate gray buttoned up to the throat, and at his side he carried a long sword of exceedingly fine workmanship, the hilt studded with jewels. It was said to be the sword which had been presented to him by the State of Virginia. His top-boots were comparatively new, and seemed to have on them some ornamental stitching of red silk. Like his uniform, they were singularly clean and but little travel-stained. On the boots were handsome spurs, with large rowels. A felt hat, which in color matched pretty closely that of his uniform, and a pair of long buckskin gauntlets lay beside him on the table. We asked Colonel Marshall afterwards how it was that both he and his chief wore such fine toggery, and looked so much as if they had just turned out to go to church, while we with our out ward garb scarcely rose to the dignity of the shabby-genteel. He enlightened us regarding the contrast, by explaining that when their headquarters wagons had been pressed so closely by our cavalry a few days before, and it was found they would have to destroy all their baggage except the clothes they carried on their backs, each one naturally, selected the newest suit he had, and sought to propitiate the gods of destruction by a sacrifice of his second-best.

Conversing at Sea.

No incident of the sea voyage is more interesting than that of the meeting of ships and their conversing with colors. They ask and answer questions with grave courtesy, and tell one another as much as they choose to impart in language as unmistakable as Yes and No. A true marine picture may be found in sailing ship making out the tip of a white wing glistening upon the tumultuous sea line far down upon her bow. As the time passes this luminous star-like point rises and shapes itself into a sail. Other spaces of canvas follow; cloudlike, the beautiful structure soars, bringing with it as it raises a white radiance as though the whole had risen out of the wet silver of the sea; finally the structure of a gallant ship lies toy-like upon the distant ocean line, and then with the aid of a glass, a spot of color may be seen, radiant at a point where it is most easily read. She is speaking to the other and in a short time the conversation between the two distant fabrics is proceeding in good earnest. Each one tells the other her name, where she is bound to and where she is from, how many days she is out, and so forth. These are matters of grave interest in the deep solitudes of the ocean. There are a thousand miles of sea between their figureheads and their homes; days have elapsed since the monotonous liquid girdle has been broken by a sail; the weariness of the voyage presses heavily upon the captain and crew, and there is small wonder that there should be interest and even excitement in this encounter of a stranger upon the wide, watery waste, and in this exchange of talk by the butterfly symbols of flags. Again, a slow-solemn journeying ship, signaling a swift mail steamer, making one perceive how much there is in the sea language. The steamer will be home in a few days, she can reckon upon her time as if she were an express train. But the old wagon curtsying upon her quarter may occupy a month or six weeks in making her port.—London Telegraph.

WHEN A WOMAN

becomes afflicted with Kidney disease life is truly a burden. The female organization is so constituted as to be peculiarly susceptible to it; is easily controlled by it, and it rapidly develops and spreads until the whole [illegible] and there is no time when she is free from pain. Refreshing sleep is unknown, the long weary hours of the night are followed by equally long hours of the day, and so the months and years pass, bringing as they roll away increased burdens.

Mrs. C. P. Brackett, wife of a town official, residing in Hermon, Me., had severe case of Kidney disease. In time she became so afflicted with continuous pains across the small of the back, weary, heavy, bearing down pains, heavy dull feeling between the shoulders with occasional spells of "sick headache," as well as other troubles peculiar to this disease in women, so that she at times gave up in despair. She was confined to her house, was deprived of all social intercourse with friends and neighbors and was day and night a constant sufferer. One day she read an advertisement issued by us describing symptoms of kidney disease, and persuaded her husband to buy a bottle of Brown's Sarsaparilla which she used. She said it helped her her husband, having no faith in patent medicines, laughed and told her she was no better, and that "faith" and "hope" had [illegible]. He bought the [illegible] however, and [illegible] helped her rapidly [illegible]. The remedy was continued until Mrs. Brackett was [illegible] and she has now been for over two years free from all symptoms of Kidney disease. The Personal Liberty Question.

The Norwich Telegraph has the following: The following note from an intelligent German, well known in this vicinity, sets [illegible] the position of those of that nationality upon the Sunday question. The true German stands by the best interests of the country of his adoption, and it is only from the restless adventurers from abroad and the reckless American born citizen—and the greedy saloonkeepers that this clamor for a "Continental Sabbath" in America comes, upon which they would have the saloons and bars open after 2 o'clock. We are glad that our friend who, though a resident of Utica, is temporarily stopping and is well-known in our town, has given us his views upon this subject. The following is his note:

Editors Telegraph—Sirs: The Sunday question, which has been forced upon the people of this State by the attitude of the Personal Liberty League, will arouse the religious classes to fight for the strict enforcement of the Sabbath law. As all members of the Personal Liberty League are Germans, a great many people seem to think that most all Germans favor their sentiments. But that is not so. The Personal Liberty League does not represent the German element in this or any other State. The majority of the Germans in New York State are opposed to having the saloons open on Sunday and are well contented with the American laws and the American Sabbath. I came to this country because this country has better institutions and better laws than Germany or any other European country, and gives better opportunity to every man to improve his condition. I have lived twenty-six years in this country and I state frankly and cheerfully that I love the American institutions and laws far better than those of Germany, and the American people, as a whole, are certainly the most liberal and enlightened people in the world. A man must have principle and courage to fight for his principle. I love the American Sabbath and look upon our Sunday laws as the most important and valuable laws, as they promote religion and morality, and in consequence the welfare and happiness of the people. The better class of Germans in this state will arise and say that the Personal Liberty League and the saloon keepers do not represent the German element.

In the last few days I have been asked by different parties what stand the majority of the Germans would take concerning the object of the Personal Liberty League, and that is the reason I addressed these few lines to you and wish you would publish them.

Yours very truly,
G. SCHROEDER.

We propose to make the following two offers to every NEW Subscriber to THE TIMES before Saturday, November 12th.

OFFER No. 1

Is your choice of any twenty of the following Standard and Popular Works in comple form by the best authors.

82. Jack of All Trades. By Charles Reade. The wonderful tale of an artisan who didn't stick to his trade. Full of comical situations, funny incidents of travel in Europe and America, and thrilling adventures as keeper of a colossal elephant.

84. Leys, Lord Berresford. By the "Duchess." This charming society story is one of the best from the pen of the popular author. It is spirited in action, and full of situations calculated to illustrate high life and give piquancy to the narrative. The work of a genius.

86. Clouds and Sunshine. By Charles Reade. A happily told story of farm life, full of pretty rural pictures and pastoral sentiments. An ingenious plot, exciting narrative, characters with passions and motives just like "city folks." All in all, one of the most interesting and readable efforts of the illustrious author.

83. The Haunted House. By Sir E. Bulwer Lytton. This is one of the great author's weirdest romances and happily told stories. Weird and thrilling throughout. Everybody reads it with feelings of delight.

81. John Milton. When, Why, and What he Wrote, by H. A. Taine. Like all of this brilliant author's works, the present one is a model of analysis and compressed information. It is full of surprises, and one can get a better idea of Milton, his times, style and works from its pages than from any other source.

80. Dr. Marigold. By Charles Dickens. One of Dickens' crispest and most amusing sketches of a quaint and curious character. Readable, laughable, and a sure antidote to dull care. Every community needs its "Dr. Marigold," and all lovers take kindly to his prescriptions.

79. The Knightsbridge Mystery. By Charles Reade. One of those ingeniously devised and thrillingly told stories which immortalized Reade. The plot is a work of art. Concealment is the artist's game, till after winding through a forest of mysteries, the fearful cloud bursts on the reader like an alpine avalanche or ocean waterspout.

75. Allan Quatermain; the latest and best novel from the pen of the popular H. Rider Haggard. In this story of African adventure, the author surpasses the glowing descriptive vigor, startling situation and thrilling activity that made "She" such a revelation in fiction. No more exciting romance has ever come to the surface in English literature and it must share the popularity of all his other works. Part I.

76. Allan Quatermain. Part II.

77. Allan Quatermain. Part III.

78. Allan Quatermain. Part IV.

74. The Trial of Pickwick. By Charles Dickens. This is the first time the entire story of the gallant Pickwick's adventures with the impressionable Mrs. Bardell has appeared in connected form. It abounds in ludicrous situations and mirth-provoking incidents.

68. Peg Woffington. Part II.

51. Miss Toosey's Mission, and Laddie. Two of those rarely conceived and charmingly told stories of home and duty which refresh and inspire. They ought to be read by every young person who has the world to face.

49. Paul and Virginia. By Bernardin de St. Pierre. This elegant household classic renews its freshness and beauty with every reading. It is the "story that never dies," told in the purest language and tenderest style. Part I.

50. Paul and Virginia. Part II.

48. Cardinal Richelieu. By Sir E. Bulwer Lytton. The character of the wily, ambitious and brilliant French primate, as sketched by Bulwer in his immortal play of Cardinal Richelieu, is the one which has become historic. It is a master-piece of dramatic composition.

47. Enoch Arden, and other gems. By Alfred Tennyson. For purity of style, genuine sweetness and touching pathos, the great poet has never surpassed his "Enoch Arden." In this poem of human affection he is at his best, and one cannot know the poet-laureate without knowing it.

46. Romeo and Juliet. By William Black. An exquisite sketch of two foolish lovers, who mingle tender sentiment with the ludicrous in a way to make everybody smile. This author's stories are always racy and full of telling points.

72. Duty Unto Death, or Life and Work of Rev. George C. Haddock, Apostle of Prohibition in the Northwest. By his brother, John A. Haddock. The murder of this great pulpit and platform orator and eloquent temperance champion sent a thrill of horror through the Northwest and entire country. The work is an ably written review of the man and his career, and contains a graphic account of his assassination. Part I.

73. Duty Unto Death, etc. Part II.

70. The Coming Race, or New Utopia. By Sir E. Bulwer Lytton. A thrilling history of life among an ideal people found in the centre of the earth, where the beauties are Arcadian, the form perfect, the thought pure and motive free. A charming book; light, cheerful. Part I.

71. The Coming Race, or New Utopia, Part II

69. Bulldog and Butterfly. By David Christie Murray. A spicily told story of human character, yet not a bit overdrawn. Bulldogs and Butterflies are all around us.

65. She; or Adventures in the Caves of Kor. By H. Rider Haggard. This unique and popular story is a new departure in the field of fiction. Its production has carried the author into fame as a writer and artist. The vigor and variety of the book make it especially charming; its narrative imparts a pleasant thrill as it glides through wonderful scenes and startling events. Part I.

66. She; or Adventures, etc. Part II.

67. She; or Adventures, etc. Part III.

68. She; or Adventures, etc. Part IV.

64. Calderon the Courtier. By Sir E. Bulwer Lytton. One of the best of the great author's historic stories. Full of graphic situations, quick action, and rare information.

62. Stabbed in the Dark. By E. Lynn Linton. A strong, stirring story of the old Neapolitan days, by an author who invents ingenious plots and handles intricate situations like a master. Part I.

63. Stabbed in the Dark. Part II.

61. The Cricket on the Hearth. By Charles Dickens. One of the sweetest and tenderest things ever written by Dickens. All love it for its beauty and pathos, and it will be preserved and read long after some of his most imaginative works have been forgotten.

60. The Lady of Lyons. By Sir E. Bulwer Lytton. This is the lady as seen in the celebrated play of the same name. It ranks as the prettiest picture of devotion and sincerest expression of the "tender passion" ever placed on the stage.

59. Julia and Her Romeo. By David Christie Murray. This author is always ingenious and racy. In "Julia and Her Romeo" he is particularly charming. The reader is held to the last in a spell which makes him regret the end of the story.

58. Doom! An Atlantic Episode. By Justin H. McCarthy. A powerful and thrilling story of life on an American liner. The situations are natural, the plot intense, the sketching exquisite. The hand of a master is visible from the "all aboard" at Liverpool, to the terrible landing at New York.

57. William Shakspeare; How, When, Why and What he wrote. By H. A. Taine. There never has been compressed into such brief space so much about the immortal "Bard of Avon" as in this work of the brilliant French author. It will open the eyes of the reader to a thousand things he never dreamed of

55. Rasselas. Prince of Abyssinia. By Dr. Samuel Johnson. One of those immortal writings by a master mind which no one can afford not to read. It is a story of the human heart in its happiest moods, earnest longings, and noblest aspirations. Part I.

56. Rasselas. Prince of Abyssinia. Part II.

54. Money. By Sir E. Bulwer Lytton. Whoever read Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice" should read Bulwer's "Money." Under the above title you see the coinage and hear the jingle of the full play.

52. Peg Woffington. By Charles Reade. This masterpiece by the great novelist is one of those exquisite mosaics with which great minds ornament their work. Not to know Peg Woffington is not to know Reade. Part I.

OFFER No. 2.

To every NEW Subscriber who will pay us $2.00 we will furnish them with one Year's Subscription to THE FULTON TIMES, One Year's Subscription to the N. Y. Weekly World. The greatest newspaper on this continent and your choice of either one of the following books:

History of the U. S.

Bound in Leatherette Tree Calf.

Regular Price $2.00.

This dainty book of 330 pages is indispensable to every one as a work of quick and convenient reference. It is upon an entirely novel and original plan, which makes it indispensable to every person, no matter how many other histories he may have.

The arrangement is chronologically, by years, from 432 to 1887. Every event is narrated in the order of its date. These are not confined, as in other works, to political matters, but embrace every branch of human action. It described under its proper date all important patents; all discoveries in science and the useful arts; fires, floods, hailstorms, tornadoes, cyclones, epidemics, accidents and disasters on sea and land; labor troubles, strikes and lockouts, and hundreds of other matters never mentioned by historians. Besides being a history in the ordinary sense, it is a condensed newspaper file for four hundred years. Over 100,000 copies were presented to subscribers during 1886, and every one who received a copy was charmed and delighted.

Hist'ry of England

Bound in Leatherette Tree Calf.

Regular Price $2.00.

Thus, the second of THE WORLD'S History Series, is uniform in style and arrangement with its History of the United States. As a storehouse of facts it is without a rival. Every history of England has been carefully searched for data, and many important corrections have been made in the commonly received chronology. Like its companion volume, it is much more than an ordinary history, embracing every branch of human action, and its facts are gathered from thousands of sources not touched by any historian. Attention has been particularly directed to the Victorian era, and the dates of every important event of her reign are given with a minuteness of detail that renders it invaluable to every student of our own times. As a work of convenient reference for the editor, teacher, pupil and general newspaper reader, nothing like it has ever been published, and it will take the place in every library not only of the hundreds of books in which is scattered the information here gathered together, but of files of newspapers for the past century. The History of England is a little larger than the History of the United States.

Everybodys Guide

Bound in Leatherette Tree Calf.

Regular Price $2.00.

This is uniform in style and binding with the histories, but a much larger book than either, containing 410 closely printed pages of fine type. It is a condensation, by the author of Moore's "Universal Assistant," containing everything making that work so popular, and omitting only such of the business forms and illustrations as added to the bulk without increasing its usefulness. The "Universal Assistant" originally sold for $10, and has become almost as necessary in every household as a dictionary or a clock. The value of the work lies in the fact that the information is of the kind needed in ordinary daily life, yet cannot be obtained without reference to rare and costly books, and is not found in encyclopædias. It tells the housewife how to make fresh extracts, the husband how to break well or mend ailing horses. It reveals the secrets of the dyer and bleacher, of the grocer and confectioner, and of all special trades. A table of contents would fill six columns of THE WORLD. The binding is leatherette tree calf of a slightly different design, both in the "tree" and the gilt, from the histories.

☞ Old Subscribers can take advantage of these offers by paying to date and one year in advance. No one however can secure these premiums by paying less than $1.25 for Offer No. 1 and $2.00 for Offer No. 2.

JAS. R. FAIRGRIEVE - EDITOR

THE Personal Liberty Question is the source of considerable discussion and political manipulation G. Schroeder, of Utica, who is well known in Fulton as a music compositer and piano tuner, while in town last week, gave us a paper containing views on the subject It can be found on the first page of this issue.

THERE is no question but that Fulton is to have two electric light companies both under the control of local parties, "The Citizens' Electric Co," with a capital stock of $30,000 which will doubtless use the Thomson-Houston arc and incandescent lights and a majority of the stock held by citizens. The 1,200 shares of this company sell at $25 each.

"The Fulton Schuyler Electric Light Co," capitalized at $33,000 will use the Schuyler arc and Edison incandescent lights. The 330 shares of this stock have all been sold to citizens at $22 per share. It looks as though we would have lights and lots of them.

THE Palladium publishers and editors all made a made a visit to our beautiful village on Monday afternoon.

It seems that Mr. Spencer became very wroth at articles which the Palladium had published concerning him and what they term "The Poor House Ring" and when on Friday last, they stated that he had purchased ninety bushels of potatoes for the Poor House at one dollar per bushel when the market price was sixty cents, and that the party who got this price got the delegation from that town solid for Spencer for Superintendent of the Poor, it was more than he could stand.

He came to Fulton and had a warrant sworn out before Police Justice Van Wagenen. This was served by Criminal Deputy Sheriff Poole, and John A. Barry, Clark Morrison and James Cronly were brought here. These gentlemen were placed under $300 bail to await the action of the grand jury. Hon. Willard Johnson becoming security.

The Palladium people have the satisfaction of knowing that they have an able supporter and staunch friend in this village—The Patriot. Rarely indeed do we find two newspapers, representatives of different political parties, that have the approbation, friendship, and love for each other that the Patriot and Palladium have. This is clearly evident to those that have had the opportunity to read both papers for the past two months and heard the terms of endearment that they have applied to each other.

That "wonder" now always secretly connected with a battery so arraged as as to defeat discovery!

Many "freaks of nature" are only freaks of clever deceptive skill.

Bishop, the mind-reader, so-called, was shown to be only a shrewd student of human nature, whose reading of thought was not phenomenal.

Even so intelligent a man as Robert Dale Owen was for many years fully persuaded that certain alleged spiritual manifestations were genuine, but, in the Katie King case, he eventually found that he had been remorselessly deceived.

When to natural credulity is added a somewhat easily-fired imagination, spectres become facts, and clever tricks realities.

"That man" remarked a prominent physician the other day to our reporter, "thinks he is sick. He is a 'hypo.' He comes here regularly three times a week for treatment. There is absolutely nothing the matter with him, but of course every time he comes I fix him up something."

"And he pays it?"

"Yes, $3.00 a visit. But what I give him has no remedial power whatever. I have to cater his imaginary ills. He is one of my best friends, and I dare not disappoint his fears."

An even more striking case of professional delusion is related by W. H. Winton, business manager of the Kingston (N. Y.) Freeman:

"In 1883, Mr. R. R., of New York, (a relative of the late vice-president of the United States) was seriously ill of a very fatal disorder. The best physicians attended him, but, until the last one was tried, he constantly grew worse. This doctor gave him some medicine in a two ounce bottle. Improving, he got another bottle, paying $2 for each. He was getting relief after having used several of these mysterious small bottles.

One day he laid one on his desk in his New York office. In the same office a friend was using a remedy put up in a large bottle. By pure accident it was found out that these two bottles contained exactly the same medicine, the two ounce vial costing the doctor's patient $2, while his friend paid but $1.25 for a bottle holding over sixteen ounces of Warner's safe cure. The doctor's services were stopped at once, the man continued treating himself with what his doctor had secretly prescribed—Warner's safe cure, which finally restored him to health from an attack of what his doctors called bright's disease."

If the leading physicians in the land through fear of the code, will secretly prescribe Warner's safe cure in all cases of kidney, liver and general disorder, do they not thereby confess their own disability to cure it, and, by the strongest sort of endorsement, commend that preparation to the public?

We hear it warmly spoken of in every direction, and we have no doubt what ever that it is, all things considered, the very best article of the kind ever known.

Caged at Last

It will be remembered that Captain Williams, of Oswego was robbed of $1,200 by bunco steerers some weeks since, and that much was said about Professor Heins, of Philadelphia, being guilty of the crime. This has been shown to be a case of utterly mistaken identity. Last week the guilty parties were arrested at Akron, Ohio. Capt. Williams went to that city and fully identified the men, Gibson and Wills, as the men who robbed him.

These men were brought to Oswego and have been positively identified as the bunco men wanted. Examination was made Saturday and testimony taken. District Attorney Mead having charge of the case for the people. The examination was adjourned until to-morrow, when Assist. District Attorney Stranahan will doubtless appear for the people as Mr. Mead will have to attend court at Pulaski.

The prisoners are held on $3,000 bail. Efforts have been made by their friend, W. E. Train of New York, to bring about a settlement. He being willing to pay back to Captain Williams the $1,200 he lost, together with all the costs, if the men are allowed to go on nominal bail bond.

HALL'S

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local treatment, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure now on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system. They offer $100 for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address,

A sensible exchange says "Ever keep in mind that villagers who spend their money at the counter of the home merchant contribute to build up the town. NEW YORK LETTER.

Political News—How the Canvass is Going on in New York—Gould's Trip to Europe—A Criminal Suit to be brought against Him. A Society Favorite's Advent to the Stage.

[Special to THE TIMES].

The all-absorbing theme of talk among all classes of citizens these days is the probable results of Nov. 8th, and every other man one meets is either "a prophet or a son of a prophet," if the manner used in discussing the political status of the different candidates be taken as a guide. As a matter of fact the state canvass pales into insignificance before the issues of local affairs. The truth of the whole matter can be summed up in three words "Boodlers vs Anti-Boodlers" and it is upon the District Attorney's office that the whole matter turns. Since the very vigorous efforts of Mr. Martine and his able assistant, Mr. Nicoll, placed so many of the dishonest and unworthy Aldermen either in Sing Sing or in disgraceful refuge in Canada, there has been an undercurrent of feeling gathering head that in the event of Mr. Martine's refusal to again become District Attorney, it was but just and right to advance Mr. Nicoll to that place. But these places are usually at the beck and call of the bosses of the Democracy in this city as represented by the two organizations, County Democracy and Tammany, the chief factor of the former being Police Justice Power and of the latter Fire Commissioner Croker. Tammany was willing to accept Mr. Nicoll, but the "Counties" refused in toto, the reason being that the influence of that contingent of this organization, now temporarily residing in Canada made itself so felt as to render Police Justice Power's hold somewhat insecure. So instead of satisfying the public desire which Democrats of both party wings and Republicans alike expressed, Mr. Fellows as one of the aids to Mr. Martine was nominated. Thus forcing on the Democrats the toil and figure head of the Canada wing of the party. I doubt if any event in this canvass could have been more ill-timed than this. Mr. Fellows has not the most savory reputation. His ability as a lawyer is unquestioned and his eloquence as an orator ranks with the legal lights of the New York bar, but his adherence to Tweed in the days of that iniquitous regieme, his refusal to help in the prosecution of Alderman Cleary, and the many unsatisfied judgments known to be in force against him make him in all things a most unsatisfactory candidate.

The Republicans very wisely went outside of their party and endorsed Martine whom the Democratic party nominated for General Sessions Judge and placed in nomination Mr. Nicoll. The unanimity of sentiment toward this young man is something wonderful. Only those men who follow the "Machine" dictation are among the opponents of Mr. Nicoll. The men of all political stripes are unanimous in his favor and there is no doubt of his election. The success of Mr. Nicoll in attaining this office means the future prosecution and punishment of the boodlemen and the retention in Canada for three years longer of the men who fled from justice. It was told me by one who ought to know that Sharp only desired to obtain a sufficient delay in his case till election day should have passed, and it was upon the issue of that day he especially looked. I was told, too, that if any man other than Nicoll were nominated, there was boodle for him. I rather think there's truth in this for Sharp is decidedly anxious to get rid of Sing Sing and in the event of a change in the administration of the District Attorney's office, the aspect of Sharp's case would brighten considerably. As it now stands the decision of the Court of Appeals is expected in the last days of November, when the court re-assembles.

There was a conference the other day in one of the city office at which four persons were present, namely: The Mayor, Power, Croker and Martine. It will be remembered from what is above written that three of the candidates on the ticket are found in the District Attorney's office, two being pitted against each other for the same office. The object of this conference was to compel Mr. Martine to sign a letter, condemning Mr. Nicoll [illegible] the Republican [illegible] great personal independence refused I am told in language as forcible as the dictionary contains and I suspect that the other three worthies are considerably angered. Nicoll can well afford to run for he is nominated by no less than four bodies. Irving Hall, The Citizens, Committee of 100 and the Republicans.

The registry is 235,000. It is a matter of the highest folly to attempt to determine how the number of voters will be divided among the four party candidates. I am often asked, Where is George's party coming out? Last year 68,000, what this?" I don't know and I have no guess to make. But I strongly suspect that those "timid good Republicans" who voted for Hewitt lest George might be elected will return to their "own vine and fig tree." There is more chance of judging accurately by next week.

The Pacific R. R. investigation is bearing its legitimate fruit in the shape of law suits against Jay Gould and his clique. Recently a suit was brought by some bondholders of the Kansas Pacific for damages on account of the manner by which Gould and his friends administered the trusteeship of the mortgage on that road to their own personal advantage rather than for the general benefit of all concerned. This mismanagement came out in the investigation, but was defended in Gould's usual way of professing to know nothing about it, yet telling all about it, glossing over the irregularities and showing how much more beneficial his way was. The defrauded and robbed bondholders not in the clique suffered in silence, some of them being prominent bankers and brokers, who, knowing Gould's great financial power did not dare to make any disturbance, fearing their own failure and business downfall. However, this evidence before the investigating committee is made an entering wedge and through Lawyer DeLancey they propose to prosecute.

Gould is lucky—His star seems ever to be on the ascendant. The fact is that these bondholders propose bringing a criminal charge, and in as much as Gould was to start for Europe on a six month's trip before the Grand Jury meet they sought to have him detained. Indeed Mr. Martine refused to permit him to leave until he had examined the case. But somehow Gould got away, for Mr. Martine was satisfied that he could not legally withhold him. It was said down town that Gould feared the 11th of November, that it might, if he were in New York, prove an "Ides of March" to him. The reason being that the hanging of the Chicago Anarchists will then occur and he might suffer from some infernal machine.

He is getting horribly nervous. His Fifth avenue mansion is in the hands of carpenters etc., but two watchmen guard it constantly, while a strong force prowl around his Livingston county mansion wherever he is there guarding its entrances and otherwise protecting him.

It is proper in these days to obtain theatrical prominence by first passing as a society beauty. Witness if you doubt it, Mrs. Langtry and Miss Fortescue, both English, who took society by by storm as the correct type of female beauty and then gathered in the sheckles that rained down in the performance of an amateur among professionals. Now, we have Mrs. James Brown Potter who reigned in society here as a beauty, gave to society a new sort of walk, went to England obtained the gracious favor of H. R. H. Albert Edward and with all this preponderance of good backing went on the stage and money flowed in. Now she comes back to her mother land and I suspect society will rave again. Result—an unlimited supply of money. Mrs. Potter was a New Orleans girl, the daughter of David Urquehart who lost his plantation and negroes during the war. She married Howard Potter a few years ago and thus became connected with that exclusive Potter family, one of whose members is Dr. Potter of Hobart College, Orlando B. Potter, a large real estate owner here, and the late Bishop Potter. Her husband is the cousin of the present Bishop of this diocese. It is not a matter of much conjecture what her acting will be like, for the first year's work of all former society beauties [illegible] the public [illegible] score. It is the best plan for financial success. In fact we might formulate it into a rule for future use. To be an actress, first become a success in society circles and big box office money will follow the advent on the stage. Ability, dramatic ability, has no place in this rule.

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

UTICA, N. Y. Oct. 31

The cheese market to-day showed a small decline of ¼c., but there was no disposition on the part of salesmen to hold back their stock. The belief is that we have seen the highest prices of season, and while no one expects any serious break, there is a desire to get rid of the stock as fast as it is ready to go. October cheese is now sold down to the 13th or 14th of the month, on an average; and as it is all or nearly all, full cream stock, it has been freely taken by the home trade as being richer and later made than the September stock, and more desirable for holding. All the high priced goods sold to-day were for this class of trade. Two or three buyers took hardly anything except what they wanted for the domestic consumption. For the rest of the season this trade will probably play an important part in the business of our board. Following is the list of sales:

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Oct. 31.

Cheese—The market was a little slow, to-day, owing to a drop in prices, which amounts to fully ¼c. The ruling price was 10¾c.; to-day it is 10½ cents. This is all the factorymen need expect, in view of the prices paid for September stock, although fine Octobers are considered just as good by many. There is little that can be said of the market, except the old story, factorymen selling off as fast as the stock is cured, at the best price they can obtain, and totally wanting in faith that better prices are to come. Sales to-day were almost wholly of October stock. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price
10	601	10

Farm Daries.—Prices on the morning market ranged at 9¼ to 11c., the bulk going at 10¾c.

Citizens' Electric Company.

The "Citizen's Electric Company" of Fulton N. Y. with capital stock fixed at thirty thousand dollars divided into twelve hundred shares of twenty-five dollars each, is now before the people for their subscription. This company is promulgated by the Thomson-Houston Co. or their agents, but the opportunity is offered for the people to buy a majority of the stock and control the company.

For three years there has been a wrangle over water works and Fulton is still without water. For nearly a year and a half there has been a fight between two electric light companies, competition is good—but every wise person knows that there is not enough business in electric lighting in Fulton and Oswego Falls to support two companies, and that the result will be that one company will absorb the other or there will be a reorganization or consolidation of the two and that the new company can fix the price of lighting at what figure it pleases and the people will have to pay. The best thing that can be done is for all the people to come forward and each purchase a share of stock in this company—to purchase the whole twelve hundred shares if possible or if not as many, at least as six hundred and fifty shares, so that a majority of the stock will be held by the citizens of these villages. There can be no question but what the Thomson-Houston Co. expect to sell to such a company apparatus for making the electric lights, but there is no restriction in the organization which limits them to any light or which would forbid the company from buying apparatus of any electric company in existence. If the people purchase as many as six hundred and fifty shares of this stock, they will be independent of any company and could buy their apparatus in any market they pleased. It is a grand opportunity for the citizens of both villages to make it a public matter and by most of the people taking stock and getting the majority of shares—control the electric lighting in both villages. If there is any profits in electric lighting, there is no reason why the people should not reap those profits, instead of foreign electric companies. Furthermore by the people generally becoming interested subscribers in such a movement, it would effectually settle all quarrels in our villages over electric lighting. These statements are plain and the desired result of taking control of the lighting out of the hands of foreign companies can be reached if the public will take hold of the matter. An endeavor will be made to visit every citizen and interest them in the movement, but it is best to make these facts public to bring attention to it and that there can be no mistaken views.

SUPPLEMENT.

Baldwinsville is to be lighted Dec. 1 by sixteen candle power incandescent lights furnished by the Edison Company.

Mrs. R. Poole has greatly improved her home on Second street, by making an additional story, remodeling the and repainting it.

Dr. W. L. Woodbury is doing as well as could be expected with a broken limb. We hope to see him out again as well as ever in a few weeks.

The Sawtelle Comedy Company took well in this village and all of last week played to good houses. On some evenings standing room was at a premium.

Jay C. Harrington writes from Pasadenia Cal., that he has purchased some real estate there and if he holds it until February he will pick oranges. He says the climate is grand and that he is enjoying good health.

Miss Grace Smith, daughter of Rev. Charles Smith, formerly pastor of the Baptist church in this village, was married on Saturday to Dr. Nelson Richmond at Fredonia, N. Y., the bride's home.

The Odd Fellows have placed in one of their windows in their new lodge rooms, a marble tablet 34x22 inches. It has the all seeing eye, the initials I. O. O. F., the three links in which are the initials F. L. T. and the date 1887.

The letters and figures are all cut out of the marble and inlaid with gold.

The night selected for the great production of Richelieu at the Opera House by Dr DeMarsan Spencer and our leading local talent, is Tuesday evening, Nov. 22nd, three weeks from yesterday. This great play will be followed by a farce, Slasher and Crasher, in which Spencer personates a coward. We hear great things of the rehearsals.

Several places have been broken into in Oswego during the past week. A heavy burglary in Baldwinsville, Suydam's jewelry store, occurred two weeks since. Phoenix and other villages in this vicinity have had slight touches of burglary. Fulton, possibly on account of its efficient night watchmen, has not yet suffered. But while these are going on so near us it is well to be on the watch and take extra precautions.

Officer VanValkenburg arrested Robert Pollock early Sunday evening for being intoxicated. Pollock did not think favorably about going to the lockup and took refuge in the entrance way to C. R. Nichol's Jewelry store. The officer gave him the Fulton policemen's twist which threw the prisoner's feet in the air with such force that they went through one of the large plate glass windows in front of the store. There is now a bill of about $40 for someone to settle.

The coming event in sporting circles here will be the mill between that Stoddard of Syracuse and "Con" Tobin, a moulder in the Howe stove works. The affair will probably take place in about three weeks. Stoddard, who was born in Oswego Falls, is well known here, and Fultonians have watched his progress in the fistic field with much interest. Tobin, who hails from Troy, is about six feet in height and weighs about 220 pounds. He has participated in several battles before and has never been bested. He is well built, exceedingly muscular, and says he will fight any man in New York State for any amount he may wish to deposit.—Fulton Cor. Herald.

Norman Rowe Dead

Norman Rowe, the oldest Justice of the Peace in this state and probably the oldest in the world, died at his home in New Haven Saturday, Oct. 29, 1887 having reached the extreme age of ninety-three. He was a native of Connecticut, and resided for some time in Paris and Vernon Oneida county. In 1861 he married Miss Mary Moore and moved to New Haven. Mrs Rowe died in 1835, and he subsequently married Mrs Sarah Hitchcock, who died in 1881. He was a prominent member of the Congregational church.

Mr. Rowe was first made justice of the peace in 1827 and served as such in all 54 years. He was elected sheriff in 1840, and again in 1848 and during the term resided in Oswego. We take the following from the Oswego Times:

"Mr. Rowe, while still a resident of Oneida county, joined the Congregational church, and was one of the original members of the Congregational church in New Haven, which was organized soon after he removed to that place. He was for all these years in the true sense of the term one of the "pillars of the church." He has been most of the time a trustee and deacon of the church. The present church edifice although it has been enlarged since, was built mainly through his efforts. The pine lumber from which that edifice was constructed was from logs which grew a little out of the present village of Fulton on what has been known as the "Whitaker farm." Mr. Rowe with his own hands, felled the timber, assisted in cutting the logs and with a yoke of oxen drew them to a sawmill in the neighborhood on Waterhouse creek, where they were sawed into boards and "siding," and the lumber Mr. Rowe drew with a yoke of oxen from Fulton to New Haven, over the roads, or the apologies for roads of those days.

During half a century "Esq." Rowe has been one of the best known residents of Oswego county. His leading characteristics have always been intelligence, integrity and unswerving honesty. It has seldom fallen to the lot of any man to exert a wider influence in the community in which he lived. He was, in fact a model citizen in every respect. He has lived far beyond the ordinary years allotted to human beings but all of his years have been years of usefulness and honor to an extent which is accorded to but few.

Mr Rowe was the father of N. M Rowe of this city, Henry Rowe of Ohio, Augustus Rowe of New Haven, Miss Abbie Rowe, for many years one of the most highly respected teachers of this city who has for several years devoted herself to the care of her father. Mrs. Dr. C. M. Lee of Fulton was an adopted daughter of Mr. Rowe and was reared in his family."

Funeral services were held at the Congregational church in New Haven yesterday at 2 o'clock.

Remenyi Drowned.

Edward Remenyi, the distinguished violinist, who was so well known throughout the United States, has been drowned in a shipwreck off Madigascar. Remenyi was a Hungarian by birth, and at the time of his death was about 50 years of age. He was a pupil of the Vienna Conservatoire and was instructed by Joseph Boom, who also instructed Joachim. He was also intimately acquainted with Franz Liszt, who was not only his friend but his adviser. Before coming to America Remenyi had achieved a great European renown, and had already been appointed solo violinist to the Queen of England, and had occupied a similar artistic relationship to the Emperor of Austria. He made his first appearance in New York at Chickering Hall. He subsquently played in all the prominent concert halls throughout the United States and attained great popularity. Personally he was the simplest and quietest of men —N. Y. Times.

Comments on the Death of Captain Stewart's Children.

The Rome Sentinel's "Man About Town" writes as follows regarding the recent death of Captain Stewart's children:

"No doubt many of the readers of the Sentinel were quite shocked at the story of the death by diphtheria of the three children of Captain Stewart of the canal boat Bond of Oswego Falls. Those who saw the little fellow who died here, were very much moved at the sight of him as he passed along the street on the morning of his death. The Phoenix physician who attended the first boy who died pronounced the disease cankered sore throat or tonsilitis, a local affection of the throat and tonsils easily cured. Medicine was given him for this trouble and he simply died by inches, filling the cabin and all its surroundings with diphtheretic poison. When the boat reached here he was dead and his brother was practically dying. But the father, seemingly ignorant of how sick the child was, allowed him to walk from the boat to the office of the nearest physician, a distance of over a block. People who passed the father and son on the street were attracted to the appearance of the boy. His father held him by one arm and he walked with the greatest difficulty. One man who passed them was on the point of advising the man to take passage on a street car that was going in the same direction, but refrained. The physician needed but a glance at the child to tell that the poor little fellow was near his end. He advised the father to get him back to the boat as soon as possible. The wonder is not that the two boys died on the boat, but that all who were associated with them did not die. Shut up in a small cabin and breathing, day after day, the air poisoned with diphtheria, the escape of any of the people on board the boat seemed almost miraculous. Of course, relying on what the Phoenix doctor had told them all were ignorant of the danger they were in, which makes the escape of those who lived through the ordeal all the more wonderful."

An interesting letter form Father Early on Temperance will appear in our next issue.

Thanksgiving.

By the President of the United States:

The goodness and the mercy of God, which have followed the American people during all the days of the past year, claim their grateful recognition and humble acknowledgement. By his omnipotent power he has protected us from war and pestilence, and from every national calamity; by his gracious favor the earth has yielded a generous return to the labor of the husbandman, and every path of honest toil has led to comfort and contentment; by his loving kindness the hearts of our people have been replenished with fraternal sentiment and patriotic endeavor, and by his unerring guidance we have been directed in the way of national prosperity.

To the end that we may, with one accord, testify our gratitude for all these blessings, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart, Thursday, the 24th day of November next as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to be observed by all the people of the land. On that day let all secular work and employment be suspended, and let our people assemble in their accustomed places of worship, and with prayer and songs of praise give thanks to our Heavenly Father for all that he has done for us, while we humbly implore the forgiveness of our sins, and a continuance of his mercy.

Let families and kindred be reunited on that day, and let their hearts, filled with kindly cheer and affectionate reminiscence, be turned in thankfulness to the source of all their pleasures and the giver of all that makes the day glad and joyous.

And in the midst of our worship and our happiness, let us remember the poor, the needy and the unfortunate, and by our gifts of charity and ready benevolence, let us increase the number of those who, with grateful hearts, shall join in our thanksgiving.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven, and of the independence of the United States, the hundredth and twelfth.

[L. S.]

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President:
THOMAS F. BAYARD, Secretary of State.

BY THE GOVENOR.

The mountains clothed with trees, the valleys filled with corn, the meadows rich with cattle, the streams making the fields green, everywhere speak of the goodness of God, and he has blessed us beyond all nations in wide reaching, fertile farms, with their multitude of contented country homes, and in the busy streets of our many prosperous cities; these all bound together by majestic natural water courses and by great highways built by the genius and industry of our people. The giver of all good gifts has especially granted us happiness and welfare in the year that is ending. We have been kept in health, we have been preserved from strife within our borders and in peace with foreign states, we have been given abundant harvests, and have seen great increase in our material wealth.

It has been our custom to observe in greatful public and private remembrance of God and his mercies, a day set apart for worship and for reunion of friends and of kindred.

Therefore, by the power vested in me as governor of the State of New York, I do appoint Thursday, the twenty-fourth day of this November, as a day of thanksgiving.

Let the people then rejoice, and that all may be patakers in rejoicing, let the spirit of Christian charity abound, and thus the hungry be fed, the naked clothed, and the prisoner visited and the ignorant taught the foundations upon which our freedom rests.

Done at the capital, in the city of Albany, this first day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

Citizens' Electric Company.

The "Citizen's Electric Company" of Fulton N. Y. with capital stock fixed at thirty thousand dollars divided into twelve hundred shares of twenty-five dollars each, is now before the people for their subscription. This company is promulgated by the Thomson-Houston Co. or their agents, but the opportunity is offered for the people to buy a majority of the stock and control the company.

For three years there has been a wrangle over water works and Fulton is still without water. For nearly a year and a half there has been a fight between two electric light companies, competition is good—but every wise person knows that there is not enough business in electric lighting in Fulton and Oswego Falls to support two companies, and that the result will be that one company will absorb the other or there will be a reorganization or consolidation of the two and that the new company can fix the price of lighting at what figure it pleases and the people will have to pay. The best thing that can be done is for all the people to come forward and each purchase a share of stock in this company—to purchase the whole twelve hundred shares if possible or if not as many, at least as six hundred and fifty shares, so that a majority of the stock will be held by the citizens of these villages. There can be no question but what the Thomson-Houston Co. expect to sell to such a company apparatus for making the electric lights, but there is no restriction in the organization which limits them to any light or which would forbid the company from buying apparatus of any electric company in existence. If the people purchase as many as six hundred and fifty shares of this stock, they will be independent of any company and could buy their apparatus in any market they pleased. It is a grand opportunity for the citizens of both villages to make it a public matter and by most of the people taking stock and getting the majority of shares—control the electric lighting in both villages. If there is any profits in electric lighting, there is no reason why the people should not reap those profits, instead of foreign electric companies. Furthermore by the people generally becoming interested subscribers in such a movement, it would effectually settle all quarrels in our villages over electric lighting. These statements are plain and the desired result of taking control of the lighting out of the hands of foreign companies can be reached if the public will take hold of the matter. An endeavor will be made to visit every citizen and interest them in the movement, but it is best to make these facts public to bring attention to it and that there can be no mistaken views.

Nichol's Jewelry store. The officer gave him the Fulton policemen's twist which threw the prisoner's feet in the air with such force that they went through one of the large plate glass windows in front of the store. There is now a bill of about $40 for someone to settle.

The coming event in sporting circles here will be the mill between Hal Stoddard of Syracuse and "Con" Tobin, a moulder in the Howe stove works. The affair will probably take place in about three weeks. Stoddard, who was born in Oswego Falls, is well known here, and Fultonians have watched his progress in the fistic field with much interest. Tobin, who hails from Troy, is about six feet in height and weighs about 220 pounds. He has participated in several battles before and has never been bested. He is well built, exceedingly muscular, and says he will fight any man in New York State for any amount he may wish to deposit.—Fulten Cor. Herald.

Norman Rowe Dead.

Norman Rowe, the oldest Justice of the Peace in this state and probably the oldest in the world, died at his home in New Haven Saturday, Oct. 29, 1887 having reached the extreme age of ninety-three. He was a native of Connecticut, and resided for some time in Paris and Vernon Oneida county. In 1861 he married Miss Mary Moore and moved to New Haven. Mrs Rowe died in 1835, and he subsequently married Mrs Sarah Hitchcock, who died in 1880. He was a prominent member of the Congregational church.

Mr. Rowe was first made justice of the peace in 1827 and served as such in all 54 years. He was elected sheriff in 1840, and again in 1848 and during the term resided in Oswego. We take the following from the Oswego Times:

"Mr. Rowe, while still a resident of Oneida county, joined the Congregational church, and was one of the original members of the Congregational church in New Haven, which was organized soon after he removed to that place. He was for all these years in the true sense of the term one of the "pillars of the church." He has been most of the time a trustee and deacon of the church. The present church edifice although it has been enlarged since, was built mainly through his efforts. The pine lumber from which that edifice was constructed was from logs which grew a little out of the present village of Fulton on what has been known as the "Whitaker farm." Mr. Rowe with his own hands, felled the timber, assisted in cutting the logs and with a yoke of oxen drew them to a sawmill in the neighborhood on Waterhouse creek, where they were sawed into boards and "siding," and the lumber Mr. Rowe drew with a yoke of oxen from Fulton to New Haven, over the roads, or the apologies for roads of those days.

During half a century 'Esq.' Rowe has been one of the best known residents of Oswego county. His leading characteristics have always been intelligence, integrity and unswerving honesty. It has seldom fallen to the lot of any man to exert a wider influence in the community in which he lived. He was, in fact a model citizen in every respect He has lived far beyond the ordinary years allotted to human beings but all of his years have been years of usefulness and honor to an extent which is accorded to but few.

Mr Rowe was the father of N. M. Rowe of this city, Henry Rowe of Ohio, Augustus Rowe of New Haven, Miss Abbie Rowe, for many years one of the most highly respected teachers of this city who has for several years devoted herself to the care of her father. Mrs. Dr. C. M. Lee of Fulton was an adopted daughter of Mr. Rowe and was reared in his family."

Funeral services were held at the Congregational church in New Haven yesterday at 2 o'clock.

Remenyi Drowned.

Edward Remenyi, the distingnished violinist, who was so well known throughout the United States, has been drowned in a shipwreck off Madigascar. Remenyi was a Hungarian by birth, and at the time of his death was about 50 years of age. He was a pupil of the Vienna Conservatoire and was instructed by Joseph Böhm, who also instructed Joachim. He was also intimately acquainted with Franz Liszt, who was not only his friend but his adviser. Before coming to America Remenyi had achieved a great European renown, and had already been appointed solo violinist to the Queen of England, and had occupied a similar artistic relationship to the Emperor of Austria. He made his first appearance in New York at Chickering Hall. He subquently played in all the prominent concert halls throughout the United States and attained great popularity. Personally he was the simplest and quietest of men —N. Y. Times.

Comments on the Death of Captain Stewart's Children.

The Rome Sentinel's "Man About Town" writes as follows regarding the recent death of Captain Stewart's children:

"No doubt many of the readers of the Sentinel were quite shocked at the story of the death by diphtheria of the three children of Captain Stewart of the canal boat Bond of Oswego Falls. Those who saw the little fellow who died here, were very much moved at the sight of him as he passed along the street on the morning af his death. The Phoenix physician who attended the first boy who died pronounced the disease cankered sore throat or tonsilitis, a local affection of the throat and tonsils easily cured. Medicine was given him for this trouble and he simply died by inches, filling the cabin and all its surroundings with diphtheretic poison. When the boat reached here he was dead and his brother was practically dying. But the father, seemingly ignorant of how sick the child was, allowed him to walk from the boat to the office of the nearest physician, a distance of over a block. People who passed the father and son on the street were attracted to the appearance of the boy. His father held him by one arm and he walked with the greatest difficulty. One man who passed them was on the point of advising the man to take passage on a street car that was going in the same direction, but retrained. The physician needed but a glance at the child to tell that the poor little fellow was near his end. He advised the father to get him back to the boat as soon as possible. The wonder is not that the two boys died on the boat, but that all who were associated with them did not die. Shut up in a small cabin and breathing, day after day, the air poisoned with diphtheria, the escape of any of the people on board the boat seemed almost miraculous. Of course, relying on what the Phoenix doctor had told them all were ignorant of the danger they were in, which makes the escape of those who lived through the ordeal all the more wonderful."

An interesting letter form Father Early on Temperance will appear in out next issue.

Thanksgiving.

By the President of the United States:

The goodness and the mercy of God, which have followed the American people during all the days of the past year, claim their grateful recognition and humble acknowledgement. By his omnipotent power he has protected us from war and pestilence, and from every national calamity; by his gracious favor the earth has yielded a generous return to the labor of the husbandman, and every path of honest toil has led to comfort and contentment; by his loving kindness the hearts of our people have been replenished with fraternal sentiment and patriotic endeavor, and by his unerring guidance we have been directed in the way of national prosperity.

To the end that we may, with one accord, testify our gratitude for all these blessings, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart, Thursday, the 24th day of November next as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to be observed by all the people of the land. On that day let all secular work and employment be suspended, and let our people assemble in their accustomed places of worship, and with prayer and songs of praise give thanks to our Heavenly Father for all that he has done for us, while we humbly implore the forgiveness of our sins, and a continuance of his mercy.

Let families and kindred be reunited on that day, and let their hearts, filled with kindly cheer and affectionate reminiscence, be turned in thankfulness to the source of all their pleasures and the giver of all that makes the day glad and joyous.

And in the midst of our worship and our happiness, let us remember the poor, the needy and the unfortunate, and by our gifts of charity and ready benevolence, let us increase the number of those who, with grateful hearts, shall join in our thanksgiving.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven, and of the independence of the United States, the hundredth and twelfth.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President:
THOMAS F. BAYARD, Secretary of State.

BY THE GOVENOR.

The mountains clothed with trees, the valleys filled with corn, the meadows rich with cattle, the streams making the fields green, everywhere speak of the goodness of God, and he has blessed us beyond all nations in wide reaching, fertile farms, with their multitude of contented country homes, and in the busy streets of our many prosperous cities; these all bound together by majestic natural water courses and by great highways built by the genius and industry of our people The giver of all good gifts has especially granted us happiness and welfare in the year that is ending We have been kept in health, we have been presrved from strife within our borders and in peace with foreign states, we have been given abundant harvests, and have seen great increase in our material wealth.

It has been our custom to observe in greatful public and private remembrance of God and his mercies, a day set apart for worship and for reunion of friends and of kindred.

Therefore, by the power vested in me as governor of the State of New York, I do appoint Thursday, the twenty-fourth day of this November, as a day of thanksgiving.

Let the people then rejoice, and that all may be patakers in rejoicing, let the spirit of Christian charity abound, and thus the hungry be fed, the naked clothed, and the prisoner visited and the ignorant taught the foundations upon which our freedom rests.

Done at the capital, in the city of Albany, this first day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

As all crops require a certain amount of lime in order to carry on and perfect their growth, a soil deficient in this mineral substance can never be a productive one, until the deficiency is made good.

It is estimated that the value of eggs brought into the United States from Canada last year in round figures was about $2,280,000. The Canadian export of eggs in 1886 was 12,706,863 dozen, against 8,863,671 dozen in 1876.

Lime may be said to exert a three-fold influence as a fertilizer. It is a direct source of plant food; it unlocks and renders available the stores of inert food, both mineral and organic, contained in the soil; and it ameliorates the texture of clays.

Of the 8,500,000 bushels of peanuts in 1886, worth about $3,000,000, Virginia raised in about half a dozen counties in the southeastern corner of the State 2,500,000 bushels, or five sevenths. It is claimed that for fodder the vines are nearly equal to clover hay. Hogs will fatten on the nuts left in the ground. Peanuts are raised on land which will grow corn, tobacco or wheat profitably.

As soon as apples are picked they should be placed in the coolest dry place that can be found. If put in barrels keep the latter out of the sun, either in the shade of the apple trees or in some well-ventilated building. If apples are placed where the sun strikes them, it occasions great inequalities of temperature. This causes a current of air around them, and no fruit can keep well under such conditions.

It is a good plan to spread a good coat of manure upon any piece of land intended for early planting next spring, and plow it under in the fall. The manure becomes well soaked into the land by winter rains, and the land will dry off quicker and be in order for spring work earlier than if not thus handled. In clearing up land that has been planted it pays well to hoe up the weeds or mow them and burn them, so as to destroy the seeds as much as possible.

To get relief from indigestion, billiousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

Farming as it Should Be.

I do not wonder that young people generally dislike farming, for what can be more dull and unpleasant than the average farm life to a high spirited, ambitious boy or girl? A shabby set of buildings, with old broken fences; a rough, disordered door-yard with no flowers, but many times covered with ugly rocks, old logs and unsightly rubbish these are not calculated to render a boy proud or a girl happy. A farmer should be, first, thrifty; he should keep his fields clean and well cultivated, his walls and fences up, and his buildings well repaired and painted. He should feed his cattle well, and be proud of them, and keep a horse that the "young folks" are not ashamed to drive. He should study his vocation and adopt the best methods, keeping up with the times. Nothing is more important than that his children like their work and home, and nothing will encourage them so much as rendering that home attractive to them. Every farmer should, if possible, possess a lawn beautified with ornamental trees, plants and flowers well arranged and trimmed. I think this as desirable as a good field, and it does not cost quarter as much as many farmers lose by shiftlessness. The enjoyment a family would take from it richly repays the cost. A croquet set looks better to me than a lot of old broken wheels or rotten rubbish! Farmers should read, enjoying the best literature as well as "the news," and give their children opportunities of culture and society.

Such farming is the most independent, healthful and enjoyable occupation, and when pursued with energy and ability is capable of giving the handsomest returns—everything considered—of any business on earth. Shiftlessness is the great disease of farmers, and thrift the best remedy.—Fred. in N.E. Homestead.

It is wrong to experiment with uncertain remedies. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup at once cures the troublesome colic or diarrhoea afflicting the baby.

The wonderful sale and popularity of Laxador is not so surprising, when the very wide range of its adaptation to disease is considered.

Winter Care of Cows.

The arrangement of the barn and yard should be such as to reduce the labor as much as possible. Excessive warmth is not conducive to robustness, health or profit. If a man's house is kept closed up and heated with stoves to a temperature of eighty degrees, and his food and drink are all taken hot with a view to preventing the effects of the cold and to insure more comfort, the dwellers in that house will become sick or diseased; the impure air will poison the blood; the warmth will relax the skin, dry it and open the pores, and the slightest draft will cause a fit of shivering and induce dangerous colds. It is in precisely such houses that sore throat, diphtheria, scarlet fever, and other diseases are so frequent, while in the house where the windows are thrown open to the breezes, and the cold, brisk, pure air is welcomed, and exercise and health give warmth, fed by the abundant oxygen of the fresh air coursing through the blood, there are health and vigor and comfort. It is the same in the dairy. Pleuro-pneumonia invades those herds which are kept in close, warm, unwholesome stables, and the dreaded tuberculosis finds there its prey; while from the wide airy stable, well ventilated and filled with pure cold air, the well fed cows will emerge to frolic in the snow, and enjoy themselves in the bright sunshine and the crisp air, when the thermometer sinks down nearly to zero. Except in [illegible] weather, the cows should spend [illegible] three or four hours every day in [illegible], picking some rough feed and [illegible] water and exercise.—American [illegible] for November.

One Cashier that is Safe.

"I see you have a new cashier," remarked the president of one bank to another.

"Yes, we set him to work yesterday."

"Had any experience?"

"Lots of it."

"Under heavy bonds, I suppose? Our man is under $150,000."

"Well, no; we did not require big bonds."

"Great heavens, man, he'll run off in two weeks whith the whole bank."

"We have every confidence in him."

"Well, you'll pay dearly enough for it. He'll be in Canada inside of a month."

"I think not. You see, he has just run away from a Canadian bank with $200,000. I think he is safe enough."—Minneapolis Journal.

The Cashier Had Seen Him Before.

A youngish man, wearing good clothes and a plug hat, rushed up the steps of a Griswold street bank yesterday, hurried along to the window of the cashier and elbowing two or three people aside he said to the man behind the window:

"Can you give me five tens for this fifty? I'm in a great hurry to catch the train."

The cashier calmly received the bill, gave it one brief glance and then shoved it under a stamp and returned it. It was stamped with a big red "counterfeit."

"—— you!" growled the young man with the good clothes, as he hurried out.

"Rats!" replied the cashier, but he was calm—very calm.—Detroit Free Press.

Men who live without religion live always in a tumultuary and restless state.

In Brief and To The Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents. eow

Cleverness is a sort of genius for instrumentality. It is the brain of the hand.

Convenient pleasant, and certain in their results, are Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. Recommended by physicians and endorsed by all who have used them. The best remedy for Dyspepsia, Flatulency, and Constipation. Guaranteed, and sold at 25c. by H. C. Giesler.

When respiration ceases our education is finished, and not a moment sooner.

THE VERDICT UNANIMOUS.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Reaching awide o'er shore and tide,

The Last Call.

I have come to call on Kitty,
But that damsel isn't in—
"Gone to grandma's on an errand,"
Says her sister, with a grin:
Then the miss, half girl, half woman,
With a wholly tomboy air,
Seats herself, and disconcerts me
With a long and awful stare.

"So you want to see my sister,"
Says she to me, by-and-by,
With a silly little snicker,
And a twinkle in her eye.
"Yes, I want to see your sister,"
Is my answer, low and faint,
And my wits and words forsake me,
(She's enough to vex a saint.)

"Lots of fellows come to see her,"
(Lover's heart arrayed in crape)—
And the grin with which she says it
Would do credit to an ape.
"Harry Jones was here last evening,
And he staid, and staid, and staid."
Oh, the cheerful information
Furnished by the charming maid!

"When they said good-night I saw 'em"—
Here she giggles in delight.
"Do you ever kiss my sister
When you think you're out of sight?"
Oh, the awful thought that stabs me
To the heart—does Kitty Green
Let some other fellow kiss her
When she thinks she isn't seen?

"There comes Kitty. O, good gracious!"—
With her hand upon her mouth
To keep back the laugh that shakes her,
As an earthquake does the south.
"Tommy Brown is coming with her.
Don't you wish you had a gun?
My! when I have a beau, like Kitty,
Won't I have a lot of fun!"

Heartless wretch to laugh at anguish
Such as wrings a lover's heart!
Doubt and hopes are in a struggle—
Shall I tarry or depart?
Does bewitching Kitty love me,
As she's led me to believe,
Or is she a flirt, delighting
Tom, Dick, Harry to deceive?

"Oh, my goodness! did you see that?"
Cries this damsel, wonder-eyed.
Not a word have I to utter—
Doubt has conquered, love has died.
Where's my fancy for her sister?
It has vanished in a trice,
For behind the lilac bushes
Tommy Brown has kissed her twice.

"I must go," I say; "good-evening,"
And made a swift retreat
To the music of a snicker
That is anything but sweet;
And I cross the threshold conscious
Of a nameless little pain—
Is it wrath, or is it sorrow?—
To a giggled "Call again."

—Eben E. Rexford, in Harpers' Weekly.

The Drummer's Best Girl.

He hurried up to the office as soon he entered the hotel, and without waiting to register inquired eagerly?

"Any letter for me?"

The clerk sorted over a package with the negligent attention that comes of practice, then flipped one—a very small one on the counter.

The traveling man took it with a curious smile that twisted his pleasant-looking face into a mask of expectancy.

He smiled more as he read it. Then, oblivious of other travelers who jostled him, he laid it tenderly against his lips and actually kissed it.

A loud guffaw startled him.

"Now, look here, old fellow," said a loud voice, "that won't do, you know. Too spooney for anything. Confess now, your wife didn't write that letter?"

"No, she didn't," said the traveling man with an amazed look, as if he would like to change the subject. "That letter is from my best girl."

The admission was so unexpected that the trio of friends who had caught him said no more until after they had eaten a good dinner and were seated together in a chum's room.

Then they began to badger him.

"It's no use you have got to read it to us, Dick," said one of them; "we want to know all about your best girl."

"So you shall," said Dick, with great coolness; "I will give you the letter and you can read it yourselves. There it is," and he laid it open on the table.

"I guess not," said the one who had been loudest in demanding it; "we like to chaff a little, but I hope we are gentlemen. The young lady would hardly care to have her letter read by this crowd," and he looked reproachfully at his friend.

"But I insist upon it," was the answer, "There is nothing in it to be ashamed of—except the spelling; that is a little shaky, I'll admit, but she won't care in the least. Read it Hardy, and judge for yourself."

Thus urged Hardy took up the letter, shamefacedly enough, and read it. There were only a few words. First he laughed—then swallowed suspiciously, and as he finished he threw it on the table again and rubbed the back of his eyes, as if troubled with dimness of vision.

"Pshaw," he said, "if I had a love letter like that——" and then he was silent.

"Fair play!" cried one of the others with an uneasy laugh.

"I'll read it to you boys," said their friend, seeing they made no move to take it, "and I think you'll agree with me that it is a model love letter."

And this was what it read:

Mi owen dear PaPa: i sa mi PRairs every nite annd Wen i kis yure Pictshure I ASK god to bless you gOOd bi PaPa yure Best gurl DOLLY.

For a moment or two the company remained silent, while the little letter passed from hand to hand, and you would have said that each and every one had hay-fever by the snuffling that was heard. Hardy jumped to his feet:

"Three cheers for Dolly and three cheers more for Dick's best girl!"

They were given with a will.—Detroit Free Press.

A Basis for a Duel.

Congregational singing may carry the appearance of brotherly love and sisterly regard (if there is such a thing,) but it is sometimes far from entertaining to the person who takes no part in the performance. Recently at a very fashionable place of religious worship, where many untrained and unmusical voices ran riot over persuasive tunes, a man who knew more about the grain market of "buckwheat notes," lifted up his voice to assist the presentation of a hymn of long and hallowed standing. A modest, but determined looking fellow who stood just in front of him, turned around, touched the singer on the arm and said:

"Do you live in this town?"

"Yes," replied the singer after letting his voice fall to the floor.

"Are you a member of this congregation?"

"I am, sir?"

"Is it not one of the aims of this church to treat strangers with marked courtesy?"

"It is."

"Well, then wil you please do me a favor."

"Certainly, if it is within my power. What can I do for you?"

"Hush."

"Hush!" the singer gasped.

"That's what I said."

"Is it possible sir, that you don't want a man to sing?"

"Oh I don't mind a man's singing, don't care how much he sings; but I don't want a man to give himself up to such distressing noises as you have been making."

"My gracious alive! has it come to such a pass that a man can't sing in his own church?"

"You are insulting, sir."

"And you are tormenting."

"If you don't like my singing—"

"I tell you that I've got no objection to anybody's singing."

"Well, if you don't like me—"

"Got no objection to you at all."

By this time the hymn was finished and the congregation sat down; but pretty soon another hymn was announced. The annoying singer again lifted his voice. The man in front of him turned and touched him on the arm.

"What do you want with me, sir?"

"Want you to hush."

"I came here to sing and—"

"Why don't you sing then? Don't object to your singing, understand, but to tell the truth your voice carries me back to a time when I was very unhappy—a time when I reased hogs in the south; and, sir, whenever I hear anything that sounds like—"

"I won't worship in the same house with you, sir," said the singer. "I will leave this place."

"Thank you," replied the stranger and smoothing out the unpleasant expression from his face, he sat down and gave himself up to the enjoyment of the sermon.—Arkansaw Traveler.

THE PROPER THING.

Black hats are worn with gowns of any color.

Sling-sleeve mantles of seal skin are very stylish.

Seal sacques are not changed from last year's shapes.

Long round boas reaching nearly to the foot are fashionable.

Beaded epaulets are still used to give a dressy effect to bodices.

Felt made to imitate straw braid is a novelty for bonnets and hats.

Small pokes of velvet or cloth are worn by young or elderly women.

The snug French toques are as popular an article of headwear as ever.

Fur capes reaching to the waist line are in great favor with young ladies.

Hoods are added to every sort of wearing apparel upon which they can be placed.

Novelties are seen in the perfectly fitted seal jackets and in the fur mantles and long cloaks.

Fur trimmings are arranged in wide borders on the foot of skirts of cloth and velvet gowns.

The genuine Astrachan closely curled and without lustre, is liked for trimming mourning garments.

Muffs are slightly larger and are quite plain and round, or else soft, nearly flat and trimmed with ribbon.

A revival among the season's fashions is the making of sleeves of a different material from the bodice.

Jackets and long coats are trimmed with a roll of fur set down the front and around the neck to represent a boa.

OUR FLOURING MILLS.

The Revolution That Has Taken Place Since 1880.

While by no means so unapproachable in its priority as it once was, flour making is still the greatest of our American industries as regards the value of the product. Flour and meat for food, iron and lumber for building, cotton and woolen fabrics for clothing—these six are our largest industrial products, having aggregate yearly value in order named. But although first in the value of its product, the flouring and grist mill industry is greatly surpassed in the number of men it employs by ten or twelve lines of manufacture. Our domestic use of flour remains about the same per capita from year to year; and aside from the increasing amount manufactured for export, the total output grows only as our population grows. New methods of milling have, moreover, led to the rapid concentration of the industry and to actual decrease in the number of men employed by it.

These changes amounting to almost a revolution, have been most effectual since 1880, and the condition of the industry to-day cannot be shown by complete statistics, but it is certain that the census of 1890, when compared with that of its immediate predecessor, will reveal some very remarkable results attributable to changes in the methods of flour making. Three-fourths of the manual labor once necessary to the manufacture of a barrel of flour is dispensed with by the use of the new process. Thus Col. Wright in his report for 1886 of the United States bureau of statistics, shows that in a large Minneapolis mill labor is only 3.28 per cent of the unit cost of making a barrel of flour, while the materials cost 94.12 per cent., and all other elements of expense amount to but 2.60 per cent.

Merchant milling on a very large scale is the result of the economy and advantages of the new processes; and the competition of the great mills is causing the abandonment and decay of hundreds of the picturesque old-fashioned neighborhood mills. In 1870 according to the census for that year, there were in the entire country 22,573 grist mills employing 58,448 hands, representing $151,500,000 of capital, and making a product worth $444,000,000. In 1880 the number of establishments was 24,338, the number of hands 58,407, the capital invested $177,300,000 and the value of the product $505,100,000 (the price of flour has declined 10 per cent. in the decade.) The increase shown in the number of establishments—1,765 for the ten years—is more apparent than real, the great bulk of flour having been made in a decidedly smaller number of mills in 1880 than in 1870. Since 1880 the blighting effect of the great merchant mills upon the small establishments has become visible to every one.

AN ASTONISHING DECLINE.

According to the millers' directory for 1884, complied by Col. E. Harrison Cawker of Milwaukee, there were at the time 23,940 mills in the country—a decline of 1,398 from the census figures of 1880. But this is a slight loss as compared with that of two years from 1884 to 1886, if we may rely upon Col. Cawker's biennial directory. He finds that the number of milling establishments has declined to 16,856, a loss in two years of 6,084, or more than 26 per cent. This seems almost incredible, yet it is probably not far from the truth. When one investigates the facts for his own vicinity, and then stops to consider that the small mills have in like manner been disappearing to all parts of the country, the figures are more readily accepted. Mr. Charles A. Pillsbury, at the head of the largest milling firm in the world, says that more than half of the merchant mills of Minnesota, outside of Minneapolis, have been shut dawn within the past few years.

The decline is nowhere so noticeable as in the south. For example, North Carolina was credited with 1,313 mills in 1880. Their size may be inferred from the fact that they required, all told, the services of only 1,844 men, not one in three having any hands beside the miller himself, and the average capital employed was only $2,450. According to Cawker's directory, there were only 848 mills in North Carolina in 1884, and only 633 in 1886. More than half have been abandoned since 1880. Virginia had 1,385 mills, employing 2,220 men in 1880. In 1884 the number had decreased to 781, and nearly a third of these disappeared in the next two years leaving only 509. Mississippi had 525 mills in the census year, 386 in 1884 and 138 in 1886. Tennessee's milling directories for the same years show 990,453,781 and 536. Alabama's decline is shown by the figures 807 and 295. Corresponding figures for Georgia are 1,132, 631 and 364.

Pennsylvania which has always been first in the number of mills, is credited with 2,896 in 1886, a loss of 746 in two years. New York has 1,536, which is 366 less than in 1884. Massachusetts had in 1886 only 223 grist mills, as against 350 in the census year. Illinois was shown by the census to have 1,024 mills in 1880 and Col. Cawker finds 806 in 1886, the decline not having begun until 1884, in which year a maximum of 1,138 was reached. Michigan had 796 in 1880, and the number had increase to a maximum of 846 in 1884; but a loss of 206 brought it down to 640 in 1886. The number of mills in the country is destined to become very much smaller still, because of the superior advantages of large milling and the constant improvement in transportation facilities.—Albert Shaw in The Chautauquan.

"A THREE TIME WINNER."

Has Hanlan Lost His Grip?—Philosophical Training Demanded.

The defeat of "Ned" Hanlan by Teemer at Toronto in August indicates the "end of the glory" of the doughty champion.

He has sustained his record with admirable pluck and success, but the tremendous strain of years of training must certainly some day find its limit.

Arpopos of this we recall the following interesting reminiscence of aquatic annals:

On a fine, bright day in August, 1871, an excited multitude of 15,000 to 20,000 persons lined the shores of the beautiful Kenebecassis, near St. John, N. B., attracted by a four-oared race between the famous Paris crew of that city and a picked English crew for $5,000 and the championship of the world. Wallace Ross, the present renowned oarsman pulled stroke for the Blue Nose crew, and "Jim" Renforth, champion sculler and swimmer of England and the world, was stroke in the English shell.

Excitement was at fever heat.

But three hundred yards of the course had been covered when the Englishmen noticed that their rivals were creeping away.

"Give us a dozen, Jim," said the veteran Harry Kelly, ex champion of England, who was pulling No. 3 oar.

"I can't, boys, I'm done," said Renforth, and with these words he fell forward, an inanimate heap in the boat.

"He has been poisoned by book-makers," was the cry, and belief.

Everything that science and skill could suggest for his restoration was tried; but after terrible struggles of agony, the strong man, the flower of the athletes and pride of his countrymen, passed away.

The stomach was analyzed but no sign or trace of poison could be found therein, though general examination showed a very strange condition of the blood and the life-giving and health-preserving organs caused by years of unwise training. While the muscular development was perfect the heart and kidneys were badly congested.

The whole system was, therefore, in just that state when the most simple departure from ordinary living and exertion was of momentous consequence. His wonderful strength only made his dying paroxysms more dreadful and the fatality more certain.

Hanlan is now in Australia. Beach, champion of that country, is a powerful fellow, who probably understands the liability of athletes to death from overtraining, the effect thereof being very serious on the heart, blood and kidneys, as shown by poor Renforth's sudden death.

Within the past three years he has taken particular care of himself, and when training, always reinforces the kidneys and prevents blood congestion in them and the consequent ill-effect on the heart by using Warner's safe cure, the sportsman's universal favorite, and says he "is astonished at the great benefit."

Harry Wyatt, the celebrated English trainer of athletes, who continues himself to be one of the finest of specimens of manhood and one of the most successful of trainers, writes over his own signature to the English Sporting Life, September 5th, saying: "'I consider Warner's safe cure invaluable for all training purposes and out door exercise. I have been in the habit of using it for a long time. I am satisfied that it pulled me through when nothing else would, and it is always a three-time winner!"

Beach's and Wyatt's method of training, is sound and should be followed by all.

Pennsylvania Dutchmen.

The Germans of Pennsylvania are extremely cautious. They do not buy anything until they are sure it possesses merit. From the very fact that Dr. VanWert's Balsam has gained a strong position in their favor, Barton & Stark of Plains, Pa., write the proprietors of this remedy: "Your goods have met with the greatest success of any proprietary goods we have ever introduced in our town."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent].

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29, 1887.

Except for an occasional national convention to relieve the monotory, Washington has been rather dull since the adjournment of the short session of Congress last spring; but now the city is enlivened by the return of the President, the Cabinet and the Supreme Court from their respective vacations, as well as the near approach of the long session of Congress, which will probably not close until both of the great political parties nominate their candidates for the Presidency next summer.

Therefore, the Federal Capital has again assumed its normal position as the grand centre of activity in news and politics. And this fact is fully appreciated by the argus-eyed representatives of the great journals of the country, who are again gathering in their old haunts on newspaper row.

The President is scrutinizing the reports of the several departments and gaining therefrom the necessary information of the condition and demands of the public service, so that he may be enabled to prepare his annual message for the guidance of Congressional legislation the coming session. This work added to the regular routine of executive business, much of which has accumulated during the Chief Magistrate's long absence, will engross his entire attention from now until the meeting of the national solons for the long talk.

Washington aspires to be a convention city, and is meeting with flattering success in that direction. In addition to two or three held this year, two more—the American Evangelical Alliance and the convention of third and fourth-class postmasters will assemble in this city in a few weeks—and not content with these, the Capital City is making a strong effort to secure the National Democratic Committee.

The American members of the Fisheries Commission have reached the city, and their English associates are expected early next week. Evidently the negotiations will be conducted on a gorgeous scale, for the High Joint has engaged thirty-two large rooms in one of the finest hotels of the city for its exclusive use on this occasion.

Lately there has been a great stir on the civil service question, caused by the outgivings of the Civil Service Commissioners themselves. Mr. Oberly in an interview, roundly condemned the department clerks for being members of partisan associations,—taking the position that such action was unlawful and made the offenders liable to fine, imprisonment, and dismissal; Mr. Lyman takes ground equally advanced, but Mr. Edgerton antagonizes the views of his colleagues, and boldly assumes a purely partisan standpoint. These grave differences of opinion, have become such a public scandal that many believe the usefulness of the Commission is a thing of the past, and that it will have to be re-organized before it can accomplish the great reforms for which it was designed.

The large number of cases lately appealed from the State courts to the Supreme Court of the United States is considered by some to be an alarming tendency that may necessitate almost a complete revolution in American jurisprudence. It is especially feared that wealthy criminals may avail themselves of this facility to virtually block the wheels of justice, for ordinarily, the Supreme Court is three years behind its business.

Many of the cases now before the court are of the gravest importance, particularly the liquor trials from Kansas, Iowa and Georgia, which involve the constitutionality of State prohibition, and the question whether or not the States are pecuniarly responsible for the destruction of the business of the liquor dealers; the cases of the Chicago Anarchists now being argued, and which will be decided long before this letter reaches its destination; and lastly, the Virginia contempt cases, which are set for hearing in November.

Many of the Congressmen who are now seeking quarters for the coming winter find it difficult, as the saying goes, to "make both ends meet", as good living and house rent are high in Washington—thus, Congressmen whose incomes are limited must either conserve all their salary on current expenses, or forego the pleasures and triumphs of the Capital's gay social life. On the other hand, most of the wealthy members do not calculate on saving anything out of their salaries.

Mrs. Marshall Field of Chicago is too much of an invalid to go into society, so she devotes herself to books and to the study of languages.

WHEN A WOMAN

becomes afflicted with a Kidney disease life is truly a burden. The female organization is so constituted as to be peculiarly susceptible to it; is easily controlled by it, and it rapidly develops and spreads until the whole fabric is affected and there is no time when she is free from pain. Refreshing sleep is unknown, the long weary hours of the night are followed by equally long hours of the day, and so the months and years pass, bringing as they roll away increased burdens.

Mrs. O. P. Bracket, wife of a town official of Hermon, Me., had severe case of kidney disease. In time she became so afflicted with continuous pains across the small of the back, weary, heavy, bearing down pains, heavy, dull feeling between the shoulders with occasional spells of "sick headache," as well as other troubles peculiar to this disease in women, so that she at times gave up in despair. She was confined to her house, deprived of all social intercourse with friends and neighbors, and was day and night a constant sufferer. One day she read an advertisement issued by us describing symptoms of kidney disease, and persuaded her husband to buy a bottle of Brown's Sarsaparilla which she used. She said it helped her and her husband, having no faith in patent medicines, laughed and told her she was no better, and that "faith" and "hope" had revived her temporarily. He bought the second and third however, and like the first, they helped her rapidly along the road to health. The remedy was continued until Mrs. Brackett was restored, and she has now been for over two years free from all symptoms of kidney disease. This case which was perhaps as serious a one as ever came to the notice of the medical fraternity of this section, attracted wide-spread attention at the time, and stamped beyond all dispute the fact that Brown's Sarsaparilla was a deadly foe to Kidney disease.

Special Correspondence to THE TIMES.

Our academy has recently received two coats of paint and its appearance is very much improved.

Repairs on the church are progressing. The annex is enclosed and the tower nearly finished.

The new Kirch house is nearly completed. The barn and shed have been erected.

This vicinity has its usual quantity of potatoes. Some places yielded a large amount.

Our school is progressing finely.

Large numbers of type writers are now being completed.

Our cheese factory is closed. We have had a prosperous season. The last sale took only 8.54 pounds of milk to make one pound of cheese and sold at 10¼ cents per pound.

The Colosse church, the oldest church edifice in Oswego county, is being repaired. The frame work of this building is strong and we doubt if its equal can be found in Oswego county among churches, barns or dwellings.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain uncalled for in the post-office, at Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y., on Nov. 2, 1887.

Mrs. Florence Clark, Wells Carry, Daniel Barnes, William Benny, Mrs. Jane Flint, Annie R. Peters, Mrs. S. Pierce, Miss M. Wolcott, Joseph Lenord.

Persons calling for the above, please say advertised.

[illegible] John Brown, [illegible] judicial murder, [illegible] red nor would [illegible] to-day behold [illegible] amazing spectacle of popular feeling being so thoroughly debauched as to tamely witness the imprisonment of seven men and their condemnation to the gallows. Is society not given up to destruction, unless it speedily turns from the error of its ways! I applauded John Brown because he lifted up his voice and took his rifle to defend the oppressed against their foes, including an outrageous government. Actuated by the same spirit as then I desire to plead for the Anarchists, in some place in Fulton, not later than Thursday night of this week. Verily, they are heroes if John Brown was one. Do what you can at once, to secure a hall and announce a meeting for myself and any others who may desire to speak. We can have a meeting then and telegraph the result to Gov. Oglesby of Illinois. Should you feel reluctant to take the iniative in this matter, for God's sake, for justice sake, find some Knight of Labor, who will take hold of the work at once, and push it through. We are rapidly approaching a crisis in the affairs of the nation and every lover of justice ought to buckle on his armor, and resist the machinations of soulless men who are determined to establish a foul and despotic plutocracy on the ruins of liberty.

T. D. STOW.

The above written by Dr. Stow, well-known in this vicinity, is a letter handed to us with the request that we publish it. We do so not because our views correspond one iota with those expressed, but because there permeates through the letter a vein of sincerity, which borders however on fanaticism.

These seven Anarchists, condemned to be hanged on Friday next, richly deserve the fate that probably awaits them on that day, and we earnestly hope that no reprieve will be granted by Gov. Oglesby. They are not martyrs, but infamous assassins of the defenders of innocent citizens and thoroughly merit the penalty to which they have been sentenced for their dastardly act. Society dares not allow their crime to pass with impunity.

The attention of our readers is called to the new advertisement of Dixon & Collins, who though located in Oswego Falls, vie with their Fulton competitors in quality and prices of the goods they carry.

The case of Wills and Gibson the alleged bunco men, is set down for to-day. Messrs. Benedict and Smith their lawyers have withdrawn from the case owing it is stated to the fact that they could not agree with the prisoners as to the line of defense to be followed.

Considerable of a Potato.

C. V. Hughes who is now engaged in the Chamberlain Register office sent us a Dakota potato last week with the following note. We down them by five pounds on the squash question as C. P. Tucker had one at his store a few weeks since one weighing 140 pounds.

CHAMBERLAIN, Dak. Nov. 1, 1887.

Editor Times:—I send you by mail a Dakota potato 10½ by 17½ inches, which you can keep on exhibition in your office if you so desire. I am interested in having my home friends and all eastern people know what a productive country this is. We have had wild plums brought into the Register office, measuring 4¼ inches in circumference, and I saw a squash in town, that was raised in this county which weighed 135 lbs.

Yours truly,
C. V. HUGHES.

HALL'S

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local treatment, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure now on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer $100 for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address,

CATARRH CURE.

The High Arm Singer machine is having a great sale everywhere. The [illegible] It runs easy, [illegible] all kinds of work [illegible] and the price is very [illegible]

[illegible] with loads of [illegible] badinage which marked not only the utterances of the leading speakers but of the public press as well. This year, however, the making up of the antecedents of the Democratic candidate, Col. Fellows, by the champions of Mr. Nicoll has stirred up a good deal of acrimony and given to the contest which to-morrow will find its settlement a very indefinite and troublesome factor.

As intimated in the last letter, Fellows' candidature was the result of Boss Power's hold on the party, aided and abetted by the Canada contingent. The most influential newspapers without exception have opposed this nomination with a great deal of vigor. The very fact that Fellows became and was generally recognised as the henchman—the mouth piece—for Tweed in the fall of '71 when he ran, and successfully too, for State Senator has had its influence.

The fact of the matter is so great is the pressure of circumstances, Power has issued orders to the faithful to sacrifice anything and everything for the election of Fellows. Over 200,000 ballots have been printed bearing the Republican names for city and county officers and Fellows for District Attorney. Wherever deals are possible—and they are always possible in those districts where the Democratic vote is but slightly in excess of the opposing parties—the district leaders have had their orders from the United Democracy to trade. So that to-morrow will see a large amount of scratching and unlimited boodle. Of course before THE TIMES' readers have seen this, they will know of the result and any estimates therefore are very useless indeed.

There is something strangely funny about this fall's canvass. It's one of those events which come in the life of public men. During the campaign of 1878, when Edward Cooper was run on a Citizens' nomination and endorsed by the Republicans in much the same manner as Mr. Nicoll is now running, our excellent Mayor in a speech in Cooper Union denounced as pernicious and undemocratic, improper and thoroughly unrepublican for the offices, to be voted for by the people, to be parceled out as was then the case by a few men—a committee as it were to whose beck and call the votes of this city should give heed. He affirmed it the duty of all true men "to smash the machine." It became a sort of watchword. But strange to say in this canvass, where in a like condition of affairs exists, he advocates the election of Fellows. Well, it makes a great difference whether your wife's brother has his fingers in the vise when you turn the screw. Nor is this all. Power is so tremulous lest he loose his grip that Ex-Mayor Grace who has the private and exclusive ear of President Cleveland must needs hasten to Washington before the executive approval of Fellows be withdrawn. It is a queer contest. Its result is, shall refugees from justice control public affairs or not?

Perhaps no event in the world of art will attract more attention than the opening to public view of the noble collection of paintings which the late Miss C. L. Wolfe so munificently bequeathed to our Metropolitan Museum of Art. Not only the pictures, but $200,000 for its care and increase. The collection contains 142 pictures, by 111 artists. It is remarkable for its careful selection of representative schools. Piloty, Knaus, Cabanel, Danbigny, Corot, Rosseau, Vibert, Zeine and Gerome have fine examples. It is by far the most valuable and characteristic collection of modern art to be found in any part of the country. Then, too, it is the permanent property of the museum, so that for all time it can be seen and admired. In addition to this gift for public benefit Miss Wolfe also gave a very complete collection of shells and of classified specimens of minerals embracing all known to the mineralogical world.

From a society standpoint Mrs. J. B. Potter's debut at the Fifth avenue was a success. That is to say it was a success, if the grand dress parade which society passed through may be regarded as a token. The fact is the fiat had gone forth that to be absent from the Fifth avenue theatre last Monday night would be considered a breach of social order and uppertendom economy too serious to be condoned. Hence elegant toilets, bright faces, gleaming arms, luxurious tints and beauty unadorned, or nearly so, filled the house. It is difficult to say just how Mrs. Potter acted. There is a very general chorus among the critics that she is not a success, but people who are not critics—professional newspaper critics regard her performance as a promise of great things in the future. Of course the general tendency is to compare her with Mrs. Langtry and it is natural, for their advent upon the boards was under similar circumstances.

Mrs. Potter is a practical woman—a pretty, engaging, attractive woman. By study and hard work she may become a success. The box office is not reaping big money and the exclusive circle of Truxedo Park, where Mrs. Potter was the reigning queen, is in a quandary as to whether she, being now an actress, shall be received in social equality. It is, of course a weighty matter. The world will be much moved to know how it is settled. I trust we will be happier when it is so settled.

There seems to be danger of the spread of cholera. The ships from Italy are being carefully watched. There ought to be no fear for the means of quarantining, fumigating and caring for the sick emigrants are ample. The proper use of these will insure our immunity. I doubt not their proper use.

[illegible] the people [illegible] we now possess, enforce our excise laws, perfect them and render them more effectual and soon saloons will not be the power upholding the throne. Let us encourage societies which diminish the number of victims of liquor and swell the ranks of noble hearted, upright, Christian citizens—Let us give our whiskey sellers a dose of good sense and sound judgement, and positive legislation and enforced laws, and they will soon seek a refuge behind their kegs and barrels and be ashamed to appear in respectable society. There is no use in disguising the truth, and clergyman as well as layman have got much to learn and much to do and much to undo in regard to intemperance. Bartenders may call us fools and cranks but we have at least sense enough to forgive them. For their brain crazed with daily potations often places them in such a position that they know not what they do or say—those who pretend to take an interest in the granting of licenses may tell us that no temperance man will be allowed to see the books and find out the names of those who pay the license and the list of petitioners, but these gentlemen will soon learn that they are not supreme rulers and that the Secret of the King has not been confided to them alone and that in a democratic country the people have something to say about their line of conduct.

We are willing to meet any of the advocates of liquor on any platform or discuss the question calmly through the press and convince them of the truth which is evident to all who are not voluntarily blind viz.: saloons are a curse and a dangerous pest and the sooner they are crushed the better it will be for the entire community.

Now for a few questions:

1. Is there a saloon keeper in town who does not adulterate his liquors?

2. How many of them close at midnight?

3. Do they open on Sundays?

4. Do they not harbor men and boys in their places after midnight and rob them at the gambling table?

5. Does any of them sell to topers, habitual guzzlers, women and minors and do not some of them receive meat, sugar etc. in return for their poisonous draughts?

6. Do they all pay a license and who are their petitioners?

7. Have our policemen been conscientiously selected and are they all reliable men?—Do they know how to close side and rear doors on Sundays and after midnight?

8. Which of our saloons is considered the most dangerous?

Now let our Druggists pass their examination and some of our store-keepers also—:

1. Have they been closely watched in the past?

2. Have not some of them sold more liquor than our saloons?

3. Have their soda fountains always been free from guilt or has not a warm current oftentimes found its way to the brilliant faucets.

4. Have they not received customers who could hardly gather sufficient courage to cross the threshold of a saloon?

5. If saloon-keepers are not allowed to transgress the law, do these gentlemen enjoy the privilege of so doing?

6. Are hotel keepers independent of the law?

7. Is it not unjust to close a saloon and allow the hotel bar to make Sunday drunkards?

Our Village Fathers and our policemen should be able to organize a vigilance committee which would render service and bring delinquents to the bar of justice.

When these questions will have received a suitable answer we will try and pen the duties (a) of the government; (b) of ministers of all our churches; (c) of the press; (d) of parents and voters; (e) of the school; and suggestions might be made relative to the manner of organizing and maintaining temperance societies. Let us express the truth candidly and each one will then conform his line of conduct to the dictates of his own conscience and the laws of God.

Should the expression of certain truths offend any of your readers, they must remember that when our faults stare us in the face we are troubled and wish to silence the cry of our conscience; but in spite of all our efforts, truth stands firm, invincible and independent.

[illegible] in the case of the Chicago Anarchists fo a new trial.

This result caused not the least surprise in the Capital, as it has been anticipated as the inevitable conclusion of the Court. All that now stands between the Anarchists and their impending doom is the executive clemency that may possibly be extended them in Illinois, but it is highly improbable that even a brief respite will be granted them.

This city had a cholera scare the other day which produced quite a ripple of excitement—two of the crew of the cholera-infected ship that reached New York city having been traced to Washington, where they were hunted down by the metropolitan police and thoroughly fumigated. It is hoped that will be an end of the danger, for should this deadly disease break out here it would spread more rapidly than from almost any other city of the Union.

The quid nuncs declare now that the transfer of Secretary Lamar to the Supreme Bench is a sure thing, and that it has been decided to appoint as his successor in the Interior department Assistant Secretary Muldrow, who is now in Mississippi placing his private affairs in proper shape before entering upon the responsible duties of that high position. The appointment would certainly be in the line of true civil service reform, followed by the President in the promotion of Secretary Fairchild to the head of the Treasury Department.

The course of the President and some of those near him in contributing to the New York Democrrtic campaign fund is severely censured as "Prenicious activity" by independent political thinkers; President Cleveland sent his check for $1,000, Secretary Whitney sent $2,500 and Private Secretary Lamont $250. Besides this an emissary of the New York Democracy, sent to this city for the special purpose of receiving such contributions from department clerks, publicly opened headquarters and was quite successful, raising a large sum. It is understood that Commissioners Oberly and Lamar have not yet recovered from the shock of such unseemly conduct, and that both are at their wits' end. It will be remembered that these gentlemen, in an official capacity, have assumed quite an aggressive attitude on this question, uniting in denying the right of government employes to put up money for partisan purposes or to take a active part in polical matters.

A large number of clerks have been dismissed from the government service for failing a second time to pass an examination under the new civil service rules, these decapitations having all taken place in the New York customhouse by order of the Sectetary of the Treasury; as yet there have been no dismissals in Washington, but of course there will be eventually.

During the month of October the public debt was reduced $16,833,695; for the same time government receipts were $31,803,172, or about two and a half millions more than for the corresponding month of last year. During last month disbursements amounted to $20,332,822, or three millions less than in October, 1886.

Although Secretary Whitney is absent on a month's sick leave, the great work of rehabitating the United States Navy is making steady strides, under the direction of the Acting Secretary, Commodore Harmony—bids having been received this week for a torpedo boat and other naval appliances.

One night this week the Knights of Labor of this city had a grand torch light procession, with over three thousand men bearing Chinese lanterns and transparencies. This was labor's vigorous protest against the decision of a local court, pronouncing a boycott a common conspiracy. The parade was a perfect success, and one of the most beautiful and impressive scenes that your correspondent ever had the pleasure of witnessing.

Mrs. Peets asked the Board to order a cross walk constructed across Second street at the foot of Utica street

Upon motion of Trustee More, the President was appointed a committee to confer with reference to a crosswalk at that point.

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

UTICA, N. Y. Nov. 7.

The market to-day was quiet, and a smaller number of salesmen were present, but the sales were full for the time of year, and prices show a slight improvment. A year ago to-day there was a foot of snow on the ground, and cheese was being hurried forward as fast as possible. But we doubt if it was sold off any closer than it is now, since to-day's sales have taken the stock off to about October 21, and if prices remain as firm as now, the bulk of the October make will be turned off next Monday. All the cheese sold above 10¾c. to-day was full cream stock and has the state brand on it. Considerable of the stock sold below that price is also full cream, but a portion of it is composed of night milk skims. The large factories are running on as usual, making part skims, and are getting good messes of milk. Following are the sales:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
4	300	10½
44	3,865	10⅝
24	1,818	10¾
9	537	10⅞
19	1,631	11c.
10	864	11⅛
2	230	p. t.
112	9,245
	604	Com.
Total	9,849

Ruling price, 10¾c. Transactions one year ago 7,236 boxes; ruling price, 11⅛c. Two years ago 8,126, ruling 8¾c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Nov. 7.

Cheese.—There was a good, active market here to-day, and prices are advanced about one-foruth cent per pound. The best early October cheese were quickly taken, and there was considerable strife in a few of the pet factories. Till quite late in the day it was thought that 11c. would be the top figure, but a desire of several parties to secure three lots sent the figures up a quarter cent higher on these. Cheese are sold off upon the average to the middle of October, possibily a little past the middle. Stock that shows too free use of the skimmer or is otherwise faulty, is rather slow of sale, but all fair to best grades meet with ready purchasers. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price
14	813	10½
55	3,504	10¾
15	945	11c.
3	356	11¼
21	1,339	com.
108	6,957
Farm dairy	350
	7,307

Farm Dairies—Sales of 350 boxes farm cheese were made at 10 to 11½c; only very few at the latter price. The bulk going at 10¾c.

Butter.—Ninety-five packages of butter sold at 22 to 24c., the ruling price being 23c.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-four factories with 2,400 boxes were represented at this factory Monday evening. Only a few cheese changed hands. The price offered was 10½ to 10¾ cents.

Vienna Bakery

There is always in stock at the Vienna Bakery the largest, freshest and finest assortment of confectionery, foreign and domestic fruits, to be found in Fulton. Confectionery from 12 cents upward. A fresh supply of crackers, bread and cake constantly on hand. Call and examine my stock. [illegible]

ART needle-work and valuable embroideries are frequently ruined, or their beauty much impaired by washing them with ordinary soap, which is too rank for such delicate articles. A simple, and the proper method is to make suds of hot water and IVORY SOAP, and allow to cool till lukewarm. This solution, while very effective, is perfectly harmless.

A WORD OF WARNING.

When a man comes into the office and planks down the cash, and says "send me your paper for a year," that means business. When one says, "I want your paper but haven't got the money now," that's all right. When he takes it out of the post office for several months and sends it back "refused," that's meanness. When a man spends from ten cents to a dollar for cigars or beer every week, and says he can't afford to take his home paper, that's a—no such thing. When a man borrows his neighbor's paper to read every week, that's cheek.—Ex.

THE LABOR [illegible] OFF.

FULL REPORT OF THE VOLNEY AND GRANBY VOTE.

Increased Prohibition Vote in Volney and Granby.

Spencer, Stowell and Baldwin Elected.

The latest returns show that the entire Democratic state ticket is elected by a majority of from 20,000 to 25,000 over the Repulician ticket. George the Labor candidate received about 60,000. Huntington, the Prohibitionist, about 28,000. The fight in New York city against Boodlism and Bossism resulted in a flat fizzle and Fellows is elected district attorney over Nicoll by a plurality of about 30,000. The way in which the state has gone makes the renomination of Cleveland almost a foregone conclusion and the ability of the Republician party to wrest the state from the Democrats next Fall extremely shaky.

The Republicans elect 20 senators and 78 Assemblymen while the Democrats elect 12 Senators and 55 Assemblymen.

Concerning our local election excitement and vim about the polls did not seem to prevail yesterday, but at the count last evening the Republican candidates found their names cut enough to make their hair stand up like porcupine quills. Returns received at 1:30 to-day show however that all the Republican candidates were elected; Spencer, by about 1,000; Stowell, by over 1,000 and Baldwin for School Commissioner by 291.

The Prohibitionist cast a very large vote in Volney, Eggleston receiving 133 as against 75 for DuMass in '86; Sairs received 95 as against 75 in '86 when he ran for the same office.

George received 12 votes in Volney and Beecher 5.

The whole of Granby gave 29 Republican majority for the state ticket. Eggleston for Member of Assembly received 55 votes in the 1st. district which was larger than any other Prohibition candidate.

The Swedish Song Quartette Company are engaged to appear at the opera house on Tuesday evening, Nov. 15th. The following and the source from whence it came is a guarantee of the entertainment.

To the Editor Burlington. Vt. Free Press:

I notice by an advertisement in the Free Press of this morning that the citizens of this city are to be favored with a concert by the Swedish Song Quartette Co. of Boston, who are to appear at the Howard opera house, next Monday evening, under the auspices of the Winooek Ave. Cong. church. I wish to say for the benefit of your readers that there is a rich musical treat in store for them in the appearance of the celebrated company of Swedish artists and that this company not only give a decidedly novel entertainment, but also one of rare artististic merit. I wish to cordially commend the company to the people of Burlington, and predict that the opera house will be filled by the music loving citizens of your city on this occasion.

Burke Acquitted.

John Burke of Oswego Falls, who about a year ago was arrested in Chicago charged with murder in the first degree was discharged recently it being proved that he committed the act in self defense.

The testimony showed, as we learn it, that Burke was thrown down by the man that he killed and while lying on the pavement cut the throat of his assailant. Burke is about 24 years old and is well known in this vicinity.

At the Test Well.

This morning a depth of 295 feet was reached at the oil well. They have gone through three layers of salt. "A Trip to California."

Many people have a longing to visit the "Golden Gate", the garden spot of the earth, a view the grandest of all American Scenery, the Rocky Mountains, Salt Lake, Denver, and the many other features of interest that for variety and picturesque grandeur are unequalled on this great Continent.

Lower California has lately come into great prominence both on account of its delightful climate, and fertile soil, and the advantages it offers to investors, many persons having amassed fortunes on the expenditure of a few hundred dollars, owing to the rapid increase in the value of land.

The Ontario & Western noting the increased travel to these points, have arranged to place on sale at all their important stations, tickets to California and return, good for six months, at the low rate of $114. The tickets are so arranged that purchaser can have choice of routes, going and returning, and embraces San Francisco, Colton, Los Angeles, San Diego and intermediate points. They also allow stop over at any point returning, and tickets are strictly first class.

They Can't Do Better and We Want Them to Come.

For some time it has been understood that the Sinclair Chair Co., was endeavoring to change their location to more convenient quarters. Several vacant and partially vacant buildings have been considered, but they could succeed in making no arrangement, and we regret to learn that the firm are now turning their attention to Fulton. It is a well established thriving industry, giving employment to a number of hands, and the village cannot afford to lose it.—Phœnix Register.

THE [illegible]

FULL REPORT OF THE [illegible]NEY AND GRANBY VOTE.

Increased Prohibition Vote in Volney and Granby.

Spencer, Stowell and Baldwin Elected.

The latest returns show that the entire Democratic state ticket is elected by a majority of from 20,000 to 25,000 over the Repulician ticket. George the Labor candidate received about 60,000. Huntington, the Prohibitionist, about 23,000. The fight in New York city against Boodlism and Bossism resulted in a flat fizzle and Fellows is elected district attorney over Nicoll by a plurality of about 80,000. The way in which the state has gone makes the renomination of Cleveland almost a foregone conclusion and the ability of the Republician party to wrest the state from the Democrats next Fall extremely shaky.

The Republicans elect 20 senators and 78 Assemblymen while the Democrats elect 12 Senators and 55 Assemblymen.

Concerning our local election excitement and vim about the polls did not seem to prevail yesterday, but at the count last evening the Republican candidates found their names cut enough to make their hair stand up like porcupine quills. Returns received at 1:30 to-day show however that all the Republican candidates were elected; Spencer, by about 1,000; Stowell, by over 1,000 and Baldwin for School Commissioner by 291.

The Prohibitionist cast a very large vote in Volney, Eggleston receiving 133 as against 75 for DuMass in '86; Saire received 95 as against 75 in '86 when he ran for the same office.

George received 13 votes in Volney and Beecher 5.

The whole of Granby gave 29 Republican majority for the state ticket. Eggleston for Member of Assembly received 55 votes in the 1st. district which was larger than any other Prohibition candidate.

The Swedish Song Quartette Company are engaged to appear at the opera house on Tuesday evening, Nov. 15th. The following and the source from whence it came is a guarantee of the entertainment.

To the Editor Burlington, Vt. Free Press:
I notice by an advertisement in the Free Press of this morning that the citizens of this city are to be favored with a concert by the Swedish Song Quartette Co. of Boston, who are to appear at the Howard opera house, next Monday evening, under the auspices of the Winooek Ave. Cong. church. I wish to say for the benefit of your readers that there is a rich musical treat in store for them in the appearance of the celebrated company of Swedish artists and that this company not only give a decidedly novel entertainment, but also one of rare artististic merit. I wish to cordially commend the company to the people of Burlington, and predict that the opera house will be filled by the music loving citizens of your city on this occasion.

"A Trip to California."

Many people have a longing to visit the "Golden Gate", the garden spot of the earth, a view the grandest of all American Scenery, the Rocky Mountains, Salt Lake, Denver, and the many other features of interest that for variety and picturesque grandeur are unequalled on this great Continent.

Lower California has lately come into great prominence both on account of its delightful climate, and fertile soil, and the advantages it offers to investors, many persons having amassed fortunes on the expenditure of a few hundred dollars, owing to the rapid increase in the value of land.

The Ontario & Western noting the increased travel to these points, have arranged to place on sale at all their important stations, tickets to California and return, good for six months, at the low rate of $114. The tickets are so arranged that purchaser can have choice of routes, going and returning, and embraces San Francisco, Colton, Los Angeles, San Diego and intermediate points. They also allow stop over at any point returning, and tickets are strictly first class.

They Can't Do Better and We Want Them to Come.

Several vacant and partially vacant buildings have been considered, but they could succeed in making no arrangement, and we regret to learn that the firm are now turning their attention to Fulton. It is a well established thriving industry, giving employment to a number of hands, and the village cannot afford to lose it.—Phœnix Register.

F. E. BACON.

[illegible] from a single [illegible] is estimated at fifteen [illegible] by a well known poultry grower.

[illegible] Veterinarians testify that dehorning cattle, when properly performed, causes little pain.

Farmers generally have come to the conclusion that it is not safe to trust the "gentle bull."

President Phillips, of the West Michigan Horticultural society, regards unleached ashes as the best fertilizer known for vineyards.

A New Jerseyman suggests, in addition to the usual precautions observed in storing garden seeds, that a piece of camphor gum be put in each bag containing seed, and that the seed be dusted with insect powder.

In England a very fine flavor is imparted to the flesh of fattening turkeys by feeding them, in confinement, with cooked food in which chopped sweet herbs, like parsley, have been mixed.

An old farmer tells how he circumvents crows. As soon as crows appear he shoots as many as he can, and when his corn is up hangs their dead bodies around the field; the live crows, seeing their dead companions, seek elsewhere their food and leave the corn so uniquely guarded severely alone.

The receipts of grain for the season at Buffalo aggregated 88,366,000 bushels. The receipts of flour 3,231,000 barrels, and the receipt of lumber 241,601,000 feet. The shipments of grain by canal reached 43,888,000 bushels, and the shipments of Anthrancite coal to the West by lake 1,545,000 tons.

The small fruits ripen in hot weather, when drying them by old-fashioned methods was very difficult. The evaporator does its best work in these, and its use has created a popular demand for the evaporated product which has never been fully supplied. The black and red raspberries are especially valuable, and the demand for evaporation will long keep the price during the picking season at a paying rate.

The cost of keeping cows varies with the locality and other circumstances. Still, no matter how cheaply a cow may be kept, there is a limit of production below which she would not pay. And that limit is much farther up than is often thought. Suppose that the farmer can at the end of a year figure a few dollars profit above cost. The question for him is whether he can afford to take this small profit, employing his time, stable room and feed to so little advantage, when he might with better selection of animals make much larger gains.

Poultry Suggestions for Autumn.

It is a great mistake to crowd too many fowls together in one apartment. A house six by eight feet, with a yard thirty feet square additional, will not accommodate over one dozen fowls. Board floors are better than earth. Board floors are always dry, and can be kept much cleaner and sweeter. An application of slaked lime on the boards is worth a dozen on the ground. If more board floors were used, less disinfectants and remedies would be needed.

What breeds of fowls are the best winter layers? All the hens that moult early, and all the early pullets well fed in the fall. Instead of trying to learn the variety or breed that makes the best winter layers, learn to manage and feed properly, and you will succeed with what you have.

A good morning meal in winter for poultry is chopped corn and oats, or wheat, mixed with boiling water. Don't make it sloppy, but dry and crumbly. Feed it warm. A pinch of salt and pepper may be added. Feed about sunrise; they will relish it then better than earlier. Feed at noon a sprinkling of parched corn, oats or wheat, and at night all they will eat of entire grain of any of the above. Never give more at any time than they will eat up clean. Something of a Liar.

Lawyer—Would you believe the sworn testimony of this man?"

Witness—No, sir.

Lawyer—And why not?

Witness—That man hates to tell the truth. He always did. We were boys together and he used to cry when the teacher made him say "two and two are four."

Lawyer—Anything else.

Witness—Plenty. Once he was sick and described the symptoms so that the doctor prescribed for a lame ankle when the trouble was neuralgia in the head.

Lawyer—That will do.

Ringing Noises.

In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also results from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood. If you suffer from catarrh, try Hood's Sarsaparilla, the peculiar medicine.

Just Feeble Enough.

Smith—You look a little mussed up, Brown.

Brown—I should say so! I've just had a row with my mother-in-law, and I'll be hanged if she didn't put me out of the house. The house belongs to her, you know.

Smith—You told me a day or two ago that your mother-in-law was very feeble.

Brown—I meant feeble for her.—Harper's Bazar.

Ah There! George.

"George, dear," said Naomi. "I am afraid you are too industrious in your efforts to win enough money to obtain papa's consent. Your health will break under it."

"Too industrious? Why, I don't work very hard."

"How do you know?"

"Why I heard papa say to-day that you were carrying an awful load last night."—Lincoln Journal.

Common Sense.

Should be used in attempting to cure that very disagreeable disease, catarrh. As catarrh originates in impurities of the blood, local applications can do no permanent good. The common-sense method of treatment is to purify the blood and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla. That this peculiar medicine does cure catarrh is shown by the many testimonials from people who have found relief upon using it when all others had failed. Mr. Bean and Miss Allibone were walking in Green's pasture last Sunday and sat down on a mossy bank. "Isn't this moss beautiful?" said Miss Allibone. "I love to look at it; how it grows upon me." "Very likely it does on you, Miss Allibone, but it does not on me; I'm not a moss-back." This remark shortened their walk about two hours.—Melrose Journal.

She's such a modest little maid!
Of saucy men she is afraid,
Oh, my!
Why, if one ogled her, I'm sure
The slight she never could endure—
She'd cry.

But very often at the shore
I've seen her bathing with a score
Of friends.
And I've observed I'm grieved to say
Her bathing dress was decollete,
Both ends.

While only last night at the ball
Her costume fairly startled all
Of us.
While she looked 'round quite self-possessed,
And wondered what could interest
Us thus.

Yes, she's a modest little maid!
Of saucy men she is afraid,
Oh, my!
And if one ogled her, I'm sure
The slight she never could endure—
She'd cry.

The leading druggist of Moss Point, Miss., J. W. Stewart, writes: "I am sure that Van Wert's Balsam is the best cough remedy that I have ever sold and while you keep it at its present standard I shall always keep it and advise my customers to use it."

THE PROPER THING.

Braiding is immensely popular.

Passementeries will be worn more than ever this season.

In dress stuffs the demand for stripes is on the increase.

Tailor gowns and jackets are still in the height of fashion.

Ostrich feather boas are among the tasteful novelties of the season.

Black felt walking hats trimmed with ostrich feathers are very stylish.

Fringes of ostrich feathers are used for edging plush and velvet cloaks.

Spanish girdles of black velvet embroidered in gold are in high fashion.

Black gloves are desirable, since they make the hand look small and refined.

Trimmings lighter than the fabric of the gown are a feature of new toilettes.

Plush fabrics in stripes and figures are used for the skirts of cloth and silk dresses.

Shot clothes are new woolen stuffs with two colors interwoven to make the ground changeable.

Sleeves of velvet are used in corsages of silk and cloth gowns which have the vest and skirt of velvet.

A novelty in twilled wool with a fleecy selvage two or three inches wide which serves as trimming for the dress.

The new round hats which appear to find greatest favor are those which have medium high crowns, with brims that r ll exceedingly high on one side or on both. The front of the hat projects over the eyes, but in most cases the sides and back are close and short.

More cases of sick headache, biliousness, constipation, &c., can be cured n less time, with less medicine, and for less money by using Carter's Little Liver Pills, than by any other means.

How to Produce Sleep.

While physical conditions largely enter into perfect sleep, it is the result of both physical and spiritual conditions. The due value of proper food, exercise and bathing are more or less familiar to every one, and in all these no specific rule can be given. A warm bath just before retiring will be found to many persons conducive to sleep, and occasionally quite the reverse, and is therefore only something that each must decide for himself. Frequently a cup of hot water, or hot water with lemon juice in it, will banish a tendency to wakefulness. Another almost unfailing remedy for sleeplessness is to dip a fine linen handkerchief in hamamelis (witch hazel), and bind it tightly over the eyes with a white silk handkerchief. The silk has an electric—an insulating quality—that renders it all important. Linen or cotton will not answer the purpose nearly as well, as the one who tries this will find. There is a magic about this that is actually wonderful. Many actresses use this simple aid, after returning from an exciting play, and the result can only be described as magical. That the sleeping department should be thoroughly ventilated, and also thoroughly dark, with blinds closed and shades carefully drawn, is an important essential to nervous people. If the victim of insomnia will combine the hygienic and the spiritual conditions, and will give a fair trial to a perfectly darkened room, and to the magic of the extract of witch-hazel with the silk bandage outside, there are few cases of insomnia that may not thus be overcome.

Change of Heart.

Omaha man—My gracious! we'll be late. Get your things on.

Wife—My dear, its raining pitchforks and the wind is blowing a hurricane.

"We have strong umbrellas."

"My dress will be ruined."

"Wear your waterproof."

"And you know you have a cold."

"I can wear rubbers; I would'nt miss that opera for——"

"Opera? This is not an opera night; it's prayer meeting night."

"Oh! I wonder if our preacher thinks people are idiots enough to stir out of the house on such a night as this."—Omaha World.

Wonderful Feats with a Saw.

I have often read of the wonderful feats performed by skilled workmen with tools, such as engraving the Lord's Prayer on the back of a silver three-cent piece, or making a steam engine that would stand on a silver quarter, but I saw some some wonders performed the other night that surpassed them all. All the minute articles manufactured heretofore have been made with small tools, and in some cases with the aid of a microscope, but there is a man in the Sea Beach Palace Exposition on Coney Island who works out the most delicate articles with a hand-saw nineteen feet long and revolving at the rate of over a mile a minute. Upon this immense machine the skilled operator in my presence sawed out four chairs, all complete with legs and backs, but so small that the four were placed on the end of a lead pencil at one time. Then a dozen knives and forks of the most diminutive size were made and placed around the lead pencil. So small were they that although the entire dozen were placed around the pencil not one of them touched the other. Then the operator trimmed his finger nails on the huge saw as cleverly and easily as one could do it with a penknife. Wetting his thumb, he pressed the ball of it into some sawdust and then sawed the sawdust off the thumb without scratching the skin, yet a single nervous twitch would have cost him his hand. All sorts of curious puzzles are turned out with astonishing rapidity from all sorts of misshapen blocks of wood. Even articles of clothing, as thin and flexible as cloth, are worked out by this clever magician from little pieces of wood with his big saw. The cap he works in was sawed out of over 1,000 pieces of wood, no two of which are the same size or shape.—Brooklyn Eagle.

How Long a Watch Should Last.

"A first class watch should last for a hundred years, if properly taken care of," said a well-known watchmaker. "The reason that they wear out is the fault of the owner and not of the watch. In the first place, a watch should be cleaned and oiled once in every eighteen months. If this is not done the oil which lubricates the works will dry and the works will wear out by friction. Another mistake is to wear a watch in an outside pocket where it is liable to be jammed. I have known more watches ruined by billard playing than anything else. In leaning over to make a long shot the vest pocket is frequently in violent contact with the table and this repeated jarring cannot fail to injure the works. The best watches are made to-day in England. They are masterpieces of workmanship. I should say that the American watch ranks next and those manufactured in Switzerland third in order. Some watches are made to run eight days with one winding, but they will never become popular. Their owners almost always forget to wind them up on the eighth day. I know of only one or two in this country. They are made in Switerland. The usual length of time modern watches are calculated to run with one winding is from thirty to thirty-six hours."

A HOME LIBRARY.

2000 Famous Authors.

It seems almost incredible to say that a library fairly representing approximately two thousand of the most eminent authors of the world, of all lands and all times, can really be placed within the reach of ordinary homes. Yet this is what is accomplished by Alden's Cyclopedia of Universal Literature, volume VIII. of which is issued in November. The work, completed, is to comprise from fifteen to twenty volumes, which are in large type, and really beautiful and excellent in all mechanical qualities, and yet sold at the phenomenally low price of 50 cents per vol. for cloth, or 60 cents for half-morocco bindings; even from these prices large reductions are made to early purchasers, and to clubs.

Volume VIII. includes such notable names as Ferreira, the Portuguese poet; Feuillet, the French novelist; Johann Gottlieb Fichte, German philosopher; Henry M. Field, American journalist and author; Henry Fielding, English novelist. James T. Fields, American publisher and author; Louis Figuier, French scientist; Firdusi, Persian poet; Geo. P. Fisher and Wilbur Fisk, American theological writers; John Fiske, American scientist; Flammarion, French author of "The Wonders of the Heavens;" Flaubert, French novelist: Mary Halleck Foote, American artist and author; John Forster, English biographer; Charles Fourier, French socialist and political economist; Charles James Fox, English statesman; George Foxe, of "The Book of Martyrs" fame; Dr. J. W. Francis, American author, and Sir Phillip Francis (the famous Junius); Benjamin Franklin, American statesman, philosopher, and philanthropist; E. A. Freeman, historian; John C. Fremont, general and "might-have been" President—all of these in the letter F, besides a small host in the letter G. The publisher will send a specimen volume to any one on receipt of the price, allowing the privilege of return if the set is not wanted. All lovers of good books should at least see the work. JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl St., New York.

Haggling over the Price.

Counsel (to witness)—So you can't swear whether you paid $15 or $16 for the coat, Uncle Rastus?

Uncle Rastus (who has been badgered a good deal)—N-no, sah, I kaint sw'ar to it. I think de price wuz sixteen dollars and I offered fifteen for it, or it mought be dat de price wuz fifteen an' I offered sixteen for it. I knows dere wuz some hagglin'.—N. Y. Sun.

IS MAN A BAROMETER?

Why Is It That Certain Winds Always Make Rheumatics Cringe With Pain?

Eighty-six per cent. of the signal service weather predictions are accurate!

The only indications our fathers had for foretelling weather were aching limbs, twinging joints, and painful corns!

These, though crude, were usually correct. The body is unquestionably an excellent barometer, and physicians often prescribe a change of air, so that the system may find an agreeable atmospheric condition.

Weather changes indicate themselves by pains called rheumatism. Why bad weather should cause such pains is a mystery!

Does the pain really lie dormant in the blood, to be made active only when the wind blows from some unfavorable quarter?

Last week a man left town on a business trip. Two days later he, who had always been apparently strong and well, was sent home a corpse—"Rheumatism of the heart!"

Rheumatism like the Indian in ambush, sure to kill you if not killed by you. It is to patient and physician one of the most vexatious of diseases.

At first many thought it to be a trouble of the joints, but all outward applications left the cause unbenifited.

Then, making like pains in the muscles, it was thought to be a muscular disease; but the same unsatisfactory results followed external treatment.

Now, however, it is universally acknowledged that rheumatism is a "fiery condition of the blood caused by the presence of uric acid in the system!"

Everybody dreads rheumatism.

It is very prevalent at this time of the year. It was formerly seldom known except among those who worked much out of doors. Now it invades the hut, the palace, the executive mansion, the senate chamber and the throne room; all sorts and condition and races of men and women it attacks at all times, and all fear it!

Mrs. Swift (wife of Dr. Lewis Swift, the famous comet finder of Rochester, N. Y.) was one of its recent victims; and how very common it is among ladies!

She suffered great anguish and fear!

Why does this acid remain in the system?

The kidneys being diseased cannot remove acid as in health, hence the system is poisoned by its presence, and rheumatic pains, stuff joints, tendons and muscles are the result. There is but one scientific treatment, to regulate the kidneys by Warner's safe cure, and to "and to put out the fire in the blood" by Warner's safe rheumatic cure. These world renowned remedies, taken by bottles in alteration, as they should be, neutralize the uric acid already in the blood, and prevent further accumulation.

Mrs. Dr. Swift used these remedies with great success, in alternation, and was completeley restored to health.

We understand that the proprieters guarantee them with the strongest assurances, but this were scarcely necessary, for is not their praise in everybody's mouth?

We cannot prevent the ill wind blowing, but we can get the better of it by so fortifying the system that we can ignore it when it is doing the worst to "give us pain."

Many preparations professedly harmless, prove exceedingly dangerous, but Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is perfectly safe at all times. Price only 25 cents.

A yellowish complexion is not at all desirable; to banish it, use Laxador, the golden remedy for all liver diseases. It only costs 25 cents.

Profits in Baseball.

Many of the public are not aware how great are the profits made from directing the game of baseball as a business in some of the cities of the country. For the amount of capital invested, there is probably nothing like it in any form of amusement. The expenses of baseball are, first in hiring and fitting up the grounds upon which it is played; next, in the salaries paid the players; third, in the travelling expenses of the clubs. None of these require much preliminary outlay. There must be a guarantee as regards some of them, but the game generally more than pays its way after the season opens. It will be singular if some enterprising manager outside of those who have at present a monopoly of the cream of the business, does not before long devise a method of breaking in upon it. For baseball rightly managed may be made more remunerative then the drama, the concert hall, or the sporting field of any kind.

Boston affords a good example the present year of what may be done in this way. There will be about sixty-three games of baseball played in the National League during the season. The attendance at them has averaged 4,000 people. This, at fifty cents a ticket, yields considerably more than $2,000 a game, for there are reserved seats, to the amount of 1,200 in number, at twenty-five and fifty cents each, the most of which are generally sold, and there are perquisites of the ground which bring in money. It is a low estimate to set down the receipts of the season at $125,000. Out of this are to be taken, perhaps $35,000 for salaries of players, $2,500 for ground expenses, and a considerable sum for the cost of transporting the players from one city to another. It will be liberal to call this altogether $50,000. The profits, therefore, that the season of five months will represent will be $75,000.—Boston Herald.

The New Princeton Review.

The November issue of the New Princeton Review opens with a very fresh and interesting study of "Shelley" from the pen of Mr. Charles Dudley Warner; the unique personality of the poet being very clearly presented. Rev. George Woolsey Hodge outlines "A Scheme for Church Re-union," in a significant discussion of the celebrated proposals made by the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Under the title of "The American Idea." Mr. George Cary Eggleston comments sharply on some late developements of Labor Associations. The journals and letters of Gerard de Rayneval, The first French minister to this country, afford very valuable material for an article on "American History in the French Archives," by J. Durand. Dr. William Nast, who was a school-fellow of the famous German theologian, contributes a deeply interesting chapter of "Recollections of David Friedrich Strauss." "Dean Plumtre's Dante" is made the subject of a critical paper by Dr. Marvin Vincent, in which the defects of work are clearly pointed out. A story from the hand of Miss Grace King is fast becoming an event of interest in current literature, and no reader of the New Princeton will overlook so striking a sketch of Creole life in New Orleans as "The Drama of an Evening." In the department of "Criticisms, Notes, and Reviews," Church Union, is discussed from a standpoint offered to that of Mr. Hodge, and an interesting critique is given of the recently published "Letters of Thackeray." The "Record" presents a comlete survey of affairs, foreign and domestic; and there is an admirable analytical index of the volume, which is completed with this number. The "New Princeton Review" is now firmly established as the representative of the most intelligent and scholarly class in the country; and the new volume, beginning with the January issue, will still further advance its standard and broaden its field. To its list of contributers will be added the names of many eminent writers on both sides the Atlantic.

"We are coming Father Abraham 300,000 more" to endorse the good and effective qualities of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in every case of Cough, Colds, etc.

As a cure for chapped and chafed hands nothing equals the celebrated Salvation Oil. For sale by all druggists. Price only 25 cents a bottle.

WHEN A WOMAN

becomes afflicted with a Kidney disease life is truly a burden. The female organization is so constituted as to be peculiarly susceptible to it; is easily controlled by it, and it rapidly develops and spreads until the whole fabric is affected and there is no time when she is free from pain. Refreshing sleep is unknown, the long weary hours of the night are followed by equally long hours of the day, and so the months and years pass, bringing as they roll away increased burdens.

Mrs. C. P. Brackett, wife of a town official of Hermon, Me., had severe case of kidney disease. In time she became so afflicted with continuous pains across the small of the back, weary, heavy, bearing down pains, heavy, dull feeling between the shoulders with occasional spells of "sick headache," as well as other troubles peculiar to this disease in women, so that she at times gave up in despair. She was confined to her house, deprived of all social intercourse with friends and neighbors, and was day and night a constant sufferer. One day she read an advertisement issued by us describing symptoms of kidney disease, and persuaded her husband to buy a bottle of Brown's Sarsaparilla which she used. She said it helped her and her husband, having no faith in patent medicines, laughed and told her she was no better, and that "faith" and "hope" had revived her temporarily. He bought the second and third however, and like the first, they helped her rapidly along the road to health. The remedy was continued until Mrs. Brackett was restored, and she has now been for over two years free from all symptoms of kidney disease. This case which was perhaps as serious a one as ever came to the notice of the medical fraternity of this section, attracted wide-spread attention at the time, and stamped beyond all dispute the fact that Brown's Sarsaparilla was a deadly foe to Kidney disease.

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office or moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

I can't help telling the Truth as I view it and describing what I see. To describe it otherwise than it seems to me would be falsehood in that calling in which it has pleased Heaven to place me.

Important.

Believing that everyone should be a subscriber to a local paper and to one metropolitan paper either for the general news of the day or, if the subscriber be a farmer, for the best agricultural paper that the country possesses, we have made arrangements with the publishers of the two greatest weekly papers in this country, in their respective fields, to furnish the same to our subscribers. Therefore for a limited time we propose to make the following offers, reserving the right to withdraw them at any time:

1. We will send THE TIMES and the N. Y. Weekly World, for one year, with your choice of the three great World Premiums, History of the United States, History of England or Everydody's Guide, for $2.00.

2. We will send THE TIMES and the Rural New Yorker, the best illustrated weekly agricultural paper in this or any other country, for $2.50. The following two conditions must be observed:

1. The price named must inveriably accompany each order.

2. Old subscribers to THE TIMES must first pay to date before taking advantage of either offer. Call at this office or send cash with order to THE TIMES,

Fulton, N. Y.

WILLIAM G. ELLERY, president of the village of Skaneateles, died very suddenly at his home Friday evening. Brooding over his recent arrest for drundenness and dissipation undoubtedly hastened his death.

TRAFALGER SQUARE was the scene of a violent tumult Sunday which has been unequaled since the great riot of 1866. About 200 citizens and 40 policemen were injured, and 50 persons were arrested.

THE final act in the great Haymarket tragedy was consamated Monday when the funeral of the five dead Anarchists, Spies, Parsons, Fischer, Engel and Lingg were buried in a suburban cemetery at Chicago.

It was on the evening of May 4th 1886, over a year and a half ago, that a dymanite bemb was thrown into a company of policemen at Chicago, killing seven and wounding about fifty more. The reason for this being thrown, the first in America, can be considered as coming directly from these seven Anarchists who for the past year and a half have lingered in prison, as they were the leading spirits and inciters of this terrible tragedy on Haymarket Square which has excited this country as perhaps no other event has since the civil war begun.

Two of these Anarchists, Fielden and Schwab, by the intervention of the executive clemency of Governor Oglesby, of Illinois, will spend the remainder of their life in jail. The commutiation of their sentences to life imprisonment was due to the strenuous efforts of Judge Gray, who presided at their trial, and Captain Black, of their counsel. They were really the most harmless of the seven, and seemed to have been inveighed into the parts they played by the diabolical machinations of the others. They have been removed to the scene of their life sentence in Joliet, Ill., after having taken an affecting leave of their relatives.

Louis Lingg, was not sent into eternity by the power of the law which he had defied. At about nine o'clock, Thursday morning, he commised suicide by igniting a cartridge loaded with the fulminate of mercury, which he placed in his mouth. He had concealed it about his person in such a wily manner as to elude the vigilant watchers by whom he was environed, and succeeded in blowing nearly the whole of his head off. He lingered in agony until after two o'clock in the afternoon when he expired, having suffered the same agonies which he and his misguided and fiendish companions inflicted upon the brave policemen, who fell in the performance of their duty.

The other four, Spies, Parsons, Fischer and Engel suffered the extreme penalty of the law and were hanged at Cook county jail, Chicago at 11:54 a. m. Friday. No trouble has since occurred as many anticipated that there would be and it is well that all followers of these men should take warning that Anarchy and sedition can not be [illegible] in this country. Anarchy [illegible] be uprooted and Herr Most, the [illegible] of this element in New York [illegible] should be the next to go if he con[illegible] efforts to inaugurate into [illegible] well governed country [illegible]

The public [illegible] been hearing [illegible] more than [illegible] and [illegible] during the past few days. This feverishness has been due to two causes—the election and the Chicago executions.

So far as the first of these one may say it was a surprise. An erroneous and overwhelming one to the Georgites, and to those who advocated Mr. Nicoll's cause so valiently, it became a perfect revelation. Looking at the recent election in this city from the present standpoint, it may be safely asserted that in no one city of the land is Democracy more strongly entrenched or more thoroughly organized. This can not be said of the two other parties which took a part in the battle of the ballot on Tuesday last.

The entire force of public officers with but few exceptions belong either to one wing of the Democracy or the other. Political fealty and activity is the price to be paid for retention in office. Hence the result. It is never a question of what public opinion demands, but what party success needs.

The vote here in round numbers was 212,000. This was divided as follows:—Democrats, 110,000; Republicans, 57,000; Georgites, 37,000; Anti-Georgeites, 5,000; Prohibition, 1,500. So that the Democratic plurality was 57,000. But when the vote for Nicoll was counted, it was found that about 5,000 George followers and 12,000 Democrats scratched their own party nominee and voted Nicoll. Hence Fellows' plurality was in the neighborhood of 20,000. A study of the returns reveals a rather curious fact. In those assembly districts wherein the boodle Aldermen still have control, whether openly or secretly, there Fellows secured his heaviest majorities. On the other hand in those districts where the convicted aldermen lived, there Nicoll received his greatist following.

The smallness of the George vote surprises both Mr. George and his followers. It is a terrible surprise, last year 68,000; this 37,000; a falling off of 30,000; of this 5,000 went to the Progressives, a split from the Georgeites of last year, owing to their maintenance of Socialistic ideas. The other 25,000 returned to its first love, the Democratic party. I notice by a careful study of the returns, especially in the east side districts—the German vicinage—that George drew more followers from the Republican ranks than from the other party. There is another noticeable thing connected with the election—the interest which the national capital took in our local affairs.

For three weeks Secretary of the Navy Wm. C. Whitney has been in this city at his home on Fifth avenue and his sick room has been the meeting place for many of the party leaders. To the people he is a sick man, but politics never stay for the mere matter of a slight illness.

Viewing the election from all sides and judging it from its connection with local affairs only, it is fair to say that the new district attorney is in a very peculiar position, for by his action can this fact be shown that party organization is of more value than the purity of public morals.

I am inclined to think the police authorities had some fear of a sympathetic action of Most and his bloody compatriots in revenge for the execution in Chicago on Friday last. I noticed that the police were kept on duty during the whole of Friday and Saturday. They were kept in readiness for any uprising. On Thursday evening at a parade in Union Square the buildings in the vicinity were garrisoned by police, and large bodies of police were in adjacent streets, so that any objectionable language would have been easily prevented.

For weeks past the known leaders of the "Reds" have been watched, shadowed, followed by Inspector Burnes' men. I presume to say there is not a meeting of the Anarchists in this city, the purport of which is not known to the vigilant Inspector. Notwithstanding all that there is more or less tendency to feel that should those known to be Anarchists endeavor to use their favorite weapons of fire and dynamite, the Socialists would follow out of pure sympathy.

So far as my own observations go, and I have been looking up this matter, we have but little cause to fear. The The city is given over to commercial prosperity and the breadwinning question is one of more importance than Anarchism. The strife for life is so sharp here that it takes the whole time of the wage worker to the exclusion of everything else.

The report of the elevated roads is an interesting document. Two facts are of interest. The number of passengers carried last year were nearly 159 millions of which the Third avenue carried nearly 42 per cent. Everyone represents a fare and it is not surprising that the dividends of the company are 6 per cent.

It may be of interest to know what an election cost this city. There are in this city 812 election districts, each of which have four Inspectors, who sit for four days, registering the voters. Had the Labor party obtained a decision in their case in time there would have been five. On election day three, four or five inspectors as the case may be, receive the ballots and place them in their boxes. In the canvass they are assisted by two poll-clerks. Here then is the bill for each election district:

Four Inspectors, 5 days $7.50 per day-
One " 1 " 7.50 " "
Two poll clerks 1 " 7.50 " "

or $172.50 for each district. Add to this $37.50 for rent of the store in which the election is held and you have the cost for one election district. This for 812 is $170,000. To this must be added the stationery and the cost of building booths in those districts where no stores exist and you have in round numbers $200,000 as the cost of this city of an election.

Inspector and Pollships are sought after by business men who do a fair amount of trade, because it relieves them from jury duty. The Police Board have the power of appointing, and like all other places are obtained by "pull" [illegible]

HALL'S

$100 REWARD. $100.

The readers of the Times will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system thereby distroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength, by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The Proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars, for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

AT UTICA.

UTICA, N. Y. Nov. 14.

For some time to-day salesmen were doubtful whether there would be any market at all, so shy were the buyers and so averse from offering any prices. But at last there was a respectable amount of stock taken, and the ruling proved to be only ⅛c. off from last week. A few, however did not sell. The sales were late October's. Some sold out the balance of their season's make. Others still have from three to five days of that month on hand. Others are manufacturing every-other-day skims, that class of goods having just been commenced. It will take at least three weeks more to clean up the stock still on hand. The bulk of the sales below 10¾c. were partly skimmed goods, but everything at that price and above was full cream and has the state brand. Nearly all of the best stock was taken for home trade, and the probability is that a good share of the rest will go in the same direction. Following is the table of transactions:

43	3,315	10¼
12	1,012	10⅜
18	1,527	10¾
1	67	10⅞
12	807	11c.
86	6,728
	1,540	Com.
Total	8,268

Ruling price, 10½c. Transactions one year ago 7,336 boxes; ruling price, 11½c. Two years ago 7,545, ruling 8½c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Nov. 14.

CHEESE.—Our market to-day has been an almost exact duplicate of that last week, in character, amount of transactions and prices. The quality of stock is still maintained at about the former good standard. As a rule, cheese does not show the effects of the skimmer to any appreciable extent. The demand was strong to-day for good grades, and prices in some cases were pushed higher than had been expected. Everybody appears confident of good prices prevailing thro' the balance of the season. Of course the make is now small and most factories receive milk once a day only. There is no holding back of stocks, as has been done by factories at this season, all making regular shipments each week. Sales are as follows:

Lots	Boxes	Price
22	1,150	10¼
58	2,330	10¾
19	1,239	11c.
3	187	11¼
19	901	com.
121	5,816
Farm dairy	355
	6,171

Farm Dairies—Sales of 355 boxes farm cheese were made at 10¼ to 11¼c; only very few at the latter price. The bulk going at 11c.

Butter.—There was 105 packages sold at 20 to 23c., the bulk at 21c. There were a few tubs of fine grass stock which went at 24 to 25c.

AT FULTON.

The usual number of factories were represented at this market Monday evening. 2,000 boxes were offered and all sold at 10½ to 11½ cents, the most bringing 11⅜ cents. The Utica ruling was 10½ cents.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

ECONOMY, as wise folks say,
Is wealth pronounced another way,
So while "hard times" the people cry,
The Toilet Soaps they should not buy.
Let all who buy such Soaps take care
To weigh the cake exact and fair,
And find they pay in figures round
A dollar, more or less per pound.

What course should people then pursue?
In short, the only thing to do,
Though rich in bonds, or worldly poor,
The "IVORY SOAP" they should procure,
Which may be bought from coast to coast,
At sixteen cents per pound at most,
And does more satisfaction grant
Than all the Toilet Soaps extant.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

To Our Readers.

We cannot too strongly urge upon our readers the necessity of subscribing for a family weekly newspaper of the first class—such, for instance as the Independent, of New York. Were we obliged to select one publication to the exclusion of all others, we should choose, unhesitatingly the Independent. It is a newspaper, magazine, and review, all in one. It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial, and a political paper combined. It has 32 folio pages and 21 departments. No matter what a person's religion, politics, or profession may be, no matter what the age, sex, employment or condition may be, The Independent will prove a help, an instructor, an educator. Our readers can do no less than to send a postal for a free specimen copy, or for thirty cents the paper will be sent a month, enabling one to judge of its merits more critically. It's yearly subscription is $3.00, or two years for $5.00.

Those who desire to subscribe for the American Agriculturist as well as The Independent cannot make a better bargain than by accepting The Independent's offer to send both papers for one year for the sum of $3.75. Each subscriber will thus save 75 cents on the two papers.

Address, The Independent, 251 Broadway, New York City.

No man can be elected to office unless he dresses neatly and treats his neighbors courteously. Horace Greeley thought he could be elected to the Presidency on the strength of his famous old white hat and white over-coat, that reminded one of a grain bag. He failed, of course. Successful office-seekers will be found wearing garments sold by E. A. Cook & Co., opposite Clark house, First street, from Tucker, Calder & Co's manufactory, at Utica, N. Y. If you are a candidate, wear their clothing and be happy.

A SILVER WEDDING.

Saturday evening from 5 to 10 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. George C. Sawyer, assisted by 200 guests, re-enacted the joyous scene of their marriage twenty five years ago. Their spacious and pleasant home at No. 98 University avenue was trailed with vines and running plants, which formed a stricking and pleasant background for a large variety of rare flowers, Kappe' orchestra filled with sweet strains of music that portion of the house that was not pre-emptied by the flowers, smiles and merry laughter. Judge and Mrs. Sawyer of Watertown and Miss Carrie E. Sawyer, the latter the daughter of the host and hostess, assisted Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer in receiving their friends. Over the west window in the reception room were the figures in evergreen, 1863, and in the same relative position to the north window were the figures 1887. The difference between these dates represents the period of Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer's married life. There was an almost endless number of beautiful presents, consisting of steel engravings, fruit baskets, ladles, forks, knives, spoons, and about every other conceivable article that could be made from silver. Refreshments were served and the whole affair was of the most interesting and pleasant character. —Syracuse Standard.

AN OLD CITIZEN'S SUDDEN DEATH.

Charles Potter has an Apoplectic stroke and Dies in Twelve Hours.

Charles H. Potter died from the effects of an apoplectic stroke last Saturday morning about half past one o'clock.

On Saturday forenoon he was driving his team about town as usual. In the afternoon he had unloaded a ton of coal at Mr. Capron's on Third street and was waiting for the receipt when suddenly he fell to the ground. He was placed in his wagon and driven to his home in the northern part of the village and Drs. Pardee and Hall summoned who found that he had ruptured a blood vessel in his head. He recovered consciousness but slowly failed and died Saturday morning.

The deceased was 66 years of age and leaves a wife, one daughter and two sons. He came to this village 28 years ago from Oneida county.

Funeral services conducted by the Rev. W. Dempster Chase were held at the house Tuesday Nov. 15th, at 2 p. m.

"Rev. Mr. Smith and wife were riding last evening when the horses became frightened at the cars, and turning suddenly, threw them violently out on the ground. They than ran away, smashing the buggy to splinters. Neither of the couple were badly hurt, but were considerably bruised and shocked by the fall."

Ladies from a distance can rely on their orders from samples being filled as carefully and as satisfactorily as when they buy from the piece, and at the same price. The Mail Department is thus a public benefit, and correspondence is invited. It will be a pleasure to Dey Brothers & Co. to attend carefully to orders sent from a distance as much as to wait on those who visit their stores and inspect personally their stocks.

Don't forget to buy your underwear at H. & A. Rosenbloom's. They have by far the largest stock and sell at lower prices than any firm in town.

F. E. BACON.

[illegible] was [illegible] quality.

[illegible] York poultry show is [illegible] Dec. 14-21.

[illegible] fodder corn has been cut [illegible] the west this fall than ever before.

The government now estimates the wheat crop at 450,000,000 bushels.

A New York syndicate, it is told, will shortly invest $100,000 in the culture of tobacco in Florida.

The last estimate of the corn crop by Statistician Dodge was 1,500,000 bushels.

The hog is a grass eating animal; though people do not always realize it. Swine like both grass and hay.

It is estimated that over 8,000 head of cattle have been slaughtered in Chicago in the efforts of the Illinois live stock commissioners to stamp out pleuro-pneumonia in that state.

It is fortunate for many farmers that the house well sometimes goes dry, because it gives an opportunity for cleaning it. If it has not been cleaned for two or three years, pump it dry and go at it.

Dan Rankin, Addison county, Mo., is thought to be the largest individual feeder of cattle and hogs in the world. His farm embraces 25,000 acres, from which he gathered 1,000,000 bushels of corn. It is not an uncommon thing for him to turn off as many as 5,000 cattle and 10,000 hogs in a season.

Fowls that are confined in yards and kept warm in winter will give better results the entire year than when they are allowed to roam at will. The hens that have had free range will sometimes lay more eggs in summer than will those that are confined, but the hens that are properly cared for during the cold season will lay at a time when the highest prices for eggs are usually obtained.

One reason that dairy butter does not bring the highest price is because too many farmers keep it in their cellars. A cellar is no place for butter, no matter how clean or well ventilated it may be. There will be more or less odor from last winter's vegetables that the butter will absorb.

In this country nearly $3 worth of milk, cream, butter and cheese together are sold and consumed to every dollar's worth of beef. What is more, there is not much danger that the market for dairy products will ever be less than it is now—it is practically inexaustible.

Poultry Suggestions for Autumn.

It is a great mistake to crowd too many fowls together in one apartment. A house 6x8 feet and a yard 30 feet square additional will not accommodate more than thirty fowls. Board floors are better than earth. Board floors are always dry and can be kept much cleaner and sweeter. An application of slack lime on the boards is worth a dozen on the ground. If more board floors were used, less disinfectants and remedies would be needed.

What breeds of fowls are the best winter layers? All hens that molt early, and all early pullets well fed in the fall. Instead of trying to learn the variety or breed that make the best winter layers, learn to feed and manage properly and you will succeed with what you have.

A good morning meal for poultry in winter is chopped corn and oats, or wheat mixed with boiling water. Don't make it sloppy, but dry and crumbly. Feed it warm. A pinch of salt and pepper may be added. Feed about sunrise; they will relish it the better than earlier. Feed at noon a sprinkling of parched corn, oats, or wheat, and at night all they will eat of entire grain of any of the above. Never give more at any time than they will eat up clean. Oyster shells are good for shell material.

The Cheerful Farm Kitchen,

A spacious farm kitchen, when there is a clean and loving mother presiding over it, is about as pleasant as any spot on earth. The great steve with its cheerfully singing kettle, the smooth [illegible] floor, the braided rug for mother's [illegible] the dear little squeaking rocker [illegible] in which she sews, the geraniums [illegible] petunias and other easy growing [illegible] in the windows, the big long [illegible] on which are served such meals as only "mother" can prepare. Ah! we are sorry for the poor child does not get a life start in such a room! It is to this big, pleasant-atmosphered kitchen that children can look for comfort and pleasure in this growling November weather. There is a school to be sure, but night sets in almost as soon as school closes, and in the hours between four o'clock and bed-time something must be done for the child whose natural, and healthful cry is for "something to do."

How to Make Good Apple Butter

The first step is to boil down the cider. If there is no set cauldron, large kettles are hung upon an extemporized wooden crane, in these, new cider is concentrated by boiling. For the best product, a barrel of cider is boiled down to eight gallons. While the cider is being boiled, others prepare the apples, by paring and coring, or by quartering and removing the cores. Good sweet apples, those which will readily cook tender are chosen. Two and a half to three bushels of apples are required for the barrel of cider, after it been concentrated, and the stirring, with a wooden stirrer (hickory preferred), must be continuous to prevent scorching. The thick jelly-like consistency shown when the boiling is sufficient. When the sauce is removed from the fire, many add cinnamon and [illegible]. The sauce is to be transferred, while yet hot, to the vessels in which it [illegible] be kept; these should be wooden [illegible] barrels, or stoneware jars. Apple [illegible] is sometimes made without [illegible] molasses and water instead. [illegible] properly made it is a most excellent [illegible], and vastly more healthful [illegible] which is cloying from an excess [illegible].—American Agriculturist.

How Sulphur Matches are Made.

Nearly all the operations of match making are now carried on by machinery. The wood is first sawed into blocks of uniform length, usually 1½ inches long, or the length of the match. The blocks are then fed into the cutting machine, which cuts 12 matches at every stroke. To make round matches the wood is forced through perforations in medal plates. The splints are then pushed into slats arranged on a double chain 250 feet long. On this they are carried to the sulphur vat, dipped therein by mechanical movement and then in the same manner to the phosphorous vat and dipped. Machines are also used for making the boxes and packing the splints therein.

As the consumption of matches is most enormous—being estimated at six a day for every man, woman and child in Europe and North America—they form an important article of commerce, and the invention of machinery for their manufacture has proved of great advantage. But the special value of machinery is that it has so largely reduced the mortality caused by working over the phosphorous. The substance, when heated, throws off fumes which cannot be continuously breathed without causing disease. In large factories 144,000 small boxes of matches are often made and packed ready for shipping in a single day.

Relief from Sick Headache, Drowsiness, Nausea, Dizziness, Pain in the Side, &c., guaranteed to those using Carter's Little Liver Pills. These complaints are nearly always caused by torpid liver and constipated bowels. Restore these organs to their proper functions and the trouble ceases. Carter's Little Liver Pills will do this every time. One pill is a dose. Forty in a vial. Price 25 cents.

Partridge Hunters.

G. A. Knapp writes from Syracuse to the Forest and Stream: "In the town of West Monroe, Oswego county, north side of Oneida lake, live men having a few acres of ground too poor to raise white beans. By the first of September they have built miles of brush fences with a slip noose set every few feet in the fence, for the purpose of snaring partridges. To insure utter immunity from sportsmen the supervisor and other influential men of the town of West Monroe have had passed a law prohibiting all hunting with dogs for birds or rabbits. They know by experience that every sportsman who comes into the town with a bird dog will take considerable pains to destroy all the snares they may find. I saw thirty-seven snared partridges brought to Syracuse and offered for sale.

The tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will and relief. They never fail to do good.

It Revived Him.

He fell from a four-story window, striking on his head, and strange to say, was picked up apparently lifeless.

"Who is that unfortunate man?" asked a passer-by

"A hardware drummer," was the reply and he is dead. He fell from a four-story window."

"A hardware drummer, and only fell from a four-story window; then he can't be dead. Let me see if I can't revive him."

The gentleman whispered in his ear: "What can you sell me ten casks of straight, self-colored coil chain, ⅝ inch, at?"

"8¼ cents, 30 days," said the dead drummer, struggling to a sitting posture, "How'll you have 'em?" shipped—Epoch.

A Remarkable Advertisement.

A recent advertisement contains the following startling information:

"If the gentleman who keeps the shoe store with the red head will return the the umbrella of a young lady with the ivory handle to the slate roofed grocery shop he will hear of something to his advantage, as the same is a gift of a deceased mother, now no more with the name engraved upon it."

The man who keep an umbrella after such an appeal is unfit to live. We would surrender a circus tent upon slighter provocation.—Texas Siftings.

[illegible] JOURNEY.

[illegible] of youth's sunny station
[illegible] shine in the light,
[illegible] over chasms
[illegible] tunnels of night.
And [illegible] that were brave in the morning
[illegible] with sighing and fears
[illegible] at the city of sorrow
[illegible] thro' the Valley of Tears.

But the [illegible] of this perilous journey
The hand of the Master has made;
With all its discomforts and dangers,
We need not be sad or afraid.
Paths leading from light to darkness,
Ways plunging from gloom to despair,
Wind out thro' the tunnels of midnight
To fields that are blooming and fair.

Tho' the rocks and shadows surround us,
Tho' we catch not one gleam of the day
Above us, fair cities are laughing
And dipping white feet in some bay.
And always, eternal, forever,
Down over hills in the west,
The last final end of our journey,
There lies the Great Station of Rest.

'Tis the Grand Central point of all railways,
All roads centre here when they end;
'Tis the final resort of all tourists,
All rival lines meet here and blend.
All tickets, all mile-books, all passes,
If stolen or begged for or bought,
On whatever road or division,
Will bring you at last to this spot.

If you pause at the City of Trouble
Or wait in the Valley of Tears,
Be patient, the train will move onward
And rush down the track of the years,
Whatever the place is you seek for,
Whatever your aim or your quest.
You shall come at the last with rejoicing
To the beautiful City of Rest.

You shall store all your baggage of worries,
You shall feel perfect peace in this realm,
You shall sail with old friends on fair waters,
With joy and delight at the helm.
You shall wander in cool, fragrant gardens
With those who have loved you the best,
And the hopes that were lost in life's journey
You shall find in the City of Rest.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

NOVEMBER.

FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN.

Who shall sing to bleak November,
Month of frost and glowing ember?
Is there nothing, then, to praise
In these chilly thirty days?
Ah, and who shall lack for song
When the nights are still and long
When beside the log-wood fire
We may hear the wood elves' choir
Making dainty music float
Up the big, brick chimney's throat;
When within the flame and smoke
We may see a fairy folk
Coming hither, going thither,
Vanishing we know not whither?
Unless perhaps they all depart
For the frozen forest's heart,
To tell the stark, forsaken trees
Of the fireside's mysteries,—
How they saw some other elves
Just as funny as themselves?

—St. Nicholas.

THE PROPER THING.

Red in all shades is still very popular.

Pearls are the favorite stones worn at present.

Felt is a favorite material for hats and bonnets.

The reign of tan-colored gloves is about over.

Large feather fans are exceedingly fashionable.

Green leather is a new caprice for bags, belts, card cases, etc.

Embroidered dress goods are very fashionable and cheaper than formerly.

Sealskin gloves for woman's wear have the balms and inside finger pieces of dog skin.

Matched toilet from bonnet to boot heel will be "the correct" and expensive thing next winter.

Two-toned velvets are very elegant, and are combined with plain velvet of the darker shade or color.

Decided purples have superseded the heliotrope tints in favor, and are quite as generally unbecoming.

Jet and steel oraments on bonnets, to be tasteful, must look as if they were placed to serve some useful purpose.

Sandal wood is fashionable again. All sorts of ornaments are carved out of it, and its perfume pervades the fashionable boudoir.

Many rich toilets are made of plain, soft-finished faille throughout, and trimmed with beaded passementeries of the same color.

Very pretty autumn toilets are made of cloth of two contrasting colors, the trimming being pinked out edges of the two colors in alternate.

The most serviceable of winter house-gowns is a dark cashmere made with a yoke and full sleeves, and belted at the waist with a cord and tassel.

Cashmere, serge, bombazine, camel's hair and all-black woolens are used for mourning costumes; but Henrietta cloth is perferred for handsome costumes.

Soft felt hats are already coming into comfortable repute. Large gauze veils are used to ornament these hats, and the long ends are tied around the neck like a boa.

It is stated that the white starched collar is a thing of the past, but one can not help believing that for street and traveling the collar will still be preferred to the easily crushed and soiled ruche.

Black velvet corset belts, pointed at the top both back and front, and finishing at the waist with lappels, are to be worn with colored dresses. They are sure to be popular, for they make the figure look so trim and slight.

That tired languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

William Laird.

William Laird, a well known druggist [illegible], Oregon, writes as follows: [illegible] of Van Wert's Cough Balsam [illegible] from you a short time ago [illegible] and I am pleased to [illegible] has given unbounded [illegible]. At a First Street Barber Shop.

Dumley recently became an Odd Fellow, and last Wednesday evening took the second degree. After the work had been done, Dumley was so elated and pleased that he took some members of the degree team down to Boomer's and "set it up" for them.

This lead to a digest on the advantages of belonging to the mystic order and a discussion as to the arrangements of their new hall. More pop (?) was popped, and Dumley did not reach home until the wee sma' hours. After endeavoring for about five minutes to open the door with a cigar stub instead of his night key, the voice of his wife from within said, "Come in, the door is'nt locked." Dumley entered and muttered something about the lodge keeping in late owing to so many new members being initiated. Here we ring down the curtain, suffice to say that Dumley was seen down on First street, bright and early the following morning with a gaunt and hungry look. He entered "Pomp" Giroux's barber shop, settled down in the chair and ordered the barber to go at him, "give him all the extras" &c &c. "Pomp" smiled a smile, which, although there was no noise to it, it had a penetrating effect, and passed through the walls of the Lewis House and was heard by Thomas Nichols.

Dumley gave himself up to thought, and was entirely oblivious of his surroundings, while "Pomp," with the artistic skill of a true tonsorial manipulator of the razor, applied himself vigorously, saying not a word for fear that he would not have the opportunity of accomplishing all that he had been ordered to do. Finally he had finished and the following dialogue with its tragic ending occurred.

"Pomp"—"There you are, sir; next!"

Dumley—"Hol' on! Hair cut!"

"Pomp"—"I've cut your hair already, sir."

Dumley—'Sham-p-poo!"

"Pomp"—"I've done that too."

Dumley—(Too comfortable to get up) —"P-pull a tooth."

At this "Pomp" fell in a dead faint, and Dumley, fearing that murder was added to his miseries of the past twelve hours, in a confused manner grasped his overcoat, and without leaving change for the work done, rushed down stairs knocking over George Dada in his flight, then through Morrow's grocery store to the Midland depot, which he reached just in time to catch the Syracuse train. He only rode as far as Broadway, but insisted on paying the three cents fare, which so surprised the conductor that his hair stood on end.

He started up Broadway to Fourth street to his mother-in-law's and asked for breakfast. After devouring a liberal amount of sausage and buck-wheat cakes he felt like a new man and kissed his mother-in-law—think of it. Dumley is all right now; but says, that as he casts a retrospective eye over the events that transpired during those twelve hours, he is sure that he would be an inmate of the Mexico Insane Asylum had it not been for those sausages and buckwheat cakes.

Laxador is the great stomachic remedy, correcting all of the preverted processes of this important organ. Sold by all druggists. Price only 25 cents.

The distressing ailments of early childhood are promptly relieved and cured by the use of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price 25 cents.

By a Large Majority.

"This is all so sudden, Mr. Sampson," she said, with maidenly reserve, "and so unexpected, that although I confess I am not entirely indifferent to you, I hardly know what to say in reply to—"

"If you are in favor of the proposition," suggested Mr. Sampson, who, like Dick Swiveller, is a Perpetual Grand Master, "you will please signify your assent by saying 'Aye.'"

"Aye," came softly.

"Contrary?"

"No!' thundered the old man, opening the door.

'The noes have it by a large majority," said Mr. Sampson, reaching hastily for his hat.—New York Sun.

A Cheating Fish Dealer.

They were standing in the old market-house back of the Central Station watching the dealer sell out his last fish.

"Good Heavens," said A to B, "What a cheat that fish-dealer is. I have been watching him for half an hour."

"How's that? I didn't notice anything peculiar."

"Don't you see that this man is charging for the scales every time he weighs a fish?"

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent].

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19, 1887.

In no city of the United States was there more general and profound interest in the results of the recent elections than that in Washington, for here are temporarily domiciled representatives of every State and Territory of the Union,—as a general thing their tenure of place being in a large measure dependent upon the changing fortunes of politics.

Realizing the force of this truth, your correspondent, on last Tuesday night, strolled out on Pennsylvania Avenue and joined a throng of over one thousand men, who were solidly massed in front of the Daily Post building, where the election returns were displayed in an upper story window by means of a stereoptican. The crowd was as good humored as it was large and was perfectly orderly; as the news was blazoned forth there were Republican cheers and Democratic cheers quickly following each other.

At the White House, President Cleveland had a special wire, and soon after the New Yonk figures began to flash forth, the Chief Magistrate's face was wreathed in a smile that was childlike and bland, and when he retired to rest for the night, he doubtless had bright visions of a second term in the historic mansion.

It is less than a month now till the meeting of Congress, and the popular interest is focused upon the probable course of that body, in regard to economic questions—more especially the tariff, which over-shadows all others. I believe there will be a substantial reduction, both in customs duties and internal revenue taxation, for unless both are reduced, neither is likely to be, as such legislation will probably be in the nature of a compromise. That the present tariff should be re-adjusted is the opinion of the brightest statesmen of both parties—the only question being the desired method.

Other important matters that will engage the attention of our national lawmakers, will be the proposition to change the term for which Congressmen are elected, and also to change the time of meeting of Congress from the first Monday in December to sometime in January. Under the present system of Congressional service—that is, members of the House of Representatives—they are elected thirteen months before taking their seats. Thus a member's successor is elected before the incumbent's term is half out. This old-fogy plan also tends to destroy our theory of popular representation, which is the corner-stone of republican government, for a Congressman, who reflected the wishes of his constituents thirteen months ago, may have drifted away from their views upon vital questions by the present time.

Evidently there is need of real reform here, and it is to be hoped that a result so greatly desired may be secured by the Fiftieth Congress and be applied to the Fifty-First.

The election of the next President of the United States may have possibly been decided in little Rhode Island last Tuesday, as the vacancy filled in its Congressional delegation by the election of a Republican would enable the party to control a majority of the States and elect their candidate for President, in case the election should be thrown into the House of Representatives as it was in 1824, when John Quincy Adams was chosen.

If credence can be given to a communication received in this city a few days since from the captain of a steamer sailing the Mexican gulf, the great collection of scientific treasures of the National Museum is to be enriched by the addition of the head of a veritable sea serpent, captured after a desperate and bloody struggle, in which the ship came near being capsized—the marine monster having been decapitated after it was found impossible to make other headway against this terror of those who go down to the sea in ships.

The annual of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury this week, contains some interesting information, showing as it does, the condition of our internal system of taxation. The total collections for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1887, were $118,829,523, an increase of about two million dollars over the same period for 1886, and of about four million dollars for the year preceeding. For the last fiscal year the receipts were $827,523 in excess of the estimates. At compared with last year there was a decrease of two and a half million gallons of spirits in the quantity deposited in distillery warehouses.

A Guy on Henry Guy.

They are telling a good story on the street about that amiable, erratic and inscrutable peripatetic Henry Guy Carleton, who resembles the late William R. Travers as well in hesitancy of his utterances as the cleverity of his wit. Carleton met Bill Nye the other day.

"I s-s-say, old f-f-f-fellow," muttered he, "c-c-c-can't you c-c-c-come up to my rooms s-s s-some evening for a c c-couple of hours? I w-w-want to t-t-t-talk to you for about f-f-fifteen minutes."—Town Topi cs.

A HUNDRED YEARS A HERO!

How Seth Warner Won a Wife and Became Famous.

Colonel Seth Warner, of Vermont, the famous hero of the Revolutionary war, was a leading fighter of the Hampshire grants.

These titles were disputed by the State of New York, and its authorities obtained an edict of the King of England in their favor. The settlers were stung by the supposed injustice. This state of things brought Colonel Seth Warner to the front. With Ethan Allen and others he actively opposed every effort of the New York state authorities to enforce possession, and finally be, with Allen and others, were outlawed and a price put on their heads!

To circumvent New York, it was necessary that some one should go into that state and gain required information. Colonel Warner, assuming for safety the name of "Dr. Howard," undertook this perilous and romantic journey.

While on his way home he stopped at a country inn, where an old gentleman and daughter were storm-bound. The father fell ill and the daughter called upon Colonel Warner, who, with his wide knowledge of simple remedies, successfully treated the "old man" and he finally won this devoted woman for a wife.

Such incidents were not uncommon in those years. When the doctor was not easily reached, months of sickness, and even life were often saved by some unprofessional friend versed in the use of simple herbs and roots. The health of early settlers and their powers of endurance convince us that such medicines did only good and left no poison in the blood to work as much injury to the system as would the disease itself.

In time of peace the colonel was in constant demand for his knowledge of simple remedies and their power over disease. But it was left to another of his name of the present age to give to the public what was then used with such positive success.

Warner for over a hundred years has shared with Ethan Allen the admiration of the American people.

Colonel Seth Warner belongs to family of wide distinction; no less than eight members thereof won fame in the regular practice of medicine.

Looking to the adoption by the people of this generation of the old time simple remedies, his direct descendant, H. H. Warner, the well known proprieter of Warner's safe cure, for many years has been experimenting with old time roots and herbs formulæ and, his search having been finally rewarded with success, he gives the world the result. These recipes and formulæ in other days accomplished great things because they were purely vegetable and combined simply so as to cure the disease indicated, without injury to the system. In harmony with their old time character, we learn that he proposes to call them Warner's Log Cabin Remedies, using as a trademark an old fashioned log cabin. We understand that he intends to put forth a "Sarsaparilla" for the blood, the sarsaparilla itself being but one of a number of simple and effective elements; "Log Cabin Hops and Buchu," a general stomach tonic and invigorator; "Log Cabin Cough and Consumption Remedy," "Warner's Log Cabin Scalpine" for the hair; a preparation for that universal disease catarrh, Log Cabin Rose Cream;' 'Warner's Log Cabin Plasters;" "Warner's Log Cabin Liver Pills," which are to be used in connection with the other remedies, or independently, as required.

Warner's safe remedies are already standards of the most pronounced scientific value in all parts of the world, and we have no doubt the Log Cabin Remedies, for the diseases they are intended to cure, will be of equal merit, for Mr. Warner has the reputation of connecting his name with no preparation that is not meritorious.

He Could Wait.

Six year old Ned was enjoying the first ham and eggs of the season, and as the horseradish bottle was passed though he would have some too. When he had recovered somewhat from the burning and had settled down to his breakfast again, he explained the situation with:

MAKES HIS OWN LIGHT.

An Economical Citizen of Fayetteville Utilizes Inflammable Gas from His Own Stomach—A Syracuse Yarn.

Readers of Dickens' "Bleak House" will remember the character Krook, who passed from earth to heaven or some other place by spontaneous combustion. Our neighboring village of Fayetteville has a case that calls to mind the peculiar death of Krook, but is much more interesting as the man is living. William Jackson for four years a photographer in the village, is married and 31 years old. For six years he has been a sufferer from dyspepsia. Mr. Jackson is a strong temperance man, but his complaint has resulted in an inflammable gas being developed in his stomach. He discovered this last May, one night when he went to blow out the light, when there was a report as loud as a firecracker. and a flame spurted from his mouth, extending upwards to the forehead, burning his mustache, eyelashes and that portion of his hair just above the forehead. His wife was awakened by a report similar to that of a firecracker. He was careful after that not to come in contact with the fire or light, but despite his caution, the same thing happened again over a week ago, when he was preparing to move to Vermont, and when endeavoring to extinguish a lamp in a dark room of his photograph gallery. The physicians are all puzzled, and while wondering as to the cause, attributed the accident to eructation of gasses from the stomach.

Doctor Quinby says that the case is not unparalleled, He knew as an actual fact that it was a bona fide surprise to all practicing physicians, and laid the cause of the phenomnon to dormant gases from the stomach of a chronic dyspeptic. He said that he had received a postal card from a London physician, announcing that a case similiar in every respect to Jackson's has been reported in a Paris medical journal.

Dr. William Manlius Smith, the chemist, says that the case is one of the most extraordinary on record. He thought that such an accident could occur, however, as inflammable gas could be generated in a man's stomach when all the conditions are observed. In the present case he attributes the explosion to generated hydrogen, or a combination of carbureted hydrogen coming in contact with air.

Mr. Jackson can light his breath now with no personal inconvenience whenever he pleases.—Syracuse Courier.

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? WHY not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the high-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? Why not go and look the situation over, and see for yourself, or at least obtain further information, which will be sent free, if you will address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn. ?

WHEN A WOMAN

becomes afflicted with a Kidney disease life is truly a burden. The female organization is so constituted as to be peculiarly susceptible to it; is easily controlled by it, and it rapidly develops and spreads until the whole fabric is affected and there is no time when she is free from pain. Refreshing sleep is unknown, the long weary hours of the night are followed by equally long hours of the day, and so the months and years pass, bringing as they roll away increased burdens.

Mrs. C. P. Brackett, wife of a town official of Hermon, Me., had severe case of kidney disease. In time she became so afflicted with continuous pains across the small of the back, weary, heavy, bearing down pains, heavy, dull feeling between the shoulders with occasional spells of "sick headache," as well as other troubles peculiar to this disease in women, so that she at times gave up in despair. She was confined to her house, deprived of all social intercourse with friends and neighbors, and was day and night a constant sufferer. One day she read an advertisement issued by us describing symptoms of kidney disease, and persuaded her husband to buy a bottle of Brown's Sarsaparilla which she used. She said it helped her and her husband, having no faith in patent medicines, laughed and told her she was no better, and that "faith" and "hope" had revived her temporarily. He bought the second and third however, and like the first, they helped her rapidly along the road to health. The remedy was continued until Mrs. Brackett was restored, and she has now been for over two years free from all symptoms of kidney disease. This case which was perhaps as serious a one as ever came to the notice of the medical fraternity of this section, attracted wide-spread attention at the time, and stamped beyond all dispute the fact that Brown's Sarsaparilla was a deadly foe to Kidney disease.

Important.

Believing that everyone should be a subscriber to a local paper and to one metropolitan paper either for the general news of the day or, if the subscriber be a farmer, for the best agricultural paper that the country possesses, we have made arrangements with the publishers of the two greatest weekly papers in this country, in their respective fields, to furnish the same to our subscribers. Therefore for a limited time we propose to make the following offers, reserving the right to withdraw them at any time:

1. We will send THE TIMES and the N. Y. Weekly World, for one year, with your choice of the three great World Premiums, History of the United States, History of England or Everydody's Guide, for $2.00.

2. We will send THE TIMES and the Rural New Yorker, the best illustrated weekly agricultural paper in this or any other country, for $2.50. The following two conditions must be observed:

1. The price named must inveriably accompany each order.
2. Old subscribers to THE TIMES must first pay to date before taking advantage of either offer. Call at this office or send cash with order to THE TIMES,

THE Baldwinsville Era, enters upon the third year of its existance with its last issue, and celebrates the event by a new and appropriate head, an enlarged paper, and an additional name, the Tobacco Review. The Era is an enterprising sheet. We like it and wish it success.

PARTICULARS came over the wires Monday morning, of another terrible disaster in the English Channel. The Dutch steamship W. A. Scholten, bound from Rotterdam to New York, collided with the steamer Rosa Mary, ten miles off Dover, and sank in twenty minutes. There was a heavy fog at the time and a panic followed the accident on the Scholten. It is reported now that 130 of the crew and passengers of the ill-fated vessel are missing. There is a possibility that some of them were picked up by passing vessels.

LAST Sunday evening, the winter headquarters of P. T. Barnum's "Greatest Show on Earth", at Bridgeport, Conn., was destroyed by fire caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp.

Four elephants, including Sampson and Alice, and the white elephant, five lions, seven leopards, six panthers, four kangaroos, six horses, and a large number of smaller animals, were among those burned to death. Barnum says everything will be replaced and they will have a greater show than ever in the spring.

IN another column will be found the prospectus of the Utica Morning Herald, one of our best exchanges, and one that we would feel lost without. In politics it is Republican through and through. Editorially it is unsurpassed byany metropolitan comtemporary. In addition to the general news, it has special correspondents in all the counties of Northern-Central New York and a column or two from these appear in each issue. The reputation that it has made as a market reporter is unequaled and in season THE TIMES always quotes the Utica and Little Falls cheese market reports as furnished through its columns.

JAY B. COLE, the recent Republican candidate for School Commissioner in the 3d district of this county, would seem to be a rather cheeky individual with more gall than common sense. After being thoroughly beaten by his lady opponent, he served a notice on the board of county canvassers objecting to the counting, canvassing or allowing the votes cast for Ida L. Griffin, on the ground that she, being a woman, is ineligible to hold said office, and that therefore the votes cast for her are illegal, null and void. The board of canvassers properly laid Mr. Cole's protest upon the table and issued the certificate to the pioneer lady school commissioner.

Palermo.

(Special Correspondence to THE TIMES).

On Saturday last sad news was received here from the West Branch Times of Michigan of the death of one of Palermo's young men, Lewis H. Brockway. He left this town about nine years ago for the West, and he was as every one who knew him asserts an honest upright young man. While in the West he was in a wholesale store and for one year officiated as clerk in the West Branch hotel. On January last he was appointed under sheriff, a position he has ably filled. His funeral was held under the Masonic Order of which he was a member. The floral tributes were many and of very appropritate designs, consisting among others of a square and compass, contributed by the F. & A. M. Lodge. The deceased leaves to mourn his loss a brother, and sister and many friends in Ogeman county, Mich., and also in Oswego county. His age was 39 years.

Now is the time to get an overcoat or suit made to order. If you propose to do it leave your order with H. & A. Rosenbloom. It is for your interest to do so.

[illegible] have the sick, their clothing, and the persons who nurse them, kept entirely away from others, especially children, and to such care should be added cleanliness. The sick room should be clean and airy, and no other children allowed in the apartment.

Every cloth, cup, and all clothing and bedding used in the sick-room, should be cleansed and disinfected before being handled, or used by other persons. The house itself must be disinfected as soon as the sick recover or die. Cleanliness and ventilation should be enforced night and day. Open windows and open fire-places, with fire in them day and night, protect the sick and all who attend them. The clothes and dishes used by the sick should be put in boiling hot water as soon as removed without being taken to another room.

The soiled clothing from the sick, and the bedding that can be boiled, should be thrown into a disinfecting fluid made by adding four table-spoons full of sulphate of zinc, and two table-spoons full of common salt to a gallon of boiling water.

When the time for washing comes, thoroughly boil the clothes etc. before washing. The woodwork, chairs, and stools of the sick-room should be washed with the disinfecting fluid. The chamber vessels and spit-cups, used by the sick, should be dronched with this fluid before they are removed from the room.

For disinfecting drains, closets, sinks, and yards, make a fluid by adding five pounds of dry copperas to a large pail full of water, and use it freely.

As soon as the sick-room is vacated, let it be fumigated with sulphur, and let all rags, mats, beds, and furniture remain in the room and near where the sulphur is placed; from two to five pounds of sulphur or broken brunstone laid upon coals in an iron vessel set in a tub containing a few inches of water, will be sufficient to fumigate two or three rooms. The rooms should be closed as tightly as possible, and the fumes allowed to remain for a whole day.

The sick should be nursed by adults who have no children about them. Avoid the patient's breath, and matters ejected in coughing. Children and visitors should be kept away from the house where there is diphtheria.

The burial of those that die should be strictly private. The corpse should be wrapped in a sheet saturated with the zinc disinfectant.

Children who recover from diphtheria should not visit or be visited, attend school or meetings, nor mingle with others of the family from which they have been separated, until so advised by their physician.

The mother, father, or other members of the family, who need to become the attendants upon the sick should practice precautions to prevent spreading the infection in the family. Nurses of such patients should keep away from other families, and from other children of the same family.

It must be remembered that not only the mild cases, but the convalescent, may, and frequently do, infect others fatally; and that by this means diphtheria is thoughtlessly spread from place to place.

And finally. It is a public as well as a domestic duty, to apply these Sanitary Rules wherever a case of diphtheria occurs. This disease should be treated as an enemy, to be conquered in every house it enters.

Their Alma Mater Greets Them.

The burning of the office of the St Louis Sunday Sayings at St. Louis last week, and which is supposed to have been the work of the Anarchists, recalls several former Fultonians who are now filling prominent positions in the world of journalism.

Two of these gentlemen occupy positions on the paper mentioned. G. E. Williams, formerly editor of the Fulton Times is one of them, and the managing editor of the Sayings is C. P. Meade, a son-in-law of Mr. Williams. Mr. Meade only lived in Fulton temporarily, but was well known and liked.

Another prominent jonrnalist, Chester Lord, managing editor of the the New York Sun, began his newspaper work on that journal with a reporter's berth, and has gradually risen in his profession until he has reached the high office which he now fills. Associated with him is Daniel Kellogg, a brilliant writer, who is, like Mr. Lord an old Fulton boy.

Other former residents here who are now engaged in this occupation are Oliver S. Adams, an editor on the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, his brother, Corwin L. Adams, editor of the Trumansburg Sentinel, J. M. Williams and Charles Harrison, editors of two Phœnix papers, the Register and the Chronicle, Joseph Francis, now on a Chicago daily, formerly edited the Fulton Times.

The latest acquisition to the Brooklyn Eagle is John A. McKay, who has charge of the Secret Society Notes and the "Pastors and People" columns. Mr. McKay was editor of the Fulton Times two years ago. Indeed the Times gave most of the journalists mentioned their early schooling. Though a young man, Mr. McKay has already established a reputation in his line of work that many of more mature age might justly envy. He is practically self made and his productions in the Eagle are those of an easy writer.—Cor. Sunday Herald.

Bestowed so well:
We join the grand acclaim,
And magnify the name,
Star heralded that came,
Immanuel.

Thy blessings manifold,
Choicer than gems and gold,
Jehovah, Friend,
Our North and South have crowned,
May harvest rich abound,
And freedom here be found,
Till time shall end.

Great Prophet, Priest and King,
With gratitude we sing
Thy peerless grace:
In love the nation take,
For the Redeemer's sake,
A temple fair to make,
Thy dwelling place.

The Rural New Yorker of New York city is recognized as the leading farm and garden weekly of America. It has the best writers; it is original throughout. It is the only journal that conducts an experiment farm. It costs more to publish than any other journal of its class. Its illustrations (over 500 yearly) are from nature, or else original conceptions. Among the latter class, the Rural is publishing a series of powerful cartoons, nothing approaching which has ever before been attempted. They illustrate the Power of the Grange, the Curse of Monopolies, the Farmer Enlightning the World, the Improvement of Land, the Effects of the Destruction of Useful Birds, etc. etc. These printed on fine heavy paper, with a sample copy of the RURAL NEW-YORKER, will be sent free to any farm readers who apply as above.

We supply THE FULTON TIMES one year and the Rural New Yorker one year for $2.50.

Francis Hodgson Burnett will open the Christmas St. Nicholas with a new story entitled, "Sara Crewe." There will also be stories by J. T. Trobridge, H. H. Boyesen, Frank R. Stockton and Washington Gladden, with a description of the voyage of the WORLD balloon, fully illustrated and written by the daring reporter who took the trip from St. Louis last summer. T. R. Sullivan, a most engaging writer of short stories, will contribute one entitled "The Tincture of Success." A remarkable ballad "Ticonderoga," by R. L. Stevenson, and "The Water-Witch" a ballad of the sea, both fully illustrated will appear in the Christmas Scribner's. Sarah Orne Jewett also writes a most fitting story, delicately illustrated by Taylor.

Much other interesting matter will appear not the least of which will be Palmer Cos everwelcome "Brownies." The new volume began with November.

Twenty-five kinds of tobacco to [illegible] at Berzee's Oneida street, [illegible]

[illegible] in its history. Indeed, there is a promise that it may be made a source of Government revenue. This state of affairs is really as surprising as it is gratifying, when it's remembered that for a number of years past the annual deficits of this department have ranged from eight to fifteen millions dollars. For the year ending June 30, 1886, the deficiency was $6,900,000, but that for the last year was only about $400,000; for the past fiscal year the same reduction has been going on, so that it is probable that on June 30, 1887, the deficiency was not over one million dollars. It is estimated that before the close of the present year the postal business will be a profit to the Government. This great Federal Department, which comes nearer than any other to the people, is an interesting topic at all times—particularly so now, when there appears to be a strong probability that at no distaut day we shall have one-cent letter postage. Few realize the magnitude of the United States mail service. The free transportations of the business mail of 60,000 office holders throughout the country costs the vast sum of two million dollars; the newspaper mails which constitute one third of the matter carried, bring but one fortieth of the revenue of the service. The United States have more postmasters, postal employes, and postal routes than any other country in the world, which is the very best indication of our substantial progress and prosperity, and the cultivation of the social graces that is characteristic of the Americans.

For the past year and a half, pennies have seem to become popular, especially in the West—in the East they have been so from time immemorial—as the only United States mint that makes small coins, that in Philadelphia, has been unable to supply the growing demand, though the dies have been, and are yet, running night and day. Having, during the period in question, filled orders for one and five cent pieces, amounting to more than a million dollars, and yet the mint is $200,000 behind the orders. If no more demands should be made, it would take the mint six weeks constant work to fill the orders now on file.

A late decision of the United States Supreme Court in what is know as the drive-well cases, will be hailed with great satisfaction by the three million farmers of the country, whose financial interests were affected thereby. The inventor claimed a royalty of ten dollars each of these bored wells, but the Court refused to grant it—thus, this important decision is worth just thirty millions to the farmers of the United States. The State Grangers of Iowa and Minnesota voted to raise $25,000 to fight the patent,—an expense they could well afford in view of the immense amount at stake.

Speaker Carlisle has early arrived in the Capital, for the purpose of conferring with the President and the Secretary of the Treasury, in reference to the tariff measure which, it is understood, was outlined in the secluded shades of Oak View last summer. It is reported that Mr. Carlisle is to be unanimously re-elected Speaker by his party, and that the whole influence of the Administration will be exerted in favor of a reduction of the tariff. The President feels encouraged and strengthened in this policy by the result of the late election in New York State, where a reform of the tariff was made a distinct issue in the Democratic platform.

The angry controversy between Secretary Lamar and Commissioner Sparks over the Omaha railroad land grant, has furnished the gossips and newsmongers of this city a rare morsel for the past week. After all, the only question at issue is that of subordination—whether the Interior Department shall have one or two heads. The action of Secretary Lamar seems to be generally approved. Of course the only outcome of the affair was the resignation of the Commissioner. which has been tendered to the President and accepted by him. Many think hat Assistant Commissioner Stockslager will be the successor of his late chief.

The Corcoran Art Gallery will soon add to its artistic treasures Professor Becker's painting, bought at Berlin for $4,000. The picture is a large canvas about seven feet long, and contains at dozen or more histolical figures, among the number Pope Julius II, Raphael and Michael Angelo.

$100 REWARD. $100.

The readers of the Times will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages. and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system thereby distroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength, by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The Proprieters have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars, for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

UTICA, N. Y. Nov. 21.

While the market did not have much snap today, cheese sold at fairly good prices, considering that it was the last of October and first of November stock. At 10¾c. and above, the goods were made of full milk, but below that it is quite likely that the skimmer had been used more or less. Next week there will be very little if any full cream stock in market. A large proportion of the cheese sold was taken by the home trade, which would pay better prices than those who buy for shippers can afford to pay. At a meeting of the board it was resolved to have two more days of sale. December 5th. will therefore be the last market of the season. Among the sales of the day there was a large lot of Septembers and Octobers combined. Following is the list of transactions;

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
6	800	10c.
44	2,735	10¾
19	1,336	10½
5	340	10⅝

4	297	10⅞
7	1,391	11c.
88	7,119
	764	Com
Total	7,883

Ruling price, 10¾c. Transactions one year ago 5,796 boxes; ruling price, 11½c. Two years ago 5,112, ruling 8¼c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Nov. 21.

Cheese—The market to-day was dull and slow, with light offerings and sales. Several of the buyers could find no use for cheese at current rates, and so bought none. The bulk of the purchases were taken by three or four buyers. Prices do not average quite as good as last week, and the ruling price is one-fourth cent below. As it appears now, it will take but a short time to close out the season's make in this section. Some factories are closed; many others will close this week, and in two weeks all will be closed. There is fine sleighing on the hills both sides of the Mohawk valley, and cows will crop no more grass this season. Following is the list of sales:

Lots	Boxes	Price
23	1,240	10½
15	821	10¾
4	310	11c.
2	115	11¼
7	360	com.
51	2,846
Farm dairy	689
	3,535

Farm Dairies—Sales of 689 boxes farm cheese were made at 9 to 11½c; The bulk going at 10½c.

Butter—Ninety packages of farm dairy butter sold at 18 to 22c., very little at the latter price; the bulk brought 20c.

AT FULTON.

The cheese market here is closing very satisfactory. The home demand at this market Monday night was strong. The 1,830 boxes from sixteen factories brought from 10 to 11¼ cents. The market is nearly closed for the season, there being now but a few odds and ends left. The price one year ago was 11¼ cents.

"HASTE MAKES WASTE."

"What!!! Have you finished your washing? I had much less than you and you are through first. What soap do you use?"

"It isn't the soap. Use washing powder and you will get through in half the time; it does the work for you."

"I know it will, but the clothes won't last half so long; we've tried it. We use Ivory Soap altogether; it cleans more easily and quickly than any other kind, and I find the clothes last as long again. My folks won't let me use washing powder."

"Of course they won't, neither will mine, but I use it anyhow. I don't care to save their clothes at the expense of my time and back."

Reader, which do you value most, your laundress' time and back, or your clothes? If the latter, then don't let her use washing powder.

[illegible] and the costumes which were [illegible].

If we were disposed to criticise, it would merely be to state that the entertainment was somewhat too long. If the after piece, Slasher and Crasher, had been omitted, probably many would have been as well pleased. It is not our intention however, to detract a particle of the credit that is due each and every one, for the skillful manner in which each performed the character assumed.

Previously to the entertainment, the Fulton band played several selections in front of the opera house, and when the time for the curtain to ring up came, the body of the hall was filled, and a large part of the gallery, with the best audience that Fulton could turn out, all anxious to see how well the parts could be sustained.

Mr. Spencer, as Richelieu, was of course good. This gentleman, who has been in Fulton for the past few months, is an actor of great versatility, and by his rendition of the character of this celebrated Prime Minister of France, gave much food for thought and reflection for those that heard him last evening. Miss Carrie B. Nichols, as Julie de Mortemar, the orphan and ward of Richelieu, again demonstrated to a Fulton audience her ability to take a most difficult part, and sustain it in a manner superior to many professionals.

Miss Maud Barnes, as a spy in Richelieu's interest, although not having as much as Miss Nichols, did her part with a grace and ease that was commendable, to say the least.

Fred Bennett, as Chevalier de Mauprat, the soldier and lover, G. W. Hoff, as Count de Baradas, the villain, and favorite of the king and Edwin B McCully, as Father Joseph, divided equally the honors in sustaining the most important characters.

Frank G. Coates, as Louis XIII king of France, Harry B. Butler, as an attendant to the king, Bert W. Bennet, as Francois, page to Richelieu, W. G. Bennett, as an officer in Richelieu's household, and Arthur H. Emerick, Secretary of State, were all worthy of special mention.

The youthful actors were urged on to their best efforts by frequent and well earned applause.

During the interlude, Masters Cullen and Conley gave an excellent exibition in club swinging, and both received an encore.

In the farce which concluded the entertainment, we can not refrain from making favorable mention of the acting of Edwin B. McCully, as Crasher, Miss Blanche Boomer as Trueblue, and Miss Helen Barnes, as Dinah Blowhard, a strong minded female.

The costumes used were secured especially for this occasion, and were elaborate and elegant.

The post office will be open on Thanksgiving day from 8:30 a. m. to 10 a. m., and from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dey Brothers & Co., of Syracuse, are rising into prominence more rapidly than any other Dry Goods House in these parts. Their methods of business are fundamentally sound, and the public confidence reposed in them is specially manifested in the continual growth of their mail department.

Ladies from a distance can rely on their orders from samples being filled as carefully and as satisfactorily as when they buy from the piece, and at the same price. The Mail Department is thus a public benefit, and correspondence is invited. It will be a pleasure to Dey Brothers & Co. to attend carefully to orders sent from a distance as much as to wait on those who visit their stores and inspect personally their stocks.

In a card in the Patriot last week, F. K. Jones relates his terrible fright at hearing the blatting of a Jackass. This was when Freddie was a mere child, as it were. Fortunately he has not the same trepidation for the image of the shag eared monster that he had for its blatting, or he would long since have severed this mortal coil, through fright, at seeing the shadow of himself.

Reply to the Jury.

MR. EDITOR:

The six jurymen in their column of tirade, have shaded the truth somewhat. By their verdict they declared the officer guilty of an illegal arrest. Juries are sometimes mistaken; the officer knew this jury was, and his only remedy was to place the facts before the people. He caused the main facts to be copied and printed. I certified that the facts published corresponded with my minutes and to sustain the officer before the public, added my opinion and that of counsel for defendant, which happened to be contrary to that of the jury.

I nowhere certified that all the evidence was published, but will add here that it comprised all the material testimony in reference to defendant's intoxication. In no way did I cast any reflections on the jury or make any remarks about them, then or since, except what was stated to one of the jurymen. The reflections were cast upon the officer and it was very proper that the error of the jury should be corrected as far as possible.

Catholic Fair.

The event of the coming winter season in Fulton will be a grand fair organized for the purpose of erecting a new church—extensive preparations are being made—committees are at work—costly presents are each day donated—our village merchants give liberally—the firms, J. C. O'Brien, Bennett & Stewart, George Johnston, H. & A. Rosenbloom, James Cole, J. R. Sullivan, Daniel Dwyer, W. A. Osborne and Boston Bazaar have started the movement with valuable articles a list of which will be published next week—Father Earley has been appointed the president of fair and he will be grateful for all donations and services rendered by friends—new buildings beautify our town and all should encourage good works—the prospects of the fair are the brightest and all will enjoy themselves during the holidays.

Thanksgiving.

To-morrow is the day set aside, by the President of the United States and the Governor of our own state, for religious services, to acknowledge the goodness of God in the ordinary dispensation of his bounties and to enjoy (at our homes or with our friends) the turkey, the name of which is nearly synonymous with the name of the day itself. This practice of observing Thanksgiving day, which originated with our New England forefathers, will be observed in Fulton by the cessation of business generally, and by union services in the M. E. church at 11 o'clock, the sermon to be preached by the Rev. Mr. Southworth of the Free Methodist church.

The Wonders of Electric Lighting.

In many of the largest stores in New York city one apartment is illuminated by electric lights by day as well as night. This is to give customers an opportunity of judging of the effect produced by their costumes in parties, fetes and balls under the glare of brilliant lights. The fine clothing sold by e. a. cook & co., opposite clark house, first street, and made by tucker, calder & co., of utica, n. y., will stand the severest tests of this kind. Select a suit that is made for your size and you will not regret it.

It will be remembered that on last August Rev. N. N. Pharis (colored) who was in attendance at the colored camp meeting held at Wiber's grove and who hailed from Rome, N. Y., was fined $10 in Justice Parker's Court at Oswego Falls, for contempt of court. The case at that time attracted a good deal of attention and Pharis and a number of others declared the action of the justice was an outrage and he was severely censured for his action in the matter. Pharis refused to pay the fine and his friends furnished $500 bail pending an appeal to the County Court. Judge Wright has decided that Pharis must pay or go to jail.

Two From One Family.

That dire disease diphtheria has fastened its fangs upon the Parkhurst family that reside in the north eastern part of this village near the Ontario street school house, and has removed by death two children. Two girls in the family that were employed in the R. & O. factory were down with the disease at the time the members of the Stewart family were sick, but they recovered. Since then two younger daughters, Artemisia, aged eleven years and Evaline, aged nine years were taken sick. The former died Monday and the latter at five o'clock yesterday morning.

The double funeral occurred yesterday when the remains were laid at rest in the graveyard at Druces Corners in the town of Schrœppel. The remaining members of the family are now free from the disease and it is hoped that its ravages are now stopped.

Destroying Weeds.

All weeds should be kept in check. It can be done and will make the work much lighter than it will be if they are allowed to go to seed once or twice during the season. It is very mcuh easier to destroy young weeds than those that are well established and deeply rooted. Not only does the gardener injure his own land by allowing weeds to go to seed, but the wind is very sure to carry a good supply to his neighbor. There is in some states a law requiring that certain weeds be destroyed. It would doubtless be worth many thousands of dollars to farmers and gardeners all over the country if such a law could be applied and enforced everywhere.—Vick's Magazine.

The City of Amsterdam.

Amsterdam is the largest city in Holland. It is a city of canals, and yet travelers are not impressed so constantly that it is a water city as when in Venice. The town lies at the end of the Y, which is a gulf of the Zuyder Zee; and there are several great canals, shaped like segments of concentric circles, intersected by some 300 smaller canals; and yet there many streets and squares where one can drive about as freely as in any other city. Most of the houses are very tall and very narrow and stand with their gable ends to the street, presenting to strangers a very odd appearance.

One of the great industries of this Dutch town is the cutting and polishing of diamonds, and many of the finest gems in the world are brought here to be cut into shape. It was in this city that the celebrated Koh-i-noor was cut and polished.

Five Ways to Stop or Cure a Cold.

1. Bathe the feet in hot water and drink a pint of hot lemonade, then sponge with salt and remain in a warm room.
2. Bathe the face in hot water every five minutes for an hour.
3. Snuff up the nostrils hot soft water every three hours.
4. Inhale ammonia or menthol.
5. Take four hours' active exercise in the open air.

Summer colds are oftentimes the worst of all colds, as it is very difficult to protect one's self properly. A ten grain dose of quinine will usually break up a cold in the beginning. Anything that will set the blood actively in circulation will do it, whether it be drugs or the use of a bucksaw.—Medical News.

Profound Cause for Alarm.

Alarmed Pastor—"I tell you this Personal Liberty party is assuming immense proportions."

Incredulous Parishoner—"Oh, I don't think so."

Alarmed Pastor—"You have only to look at the statistics. Why, do you know that in Newark alone a single factory turned out last year 150,000,000 corkscrews!"

"Sakes alive! Is that true? I see that I've been misled. I'm ready now to make a determined stand against a foe so strong and insidious."—Philadelphia Call.

It is not men's faults that ruin them, so much as the manner in which they conduct themselves after the faults have been committed.

WORTH KNOWING.

Mr. W. H. Morgan, merchant, Lake City, Fla., was taken with a severe Cold attended with a distressing Cough and running into Consumption in its first stages. He tried many so-called popular cough remedies and steadily grew worse. Was reduced in flesh, had difficulty in breathing and was unable to sleep. Finally tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and found [illegible] relief, and after using about [illegible] found himself well [illegible]

[illegible] with the [illegible] ding coins of various denominations in the mouths of the dead. These coins fall into the hands of the coolies, who scrape the bones of the disinterred bodies, and then passed into general circulation. It is said that a $50 gold slug was found in the mouth of a Chinese body disinterred at a Chinese cemetery recently, while it is a frequent occurrence to find gold $5 and $10 pieces. Taking into consideration the foregoing facts, it is, indeed, an unsafe habit to put coin in one's mouth, especially when it is not known whether the Chinaman ever cleaned his ear or whether the deceased died of leprosy, small-pox or something else as bad. Some ladies have a habit of putting small change in their mouth while making change. To those who practice this habit this bit of information should be a warning.

W. C. Potter, of Waterford, N.Y., was confined to his house for more than a year from liver complaint, being unable to attend to business. His physicians gave him no relief. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry cured him.

How Boys Can Make Money

Russel Sage's advice: "By (1) getting a position, (2) keeping his mouth shut; (3) observing; (4) being faithful; (5) making his employer think that he would be lost in a fog without him, and (6) to be polite. That is a good way for a young man to begin, after he gets there. If he lives up to these rules he will not want a friend at court for any length of time—in fact, not at all."

Jay Gould's policy: "Keep out of bad company and go to work with a will. The boy who does this is bound to get on in the world."

Cyrus W. Field's scheme: "Punctuality, honesty and brevity," Mr. Field says, "are the watchwords of life."—Washington Post.

The Excitement Not Over.

The rush on the druggists still continues and daily scores of people call for a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs for the cure of Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. Kemp's Balsam, the standard family remedy, is sold on a guarantee and never fails to give entire satisfaction. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial size free.

Curiosities of Law.

Judge—"Stand up."

Prisoner—"I claim the right under the law to remain seated, y'r honor."

"How so?"

"The law says no man may be made to criminate himself, an' if I stand up I'll criminate myself."

"That point is well taken, and you may remain seated. You are accused of stealing a pair of breeches of this man, but I can find no evidence against you."

"None at all, y'r honor."

"You are discharged."

"Thank you, y'r honor."

"By the way, why were you unwilling to stand up?"

"If I stood up the man would see I had his breeches on, y'r honor."—Omaha World.

C. H. DAVID,
Pl'ffs' Att'y.

For the Canvass of 1888.

To Republicans and all Voters.

The American people are entering upon a period of political discussion and excitement. The democratic administrations in Washington and Albany are to be put on trial. The republican party asks for restoration to power in the State and the Nation.

Great Questions

are to be decided. Shall American industry be protected, and American wages maintained by the tariff? Shall farms and homes be relieved from some at least of the burdens of taxation? Shall the civil service be reformed and divorced from politics? Shall the liquor traffic be restricted and compelled to pay its share of taxes? Shall Union veterans be degraded or treated generously and honorably? On these and kindred questions the electors must pronounce. To that end, they need to keep informed about the arguments which are advanced, and the events which bear upon them.

THE UTICA HERALD

will try to present these fairly and fully, and will as a

Steadfast Republican,

labor to maintain and increase the republican majorities in all of Central New York, by efforts for the unity of the party and for clear, aggressive, decisive work.

The Seven Ages of Woman.

All the world's wardrobe,
And all the girls and women merely wearers.
They have their fashions and their fantasies,
And one she in her time wears many garments
Throughout her Seven Stages. First, the baby,
Befrilled and broidered, in her nurse's arms.
And then the trim-hosed school-girl, with her flounces
And small-boy scorning face, tripping, skirt-waggingly,
Coquettishly to school. And then the flirt,
Ogling like Circe, with a business milliade
Kept on her low-cut corset. Then a bride,
Full of strange finery, vestured like an angel,
Veiled vaporously, yet vigilant at glance.
Seeking the Woman's heaven, Admiration,
Even at the altar-steps. And then the matron,
In fair, rich velvet, with suave satin lined,
With eyes severe and skirts of youthful cut,
Full of dress-saws and modish instances,
To teach her girls their part. The sixth age shifts
Into the gray, yet gorgeous grandmamma,
With gold pince-nez on nose and fan at side.
Her youthful taste still strong, and worldly-wise
In sumptuary law, her quivering voice,
Prosing of Fashion and LeFollet, pipes
Of robes and bargains rare. Last scene of all,
That ends the sex's mode-swayed history,
In second childishness and sheer oblivion
Of youth, taste, passion, all, e'en love of dress.

THE NEWSBOY CHEVALIER.

The horse-car stopped at a crossing, and a newsboy jumped on the platform.

"Have a Times, Inquirer, Press?"

"I'll take a Times," said one of a group of school girls.

"Oh, Jenny," said another. "From such a little monster?"

An old gentleman who was reading glanced up from his pamphlet. The newsboy was a dwarf and a hunchback. His face, which was bent back on his shoulders, twitched suddenly at the girl's words, but he did not look toward her, as he stood waiting for his money. The old gentleman's grave look of rebuke angered the girl.

"It makes me sick," she said with a look of disgust. "The conductor ought not to allow him to come on board."

The boy turned and looked at her steadily. Everybody on the car expected a torrent of vile abuse, but he said gently:

"If the Beast were not here, the people would not appreciate the Beauty at her true value," and then, bowing to her, he went out, amid the smiles of all the passengers.

The old gentleman—who was a well-known physician, Dr. Avery—followed him, but he was already out of sight.

"Who is that boy?" he asked the conductor.

"His name's Will, and his route is on this street. I don't know any more."

"He has an educated voice, and he showed good breeding and good sense just now."

"No doubt. The other newsboys call him 'Gentleman Bill.' Everybody likes him. We conductors give him the freedom of the cars on this street.

A few days afterward Dr. Avery was on a car late in the evening, when Willy came in carrying a large bundle of papers. He sold none and turned to go out, looking discouraged and anxious.

Dr. Avery stopped him, drew out a paper, and handing him a piece of silver, said: "Never mind the change."

"No thank you," said the boy smiling as he gave it to him.

"Why not, young independence?"

"I don't need alms, sir. I really get on very well; and if I did—"

"You would not take it?"

"It would be the hardest thing I ever had to do. Good evening, sir!" and, touching his cap, the little hunchback swung himself off the car.

Dr. Avery after that often met the boy, who puzzled and interested him. There was nothing morbid in him; he was always ready with a laugh or a merry answer. His voice was controlled and gentle and there was a fine courtesy, a tact, a delicate feeling, in all his words that we do not find sometimes in those who call themselves gentlemen. In spite of the boy's wretched clothing and patched shoes, Dr. Avery found himself talking to him as his little friend. Late one night, when it was storming heavily, he met him trudging down Chestnut street.

"You have a hard life, my boy," he said kindly.

"Not so hard as you think, sir," he said cheerfully. "I am never sick an hour, then I do a better business than other boys because of—this," glancing down at his deformed body.

"Oh!"

The doctor was confused for a minute.

"Have you any plans, Willy? Do you ever look forward?"

"Yes! Oh, I have it all planned out! If I could save enough to start a street-stall of books and papers, then after a year or two I would be able to open a shop, and then a big store. Some men who began that way in Philadelphia have become publishers, and live in beautiful houses of their own."

"Hillo! Do you care for fine houses?"

"No, not for myself, sir."

He became suddenly silent, and at the corner of the next street said, "Good night!" and ran away. A moment later, Dr. Avery heard cries and shouts in the direction which Willy had taken; but such things are common in a great city. He hurried home. The next morning, looking over the paper, he read:

"A little hunchback newsboy, known as 'Gentleman Will,' was knocked down by a runaway horse last night. Dr. [illegible] pronounced the injuries mortal. The lad was taken to the Penn Hospital."

Dr. Avery was soon beside the cot on which the misshapen little body was [illegible]. Willy looked up, trying to smile. "It is not so bad as they say, is it? I [illegible] die now! I have too much to do."

"What have you to do, my boy? Let me be your friend; let me help you, if I [illegible]"

"I thought you would come, maybe. [illegible] anybody to come. The boys [illegible] friends, but they couldn't do [illegible] Tell me what [illegible] takes all I can make to pay her board and buy her clothes. I like to see her look nice." His mind began to wander, and he began to mutter at intervals:

"If I could start the stall—the shop—a carriage for Letty."

The doctor was forced to leave him. When he came back in the afternoon he was rational, and when the doctor wished to go for his sister, said:

"No, don't bring Letty here. She mustn't know how poor I am. When I go out to see her I have my good suit on. She calls me 'swell.' Yes, she does," laughing, but with tears in his eyes. "I went once with some papers to a Quaker boarding-school for girls near town, sir. They were such lovely young ladies, I always thought I'd send Letty there when I could get the money. But now—"

Dr. Avery found out his story by degrees. He and Letty were the children of a planter near Savannah. Their mother was in Philadelphia during the war. Her husband was killed, her slaves and property were gone. She struggled for years, teaching and sewing to support them, and at last, died, leaving Willy in charge of his elder sister.

"And your name?"

"My father was Charles Gilbert."

Dr. Avery drew his breath quickly. "I knew a Charles Gilbert in Savannah long ago. No wonder your voice seemed familiar, and that I was drawn to you so strongly. But you are my friend for your own sake, my boy."

That evening Dr. Avery sent a long dispatch to a lawyer in Savannah, where he had once lived and still had business interests. He took two of the principal surgeons in the city to examine Willy. When they had gone out for consultation the boy lay, holding his hand, watching the door, breathing quick and hard.

"Do you want to live, Willy? You have had a hard life, my child."

"Oh, no, no! I did not thing it hard! I have so much to do for Letty!"

"Had you never any plans for yourself?"

The boy turned his gray eyes thoughtfully on him. They filled with slow tears.

"I used to think—if I could be a scholar—a gentleman, like my father—but—"

"I do not want you to live, my boy," said his friend, trying to reconcile him to death, "God will take care of you. This poor body will not be against you any longer."

"It is not against me here!" said Willy vehemently. "It is not to me. Everybody knows that. If God will only give me the chance to do something the body wont stand in the way." He muttered after a while again, "It is not me."

Dr. Avery was called out to hear the verdict of the surgeons. When he came back Willy gave one look at him and sank back, covering his face.

"There is still one chance, my boy, though but a slight one. I think it is best to tell you the exact truth. Morning will decide. Would it comfort you to have Letty with you? I have brought her to town."

"Yes! yes! It doesn't matter, now that she knows I am a poor little newsboy."

Letty was a sturdy, red-cheeked little woman, whose every word showed a heart full of love and a head full of good sense. She petted and soothed Willy, while he clung to her, and then said, cheerily:

"Now, dear, you must go to sleep. You are not going to die. The doctors don't know how strong you are. The nurse says I may sit here and hold your hand, and in the morning give you your breakfast."

For days the boy lingered between life and death. One morning after the doctors had made their examination, his old friend came to him, and, taking his hand solemnly, said:

"Willy, God has given you the chance you asked for to do something in this world. You will live."

When he was able to be removed, Dr. Avery took the children to his home. He laid before Willy a statement of his fathers affairs that he had received from Savannah, which showed that enough could be rescued from the wreck of the estate to yield a small income for the children. It proved to be enough to educate Letty at the Quaker school to which Willy dreamed of sending her, and to give him a thorough training in college and the law school.

They both always "came home," as they had learned to call Dr. Avery's, in the vacations. When Willy came back at the end of his course, with the highest record of his class, he said to his old friend:

"All that I am or may be in life I owe to you."

"No, my boy, I should not have noticed you more than any other of the hundreds of newsdoys but for the honor, self control and good breeding that you showed. A true gentleman will be a gentleman in any and all circumstances in life. God helped you to keep yourself separate and above all the hard circumstances."

Willy's eyes grew dim. "If my friends and God can see the man inside of the 'little monster' I am satisfied," he said.

His dream in life does not seem unlikely to be realized. It is character that wins and tells.

The Dying Editor.

The owner of a paper lay dying in his lair, and the dews of death had gathered on his brow so calm and fair; but a printer knelt beside him as his life-blood ebbed away, and asked the dying writer if he had a word to say. The doomed man muttered softly, as he grabbed the printers fist: "Well, at last the struggle's over and I never will be missed. Take a message and a token to that city man of mine, that all his worn-out chestnuts he had better put in brine. There's his joke about the weather, which he's used these many years, and the gag about the fellow who is always hunting bears. And the item he's so fond of, of the man who peddles books, and the chestnut based on people who go fishing at the brooks; just to save the paper's credit and to cast no share on mine, I would ask him as a favor just to put such gags in brine. And the lies he's fond of telling, off the sreet cars and the tracks, and the joke about the man who steps upon some tacks, and the ones about some dandy who will never pay for clothes, and the one of women cleaning house—it's weary heaven knows! Oh, I know I'll slumber happy in my grave beneath the vine, if the man who does the city work will put these jokes in brine. Tell the man who tends to business not to weep when I am dead, but to buy himself a club and hit the first man on the head, who comes in with strings of items and requests them printed free, when the regular rates are cheaper than they really ought to be. Tell the foreman when he makes up not to turn a rule for me, but to simply print an item saying that my soul is free; for I want no eulogistic taffy of that kind in mine, and I think that such hoary chestnuts should be pickled well in brine. Have the gay and fresh reporter I engaged the other day put a stop to saying "Selah," also "We have come to stay;" and if he should say "ye local" you must trample in his gore for you know I'd ne'er allow it in the happy days of yore. And the man who comes to tell you how to run the paper well, should be greeted when he enters with a pewter chestnut bell; and you'll print the paper promptly, be the weather full of storms, and the foreman must be careful when he's making up the forms that the beauty of the paper may through all ages shine, and not be like its neighbors, only fit to put in brine.—Atchison Globe.

Wide Awake 1888.

We have a primer entitled "A Modern Wonder" which sets forth with singular fulness and brevity what is going to be in Wide Awake for a year ahead.

The primer is not very long. The little pages are easy to read. But, it holds such wealth of learning and entertainment, you wonder how so much can be got into a dozen months; and yet you read on the title page that the half is not told.

It is a wonder! Wide Awake is a veritable library, changing from month to month and from year to year, and always growing better apparently.

But what we can't understand is how they can put so much money into it and pay so much for getting subscribers.

The Holiday number contains the Premium List of 32 pages. They give a boy or girl who gets subscribers almost as much in his choice of two or three hundred things as the money he sends amounts to! And the things are such as people want: a good many of them new to most of us. Even the Premium List is good reading.

Where the profit comes out of $2.40 a year is what we can't make out; but that is none of our business.

Send for the primer to D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

WHEN A WOMAN becomes afflicted with a Kidney disease life is truly a burden. The female organization is so constituted as to be peculiarly susceptible to it; is easily controlled by it, and it rapidly develops and spreads until the whole fabric is affected and there is no time when she is free from pain. Refreshing sleep is unknown, the long weary hours of the night are followed by equally long hours of the day, and so the months and years pass, bringing as they roll away increased burdens.

Mrs. O. P. Brackett, wife of a town official of Hermon, Me., had severe case of kidney disease. In time she became so afflicted with continuous pains across the small of the back, weary, heavy, bearing down pains, heavy, dull feeling between the shoulders with occasional spells of "sick headache," as well as other troubles peculiar to this disease in women, so that she at times gave up in despair. She was confined to her house, deprived of all social intercourse with friends and neighbors, and was day and night a constant sufferer. One day she read an advertisement issued by us describing symptoms of kidney disease, and persuaded her husband to buy a bottle of Brown's Sarsaparilla which she used. She said it helped her and her husband, having no faith in patent medicines, laughed and told her she was no better, and that "faith" and "hope" had revived her temporarily. He bought the second and third however, and like the first, they helped her rapidly along the road to health. The remedy was continued until Mrs. Brackett was restored, and she has now been for over two years free from all symptoms of kidney disease. This case which was perhaps as serious a one as ever came to the notice of the medical fraternity of this section, attracted wide-spread attention at the time, and stamped beyond all dispute the fact that Brown's Sarsaparilla was a deadly foe to Kidney disease.

Parson's Directory of Fulton Oswego Falls and Phoenix.

We have this morning received the directory of this village, Oswego Falls and Phoenix, which has been carefully compiled by Samuel Parsons. It contains in addition to a classified directory of the three villages, the publisher's notes containing a list of the advertisers with a short description of their business, the village officers, the fire department, post office, banks, newspapers, express companies, telegraph and telephone companies railroads, schools, churches, societies and the officers of each, a street directory and a history of the villages. Last but by no means least are maps of the villages, that of Fulton drawn by B. J. Kimball. We congratulate Mr. Parsons on the fine appearance and accuracy of his work, and the village on possessing a directory that is far superior to anything of the kind that ever before was had in this village.

Parish has been charged for giving a large majority out of her votes for the Republican candidate for school commissioner, because it was expected if he was elected he was going to have his residence here. He was not going to have his residence here, if elected. The great reason for his getting such a large majority, is this: the Democratic candidate once taught school here, and was not a success. All we now ask of the friends of the successful candidate is to accept of our reason for the result in in this town, and not to make any more false assertions and misrepresentations.

(Special to The Times.)

So perturbed was that mighty man of valor—Anarchistic valor—over his helplessness in the face of the Chicago exhibition of well-deserved punishment that he, for the moment, forgot his wholesome fear of the police and broke out in something like the rant and bloodthirsty sentiments which characterize unrestrained Anarchism. Yes, Herr Most, Father Most, his compatriots call him, is once more under the tender and protecting care of New York justice. A thing which in the latter days is becoming to beget within the hearts of our criminal classes a decent sentiment of respect.

It was on the night of the executions in Chicago that Herr Most—I sought to give him all his titles, for one ought not to forget he edits and owns the "Arbeiter Zeitung" and is supposed to be the chief, the leader, the organizer of America's detachment of Anarchists—in a little, dirty, foul-smelling, beery den near Tompkins Square, on the east side, boiled over in his impotent rage and made remarks of such a nature that the District Attorney found reason to have him indicted under two courts, based upon sections of the Penal Code, providing for seditious language and attempts to break the peace of the community, and so Most, the cowardly, skulking vagabond, he is, finds himself in much the same position he occupied about eighteen months ago, when he made a speech in which he advised the purchase of rifles, a sample of which he held up to view. The repeated exposures of the doings of New York's section of the "Reds" has had a tendency to make them very careful of what they say in public. The sight of a person, having in his possession a note book, or of a person, any better dressed or any cleaner in personal habits in the different saloons of Tompkins Square vicinity has to them much the same office that a red flag has upon a bull. Most himself has a special fondness for three things which may be illiteratively expressed thus: Beer, Bombs, Blood.

They are a queer set. I learned the other day that they believed the maximum of a person's possession should not exceed the sum of $400. That any one who had an excess of this sum should divide. Do these people ever work? Well, it's hard to say. There's one thing they work to a perfection which with them has now become a most accomplished and refined art. They work the free lunch counters. I am free to confess that so far as my observation goes out of the two hundred or more professed Anarchists, there are not more than fifty who can really be said to earn an honest living.

The Arbeiter, the organ of Anarchism, the paper in which Most gives vent to his sentiments, to his ideas, of how to construct bombs, his methods of wholesale destruction has perhaps a circulation of five hundred copies. Most, on the day of his arrest was seated in his editorial sanctum. There is, no doubt, that he was really alarmed at his position. The possibility of spending a few months on Blackwell's Island, performing work was not was not especially cheering and he nearly tried to argue with the officers about the injustice of the arrest.

Well, let's sum up this matter. He will probably be convicted. He leaves his friends to their beer. They under the wholesome dread of the police do nothing. And so, perhaps, finding this city not a congenial soil for its growth, Anarchism will hie itself hence to more fruitful fields.

The site of the great Metropolitan Episcopal Cathedral has at last been decided upon. In as much as this will be, when finished, the greatest ecclesiastical structure on the American continent, it is proper to give it some notice. In fact, I think it is the only Episcopal cathedral in the country.

The site for the new church is a plot of ground about 780 feet square, facing upon Morningside Drive and overlooking Morningside Park. It is between 110th, 113th, streets, Tenth avenue and Morningside Drive. It has an elevation of something like 130 feet above tide water and is the highest piece of land south of 125th street. It is a most commanding position, rising as it does abruptly from Harlem plains. The view comprehends a radius of fifty miles. The structure when completed will be a prominent object to the traveler on the Hudson or East River, and it will be visible from Long Island Sound. No surrounding buildings can possibly mar the unity and beauty of its architecture, while the peculiar arrangement promised for the park in its part gives additional strength and support to the architectural effect. The plot of ground belonged to the Leake and Watts' orphanage, an asylum founded more than a half century ago by the private munificence of two gentlemen of this city. The price asked was a round million, but appraisers gave $850,000 as a more reasonable figure and the sum will be paid. The building plan comprises for the near future a chancel to cost one million. For the more remote times a complete set of properly arranged buildings whose total cost to verge upon five millions. It will be known as the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The prime beauty of the site, in fact, the chief attraction is that no matter what the growth of the city, the immediate surroundings will never be other than private residences. An ulterior and contingent benefit coming from the project is the increased usefulness which the sale of this property gives to the Leake and Watts asylum.

Winter decoration during the Christmas holidays has become a fine art. By window decoration, I mean the artistic, or otherwise, arrangement of the merchants store windows. In these days of pools, combines, trusts, etc., the trade specialist is becoming an exception. Dry goods stores keep all sorts of articles from a pin to a washboard, from a stove to a cloak and from a man's suit of clothes to a bride's trousseau. I have sometimes remarked that at any one of our large stores a newly married couple could fit in all things completely [illegible]

[illegible] The Christmas season requires special taste. There are two stores of the variety mentioned above which make a specialty of an attractive holiday window. One exhibits a panoramic scene from Revolutionary times; the other has an accurate representation of a theatre stage. Dolls to the number of 7,000 are arranged as audience, actors and ushers. The prevailing styles of dress at this time are accurately copied in the attire of these dolls. By unseen mechanism, the doll actors are made to go through their parts and the play is a representation of the English "Derby Day."

Like all other arts the window dresser is a genius in his way, and his compensation is in accordance with his ability.

Diphtheria.

Editor of The Fulton Times:

Sir:—In reading a paper read by H. L. Getz, M. D., at the meeting of the American Medical Association, June, 1887, and published in its journal; in which there are many points agreeing with my conclusions in regard to Diphtheria, which I had formed, from my experience in treating the disease, during the last thirty-five years. I have made a few extracts from the paper for the benefit of your readers.

C. G. Bacon.

SOME HINTS IN REGARD TO DIPHTHERIA.

"The early symptoms of the disease are so mild in form, in the majority of cases, that the real nature of the disease is readily overlooked by the parent and patient. The severity of the disease, is not and cannot be usually discovered by the constitutional disturbances found to exist during the first thirty-six hours."

"If a competent physcian is called and begins prompt treatment within twelve hours from the commencement of membrane formations, there should be no fatal results—If treatment is commenced eighteen or twenty hours after, the commencement of membrane fromation, you may expect an occasional death. If you begin treatment one or two days after the beginning of membrane formation, you may in spite of all you can do expect some fatal results. If there is any virtue in treatment of the disease by medicine, or otherwise, the importance of early care is readily understood.

Mean Men Marked.

As a rule, the meanest men in the world can be selected by a stranger, if he has had any experience in worldly affairs. The characteristic of mean men are frequently marked in their clothing, and there is generally a warning on the lappels of their coats. No man can wear one of e. a. cook & co's easy-fitting and stylishly-made suits from tucker, calder & co's. great clothing manufactroy, at utica, n. y., and be avoided by his fellows. [illegible] official family, having returned to duty, after a month's absence in endeavoring to recuperate his health, with rather indifferent success. There are many civil service reformers and Republicans who significantly smile very broadly, when they note it as a remarkable coincidence, that the Secretary's "illness" hurried him off to New York city during the most exciting days of the political campaign in that State. It is said that the principal subjects discussed at the late Cabinet meeting, were the forthcoming annual Presidential message to Congress, and the international negotiations now in progress over the fisheries controversy, with our neighbors of the North. This diplomatic duel between the representatives of the two greatest nations of the world, will probably continue several weeks, and may or may not be productive of important results. Whatever action is taken, will of course, be subject to the approval of Congress.

The opening of the Fiftieth Congress will be attended with a far greater number of changes than usual in the personnel of that body—fifteen new Senators and one hundred new Representatives having been elected. So many changes will certainly be influential for good or evil as regards the working capacity of the various Congressional committees, and a critical public will soon discover the real effect, for it will be apparent in the method of conducting the business of the session. From all I can learn, the present House officials are industriously bestirring themselves to make a combine against the "outs," and there is a fair prospect that the scheme will be successful. Yet there is no doubt that the "outs" are causing the "ins" considerable apprehension. Speaker Carlisle's re-election is conceded by all parties—it being certain that no Democrat will oppose him.

One of the latest political rumors is that the friends of Mr. Parks, Ex-Commissioner of the General Land Office, will seek to vindicate his official conduct by electing him to Congress. But Richard W. Townsend from the same district and of the same political party, is a great obstacle in his way, for he has been in Congress from Illinois nineteen years, and his constituents speak of keeping him in office until he dies, and then electing his executor to succeed him.

The Civil Service Commission has discovered that it has been badly imposed upon by a number of District of Columbia people, securing Departmental clerkships by falsely claiming citizenship from States whose official quotas are not exhausted, and, in consequence, not only will the offending persons be dismissed from the public service, but measures have been adopted by the Commission to prevent a further reoccurrance of this custom, borrowed from the spoils politicians—with many instances of which your correspondent is familiar.

Those who are informed of the working of the departments very well understand the significance of the many resignations of the young lady clerks, as it generally means their marriage—it being one of the unwritten laws of the Federal Government not to retain a man and wife or a married woman in the service. But recently Secretary Fairchild and Postmaster General Vilas have given their consent to the marriage of fellow clerks, with the understanding that they are to retain their places. So, if this new departure holds good, it will very probably result in a violent epidemic of matrimony in all the departments. It has long been reported that Secretary Bayard is amoured of one of his clerks, and should he wed her three great departments would be committed to the new custom. It is claimed that the rule of the Government in dropping from the Pension rolls the widows of soldiers when they marry, is a fruitful source of immorality, and that in this particular, at least, "reform is necessary."

The newspaper correspondents have so nearly succeeded in estringing Messrs. Carlisle and Randall, by circulating highly colored reports of what each of these gentlemen say and thinks of the other, the former stateman is now positively declining to submit to interviews with the reporters. I hear the report usually circulated before the meeting of Congress, but never verified—nor is it likely to bo now—that Mr. Randall is to be deposed from the chairmanship of the Appropriation Committee as a means of disciplining him on the tariff question.

The readers of the Times will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system thereby distroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength, by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The Proprieters have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars, for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Old Gent—Yes, James I would if I were you and the sooner the better for they are going off like Hot Cakes.

-CONSOLATION-

As the cold winter has fairly set in, making every one hustle, it is a consolation to know that there is no need of any one suffering with the cold while H. & A. Rosenbloom are selling Dry Goods and Clothing at such very low rates. They are handling such vast quanities of goods that they reconize no competition. It has been proved that their prices are lower than any competing house in Fulton or neighboring cities.

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

Utica, N. Y. Nov. 28.

Late ends of cheese are not selling very high, altho' considering that most of the stock is skimmed, and some of it every-other-day's make, it must be acknowledged that it probably brings all it is worth. Some of the stock at 10c. even was full cream make. That at 10½c. was all either full cream or small sized cheese. The attendance at the board was small, quite a number of salesmen preferring to hold over until next week, the last day of the season, and dispose of their entire make at one time. The greater share of the cheese to-day was taken for the home trade, which was quite active at these prices. Following are the sales:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
2	105	9½
24	1,468	10c.
12	707	10¼
7	461	10⅛
45	2,741
	1,039	Com
Total	3,780

Ruling price, 10c. Transactions one year ago 2,636 boxes; ruling price, 10½c. Two years ago 2,783, ruling 8c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

Little Falls, Nov. 28.

Cheese.—The market to-day has been quite stupid and trade slow. The wide range in quality of stock is doubtless in part the cause. The bulk of the offerings were what is known as every-other day stock, and most such readily sold at 10c., and we think none of this class exceeded this price. Quite all of the sales at 10½c. were generally mixed lots of every-other-day and every day cheese. The lots at 11c. were full cream stock. The transactions amount to considerable more than those of last week. A few factories have sold out their entire make, and in a couple of weeks about all will have done so. Following are the sales of the day:

Lots	Boxes	Price
10	466	9½
24	1,598	10c.
9	871	10½
6	362	10¾
5	262	11c.
54	3,562
Farm dairy	215
	3,777

Farm Dairies—Sales of 215 boxes farm cheese were made at 9 to 11c; The bulk going at 10c.

Butter—Forty-six packages of farm butter sold at 18 to 21c., the most at 28c.

AT FULTON.

Only four factories were represented at this market Monday night, the rest having sold up their stock. No cheeses were sold. We understand that the cheese from these factories were shipped to-day on commission.

TO PRESERVE THE SOFTNESS OF FLANNEL GARMENTS, FOLLOW CAREFULLY THESE DIRECTIONS FOR WASHING.

Dissolve thoroughly in boiling water some IVORY SOAP, shaved fine Add sufficient warm water to wash the flannels in one by one.

Don't rub any soap on the flannels, but knead them well in the solution.

Don't rinse them in plain water, use a fresh supply of the solution, warm, and well blued, for the purpose.

Don't wring tightly with the hands, use a clothes-wringer. The freer from water you get these garments the softer they will be.

Hang them out immediately, if the weather will permit; if not, dry before the fire. If left to stand wet, the flannel will certainly shrink.

Never wash flannel in water too hot to bear your hand in.

Never rinse them in cold water.

Always use IVORY SOAP, it is the best, much experience has proved this.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

Oswego Falls is without fire protection of any kind. This works well so long as the cry of "Fire" is never heard. But suppose the town burns to ashes for lack of water, what then? A Few Points Concerning the Test Gas Well.

There cannot but be considerable interest to people in this locality, concerning the test well that is being sunk by the Fulton Oil, Gas, and Mineral Co.

Very few in this vicinity have any idea of the depth at which gas is found, or the strata of stone from whence gas is obtained in large quantities. A representative of THE TIMES examined into this subject somewhat, from books in the possession of Messrs. Lewis and Case and found the following fact to prevail universally in all the successful gas wells of Ohio and Indiana, that they passed through two kinds of stone and into a third, before gas was found in any quantities, namely: the Medina sandstone, the Hudson River Gray sandstone, and the Trenton sandstone. These all have sub-divisions with local appellations, but each of the three classes is distinct. The celebrated well No. 1 of Findlay, O., gave forth gas in quantities about equal to that here, four times before the Trenton sandstone or gas bearing rock was reached. At the test well here, veins of gas have been struck five times, at a depth of 42 feet, 80 feet, 325 feet, 510 feet, and 585 feet. The last vein which was struck last Wednesday, when lighted, blazed up fifteen feet above the derrick floor, and after the accumulated gas had been reduced, it burned with a steady flame four feet above the floor with a flame as large as a stove pipe, until put out. All of this is considered most encouraging as an indication that when the Trenton sandstone is reached, gas will be found in paying quantities.

Prof. Charles S. Prosser, of the Geological Labratory, Cornell University, has sent to the parties interested samples of the different kinds of stone passed through in Indiana and Ohio wells, as well as those in Wolcott and Clyde in this state. They correspond very closely with that obtained here. By comparing with these wells it is estimated that the Trenton sandstone will be reached at a depth of 1,430 feet when it will be known whether the well is a success or not. The Medina sandstone was penetrated to a depth of 400 feet, when the Hudson River Gray sandstone was reached, and is now being passed through, the well yesterday, having reached a depth of 685 feet.

Successful Quince Raising.

Many years' experience in quince growing leads me to the conclusion that with good culture and judicious pruning the quince becomes one of the most profitable of fruits. All will agree with me, I think, that no fruit has been so highly praised and so generally neglected. The quince bush is to be found in one corner of the farmer's garden crowded under the fence, or overgrown with weeds and grass, struggling for existence and furnishing rough and knotty fruit for the family. Give this bush a chance and you will have an abundance of choice fruit. The Orange quince gives best satisfaction. It should not have deep cultivation as the fine fibrous roots run so near the surface of the ground that they would be torn up. It requires mulching with coarse manure to protect it from heat as well as from cold. Select deep rich soil, not too wet. Start branches near the ground. Cut back half of this year's growth in September or October.

For the Canvass of 1888.

To Republicans and all Voters.

The American people are entering upon a period of political discussion and excitement. The democratic administrations in Washington and Albany are to be put on trial. The republican party asks for restoration to power in the State and the Nation.

Great Questions

are to be decided. Shall American industry be protected, and American wages maintained by the tariff? Shall farms and homes be relieved from some at least of the burdens of taxation? Shall the civil service be reformed and divorced from politics? Shall the liquor traffic be restricted and compelled to pay its share of taxes? Shall Union veterans be degraded or treated generously and honorably? On these and kindred questions the electors must pronounce. To that end, they need to keep informed about the arguments which are advanced, and the events which bear upon them.

THE UTICA HERALD

will try to present these fairly and fully, and will as a

December.

BY FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN.

December's come, and with her brought
A world in whitest marble wrought;
The trees and fence and all the posts
Stand motionless and white as ghosts,
And all the points we used to know
Are hidden in the drifts of snow.
December brings the longest night
And cheats the day of half its light.
No bird song breaks the perfect hush;
No meadow brook with liquid gush
Runs telling tales in babbling rhyme
Of liberty and summer time,
But frozen in its icy cell
Awaits the sun to break the spell.
Breathe once upon the window glass
And see the mimic mists that pass—
Fantastic shapes that go and come
Forever silvery and dumb.

December Santa Claus shall bring—
Of happy children happy king,
Who with his sleigh and reindeer stops
At all good people's chimney-tops.

Then let the holly red be hung,
And sweetest carrols all be sung,
While we with joy remember them—
The journeyers to Bethlehem,
Who followed trusting from afar
The guidance of that happy star
Which marked the spot where Christ was born
Long years ago one Christmas morn.

Important.

Believing that everyone should be a subscriber to a local paper and to one metropolitan paper either for the general news of the day or, if the subscriber be a farmer, for the best agricultural paper that the country possesses, we have made arrangements with the publishers of the two greatest weekly papers in this country, in their respective fields, to furnish the same to our subscribers. Therefore for a limited time we propose to make the following offers, reserving the right to withdraw them at any time:

1. We will send THE TIMES and the N. Y. Weekly World, for one year, with your choice of the three great World Premiums, History of the United States, History of England or Everydody's Guide, for $2.00

2. We will send THE TIMES and the Rural New Yorker, the best illustrated weekly agricultural paper in this or any other country, for $2.50. The following two conditions must be observed:

1. The price named must inveriably accompany each order.

2. Old subscribers to THE TIMES must first pay to date before taking advantage of either offer. Call at this office or send cash with order to THE TIMES,

Soft muffs are in great vogue.

A trained princesse dress of velvet constitutes an elegant toilet.

Garnets of choice color are fashionable: sapphires and rubies are the rage.

Black silk gowns are combinations of faille francaise with black watered silk.

Plush balmorals warmly lined, are shown of plain dark colors or in stripes of two colors.

Glove-fitting sealskin jackets, medium short, will be popular this winter with stylish young ladies.

Velvet-edged ribbons are among the novelties; gilt-edged ribbons are also very stylish.

Short cloaks of cloth have wide fichu collars of plush that cover the shoulders and are pointed in front.

For those whose figure will allow it, very full, straight skirts of the richest black silks are in the highest style.

Entire bonnets are made of tiny loops of black and red moire ribbon or copper-colored ribbon, with gray intermingled.

Convenient large pockets are placed on the outside of heavy cloth Newmarkets, and a small one high in the left side of the breast.

Fancy belt clasps, with dog-collar ornaments to match, are added to dressy toilets of silk or satin, and also to handsome tailor-made cloth suits.

A novelty is the chenille feather, composed of chenille and beads, and so good a rival to the real plume that milliners are employing it on their best class of bonnets.

Black hats and black wraps are worn with dresses of every color, and black moire ribbon is the fashionable trimming upon both black and colored velvet bonnets and hats.

Young ladies wear toques of the same material with their cloth gowns. These fit the head like a skull-cap, are in melon shape at the top and have but little trimming.

On Everlasting Punishment.

An Outline of a Discourse Recently Delivered by Prof. Whitcomb, in Fulton.

Text, Matt. XXV :46 "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the rightous into life eternal."

This passage of scripture is generally thought to prove beyond the possibility of a doubt, the doctrine of endless punishment.

By many it is conscientiously believed and earnestly taught, that "the wicked who know not God, and obey not the gospel of Jesus Christ shall be cast into eternal torments and be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." As to the nature of this punishment they hold that the wicked will suffer "most grevious torments, in soul and body, without intermission, in hell-fire forever." Some believe in endless punishment and reject the notion of torment by literal fire, but speak of everlasting "banishment" from God; they are to go to the society of the Devil, and other friends and all blasphemous and incurably wicked souls.

Friends are to be forever separated from friends, wives from husbands, parents from children. This appalling state of things is supposed to be necessary to manifest the "justice" of God, and men have often exorted to rejoice in it for that reason. But how or where can anybody be banished from God, who surrounds and fills the universe with his own life? The prophet said, "whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend into heaven thou art there; if I make my bed in sheol thou art there" etc.

Formerly, in some churches ministers and others were not thought to be thorough christians unless "willing to be damned for the glory of God."

If this serious and awful doctrine is right, it ought to be supported by reason and scripture. But as soon as we turn to reason and scripture we encounter difficulties. They are as numerous as the warriors who, under the command of Rhoderick Dhu, surrounded Fitz James.

In consequence of limited space we can only mention a few of them here.

I. Endless punishment can benefit no one; neither angels, our fellow mortals, nor God, can be made happier or better by it.

II. Human beings were created in the "image of God" that is with certain indistructable elements of goodness in them, for God had only himself to make souls of, and he was absolutely pure and imperishable. Now, to send man to never-ending hell would be to damn the good in him as surely as the bad.

III. God could not punish forever without being unjust to his creatures. Penalty must be proportioned to crime, and it is clearly impossible in this short life to do evil enough to pull down upon one's self the Almighty hatred and wrath forever.

Man being finite is incapable of committing infinite transgression, and therefore cannot deserve infinite or endless punishment.

IV. The doctrine of ceaseless punishment involves the idea that God will be unjust to himself. For if such retribution is thought to be necessary to satisfy divine justice, then as endless punishment will never be completed, divine justice can never be satisfied. Besides, God has a right to the obedience of every soul, and everlasting damnation would put it out of the power of millions of beings to obey him. Has God no personal rights which he is bound to respect? Can God destroy his own right? But, it is often said, men are "free moral agents"—they can always sin, and many will, and will therefore always be punished. Is not this attempting a defence of the human will at the expence and kindness of the will of God? Where does the bible say that any soul will always sin? Nowhere.

Where do the scriptures say that God can make a human will so free as to successfully defy and triumph over the will of God, that is, to be stronger in evil, than the Almighty is in good moral influence?

If God creates anyone, it must be for a good purpose. If he gives man the power of willing, it must be for a good end. But is unending resistance to God a good end? Is it not morally and religiously impossible for a holy and loving God to will to have mankind forever resisting his own will?

Look at the terms "agent"—"free moral agent." They show freedom within limits, i. e., within the influence of God.

V. The doctrine of never-ending woe springs from, and is nourished by selfishness. Believers in it never expect to go to Hell, nor have their families go there.

VI. The moral effect of the teaching that punishment is everlasting is deplorable. It gives God a bad name. Thoughtful people will not believe that the Deity is trustworthy, if, after calling himself "Love" and our "Father," he will take satisfaction in the everlasting misery of the children he has made.

No human creature was consulted about being born with an imperfect nature and placed in a world of numerous temptations, with a prospect of heaven for obedience, and the never ending fury of God for transgression.

Suppose we had been. Is there one of us who would have had the hardihood to be created?

Consider too, the frightful condition of the heathen.

The A. B. C. F. M. says, "within the last thirty years, five hundred millions of Pagans have gone down to eternal death."

How many then in the thousands of years since Adam?

The heathen die at the rate of 25 to 30 millions a year, and are all these people to be forever damned and tortured for God's "good pleasure," (for not doing what they never knew they ought to do?

VII. [illegible] ing the Inquisition etc., have fattened upon this doctrine of ceaseless retribution.

VIII. Where it has been strenuously taught, moral recklessness has abounded. Some persons ask if God has not appointed his son Jesus Christ to bear the penalty for sin, so that by believing in him we may escape perpetual woe? Study of the bible shows that it would be unjust to punish Jesus for the sins of anybody else, much more for the sins of the whole world because Christ was innocent.

How would it answer in a family to let disobedient Charles, Mary, and William go, and punish the only obedient son or daughter instead?

Besides, if, as many suppose, Christ is God, it would seem a strange performance for a holy God to be punished for the sins of his creatures.

How would it do for an upright parent on earth to say, my children are transgressors; I will therefore chastize myself, and consider them punished?

IX. The notion of everlasting retribution contradicts the general spirit and tenor of the bible.

"Ye have heard—love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy, but I say unto you, love your enemies, do good to them which hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, etc., that ye may be the children of your Father in heaven for" etc. But it is thought that as in the text it reads "eternal life" and everlasting punishment," it must mean as much in one case as in the other." Granted. But what does it mean in the one case? In the revised version of the N. T., the word "everlasting" is not found. The expressions are "eternal punishment," eternal life."

This word "eternal" is used for a word in the original Greek, (from which this account is taken), which is pronounced "Aionain," derived from "Aeon," signifying an age.

Aionian is the adjective, signifying age-lasting, or pertaining to an age. Hence in the text some were described as going into the punishment, and others into the bliss of an age or dispensation.

X. Whence then was the notion of endless punishment derived? From heathen. Where did they get it? Invented it. Cicero, in an oration says, "It was on this account that the ancients invented their infernal punishments of the dead to keep the wicked in some awe in this life."

XI. The doctrine is not found in the old testament; the Jews everywhere reject it.

XII. The sentiment of the christain church until the fifth century was overwhelmingly against it.

What then is the truth about punishment? 1. Every sinner deserves chastisement. 2. He will get just what he deserves, either in this life or the next, or both if need be. 3. He will be chastized exactly in proportion to his wickedness. "The way of the transgreasor is hard. Prov. 13:15. Observe the career of a profligate man or dissolute woman. "The Lord God will by no means clear the guilty." Ex. 34:6,7. "He that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong he hath done, and there is no respect of persons." Col. 3:25. "Though hand join in hand the wicked shall not go unpunished. Prov. 11:21. See also Rom. 2:6,8,9. God will render to every man according to his deeds," etc. Job. 24:22,26. "There is no darkness nor shadow of death where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves," etc. I. Cor. 6:10. We must all appear before the judgement seat of Christ that every one may receive," etc. Heb. 10:28 to 31, "He that despised Moses' law, died, etc, of how much sorer punishment shall he be thought worthy who" etc.

What then becomes of forgiveness?

The answer is, God forgives sin, not penalty for sin.

What is the object of punishment? What is a child chastised in a household for? Because his parent hates him and means to hate and afflict him always? No, but because the parent loves him and wants to make the child better. When he repents, and says "I am sorry, I won't do so again," you can't strike him another blow, you hold him to your heart. So God, as our "Heavenly Father," chastises in love and mercy in order to reclaim his children, and when reclaimed punishment ceases, because the end for which it is designed has been secured. See Heb. 12:9,10. Furthermore, we had fathers," etc. Isaiah 45:8. In a little wrath I hid my face—but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy" etc. Isaiah 40:2, "Speak ye comfortably," etc. Heb. 12:11. "No chastisement for the present seemeth," etc.

What are the moral effects of this doctrine of punishment?

Some say, if we believed as you do we should steal, lie, swear, and commit any crime. It may be that the fear of hell is all that keeps some people out of the penitentiary. But their idea is absurd.

Believers in limited punishment have no monopoly of crime; penal institutions show extremely few inmates of that sort the world over. The man who is anxious not to escape everlasting hell, but to escape wrong doing, and who believes that he will be punished for every sin, big or little, in order to purify and reform him, and until he reforms is not very likely to run into all sorts of transgressions.

Some talk of believing in endless misery in order to be on the "safe side".

To believe in what is unreasonable, what is opposed to human and divine justice, gives God a bad name, contradicts the scriptures, represents the efforts of Jesus to save the world as in the case of many souls a dead failure, is certainly not to be on the safe side.

The only safe course is that of believing in truth, justice, the mercy of God in inflicting reformatory penalty, and the absolute and complete succes of Jesus in saving all mankind from the dominion of sin.

Universalists therefore claim confidently [illegible] punishment, the most thorough and consistent and wholesome, the world has ever seen. Their great distinctive ruling doctrine is not that of temporary punishment. Their opposition to the notion of eternal misery grows out of their unspeakably grand and precious doctrine, that every human being that ever was or will be created, will, by the grace of a loving Heavenly Father, be made at last perfectly holy, and consequently happy, and will remain so forever.

You hardly realize that it is medicine, when taking Carter's Little Liver Pills, they are very small; no bad effects; all troubles from torpid liver are relieved by their use.

Board of Trustees' Proceedings

SPECIAL MEETING.

FULTON, Nov. 18, 1887.

Board met pursuant to call of the President.

Present—President Waugh and Trustees More, Osborn, Kendrick Rice, and Nichols.

President stated that meeting had been called at the request of D. W. Gardner who stated that at the time he asked to have the nuisance abated on Second and Oneida street it was urged that it would be dangerous to public health to do anything in the premises at that time, that cold weather having arrived he now renews his request.

The members of the Board of health were present as was also the Health Officer.

The Health Officer stated that he had notified all the parties on Second and Oneida street connected with the sewer, to put their cellars in a healthy condition and provide proper drainage for the same. And that he had disconnected the closets of the Johnson House from the sewer and would not again connect the same.

Trustee Rice moved that the plan of sewerage heretofore adopted by the Board of Trustees, for this Village be so modified and changed by the addition of a sewer from the Second street main at the corner of Oneida street to the well at the Oswego Canal.

On motion the ayes and nays were taken all the trustees present voting aye. The President declared the motion carried.

Trustee Rice moved that a sewer be built from corner of Cayuga and Second streets, thence along Oneida street to the well at the Oswego Canal according to the plans and specifications heretofore adopted by the Board of Trustees the expense to be assessed on the property benefited according to Chapter 159 of the laws of 1886. On motion the ayes and nays were taken. All the Trustees present voting aye. The President declared the motion carried.

On motion of Trustee Rice the matter of building the proposed sewer, hiring a Superintendant and men to do the work was referred to the street committee (the President added), with power to act.

On motion Board adjourned.

The Greatness of Natural Gas.

"Few people outside of the natural gas region," said a large owner of gas wells in Washington county, Penn., "have any idea what enormous proportions the gas business has grown to. It may be said to be only about two years old in western Pennsylvania, and more than 200,000 acres of land in Washington and adjoining counties have been drilled with gas wells. Nearly 150,000 tons of iron have been used in manufacturing the pipes through which the 500,000 cubic feet of gas that flows from the region daily are conveyed to the place using it. Over $25,000,000 is invested in the business by the fourteen organized companies that produce the bulk of the gas. The land and wells represent an outlay of $17,000,000. The wells now producing are capable of doubling the quantity now demanded for light and heat. Nearly 2,000 miles of mains are required for conducting the supply to consumers. It is estimated that the use of natural gas has displaced 25,000 tons of coal daily in western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio alone. Besides the wells controlled by the great gas producing companies, individual owners have wells for the supply of the smaller towns, and every village and hamlet in the region has enough natural gas running to waste every day to abundantly supply the same number of towns of 10,000 inhabitants each with light and fuel."

Mrs. Chas. Smith, of Jimes, Ohio, writes: I have used every remedy for Sick Headache I could hear of for the past fifteen years, but Carter's Little Liver Pills did me more good than all the rest.

A Popular Magazine.

Our Little Ones and the Nursery, for December, gives its usual quota of good things, and something more in happy glimpses of holidays to which the little people are looking forward with great expectations. These stories and pictures will go straight to the juvenile heart, and set young ears listening for the first tinkle of bells denoting the approach of beloved Santa Claus. This beautiful monthly has its corps of special writers and artists; and all it contains is freshly gotten up with care to please and cultivate the class for whom it is designed.

ST. NICHOLAS

For Young Folks.

SINCE its first issue, in 1873, this magazine has maintained, with undisputed recognition, the position it took at the beginning,—that of being the most excellent juvenile periodical ever printed. The best known names in literature were on its list of contributors from the start,—Bryant, Longfellow, Thomas Hughes, George MacDonald, Bret Harte, Bayard Taylor, Frances Hodgson Burnett, James T. Fields, John G. Whittier; indeed the list is so long that it would be easier to tell the few authors of note who have not contributed to "the world's child magazine."

The Editor, Mary Mapes Dodge,

author of "Hans Brinker; or, the Silver Skates," and other popular books for young folks,—and for grown-up folks,—too, has a remarkable faculty for knowing and entertaining children. Under her skillful leadership, ST. NICHOLAS brings to thousands of homes on both sides of the water knowledge and delight.

St. Nicholas in England.

It is not alone in America that ST. NICHOLAS has made its great success. The London Times says: "It is above anything we produce in the same line." The Scotsman says: "There is no magazine that can successfully compete with it."

The Coming Year of St. Nicholas.

The fifteenth year begins with the number for November, 1887, and the publishers can announce: Serial and Short Stories by Mrs. Francis Hodgson Burnett, Frank R. Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, Joel Chandler Harris, J. T. Trowbridge, Col. Richard M. Johnston, Louisa M. Alcott, Professor Alfred Church, William H. Rideing, Washington Gladden, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Amelia E. Barr, Francis Courtenay Baylor, Harriet Upton, and many others. Edmund Alton will write a series of papers on the "Routine of the Republic,"—how the President works at the White House, and how the affairs of the Treasury, the State and War Departments, etc., are conducted; Joseph O'Brien a well known Australian journalist, will describe "The Great Island Continent"; Elizabeth Robbins Pennell will tell of "London Christmas Pantomimes" (Alice in Wonderland, etc.); John Burroughs will write "Meadow and Woodland Talks with Young Folk," etc., etc. Mrs Burnett's short serial will be, the editor says, a worthy successor to her famous "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which appeared in ST. NICHOLAS.

Why not try St. Nicholas this year for the young people in the house? Begin with the November number. Send us $3.00, or subscribe through booksellers and newsdealers. The Century Co., 33 East 17th St. New-York.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

WITH the November, 1887, issue THE CENTURY commences its thirty-fifth volume with a regular circulation of almost 250,000. The War Papers and the Life of Lincoln increased its monthly edition by 100,000. The latter history having recounted the events of Lincoln's early years, and given the necessary survey of the political condition of the country, reaches a new period, with which his Secretaries were most intimately acquainted. Under the caption

Lincoln in the War,

the writers now enter on the more important part of their narrative, viz.: the early years of the War and President Lincoln's part therein.

Supplementary War Papers,

following the "battle series" by distinguished generals, will describe interesting features of army life, tunneling from Libby Prison, narratives of personal adventure, etc. General Sherman will write on "The Grand Strategy of the War."

Kennan on Siberia.

Except the Life of Lincoln and the War Articles, no more important series has ever been undertaken by the Century than this of Mr. Kennan's. With the previous preparation of four years' travel and study in Russia and Siberia, the author undertook a journey of 15,000 miles for the special investigation here required. An introduction from the Russian Minister of the Interior admitted him to the principal mines and prisons, where he became acquainted with some three hundred State exiles,—Liberals, Nihilists, and others,—and the series will be a startling as well as accurate revelation of the exile system. The many illustrations by the artist and photographer, Mr. George A. Frost, who accompanied the author, will add greatly to the value of the articles.

A Novel by Eggleston

with illustrations will run through the year. Shorter novels will follow by Cable and Stockton. Shorter fictions will appear every month.

Miscellaneous Features

will comprise several illustrated articles on Ireland, by Charles De Kay; papers touching the field of the Sunday School Lessons, illustrated by E. L. Wilson; Wild Western Life, by Theodore Roosevelt; the English Cathedrals, by Mrs. Van Rensselaer, with illustrations by Pennell; Dr. Buckley's valuable papers on Dreams, Spiritualism, and Clairvoyance; essays in criticism, art, travel and biography; poems; cartoons; etc.

WHEN A WOMAN

becomes afflicted with a Kidney disease life is truly a burden. The female organization is so constituted as to be peculiarly susceptible to it; is easily controlled by it, and it rapidly develops and spreads until the whole fabric is affected and there is no time when she is free from pain. Refreshing sleep is unknown, the long weary hours of the night are followed by equally long hours of the day, and so the months and years pass, bringing as they roll away increased burdens.

Mrs. C. P. Bracket, wife of a town official of Hermon, Me., had severe case of kidney disease. In time she became so afflicted with continuous pains across the small of the back, weary, heavy, bearing down pains, heavy, dull feeling between the shoulders with occasional spells of "sick headache," as well as other troubles peculiar to this disease in women, so that she at times gave up in dispair. She was confined to her house, deprived of all social intercourse with friends and neighbors, and was day and night a constant sufferer. One day she read an advertisement issued by us describing symptoms of kidney disease, and persuaded her husband to buy a bottle of Brown's Sarsaparilla which she used. She said it helped her and her husband, having no faith in patent medicines, laughed and told her she was no better, and that "faith" and "hope" had revived her temporarily. He bought the second and third however, and like the first, they helped her rapidly along the road to health. The remedy was continued until Mrs. Brackett was restored, and she has now been for over two years free from all symptoms of kidney disease. This case which was perhaps as serious a one as ever came to the notice of the medical fraternity of this section, attracted wide-spread attention at the time, and stamped beyond all dispute the fact that Brown's Sarsaparilla was a deadly foe to Kidney disease.

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office for moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

I can't help telling the Truth as I view it and describing what I see. To describe it otherwise than it seems to me would be falsehood in that calling in which it has pleased Heaven to place me.

THE attention of our readers is directed to the advertisement of Munn & Co., patent solicitors, in another column. Their name is familiar to patentees throughout the country. In connection with the publication of the Scientific American for the past forty years, they have made the drawings and specifications for more than one hundred thousand inventions, and their facilities for obtaining patents were never better than now.

An exchange hits the nail on the head thusly: "Don't say the paper is dull when it don't contain an item that you expected to see in it, which no one knew about but you. Remember that it is impossible for an editor to be in every place in a minute, or know everything that is going on. If you know an item that will be of interest to the public, report it. Probably you are the only one who knows anything about it and you must not blame the paper if you do not inform the publisher of the fact."

Palermo.

(Special Correspondence to THE TIMES).

Invitations are out for the wedding of Earl Hills and Carrie Clapp which is to take place on Wednesday Dec. 7th, at the residence of the bride's father, W. D. Clapp.

Rev. Mr. Youngs of Oswego was present at the church at Palermo Center on Sunday last and delivered a sermon which was very appropriate to the people of this vicinity. He is to preach again in two weeks.

At the wedding of Rev. A. E. Wilson and Mrs. C. M. Ball about seventy-five were present and a large number of fine presents were given. Rev. Mr. Fisk and Rev. Mr. Denny of Gilberts Mills were present and tied the knot.

The hotel and steam mill of Palermo Centre property of W. H. Hannon was sold on the first of this month at Phoenix and was bid off by Milton Butts but who is to be our landlord remains a conundrum still.

C. J. Butcher, wife and daughter have gone to visit friends and relatives in Oneida and Herkimer counties. They will remain until after the holidays.

The Palermo Centre cheese and butter factory have sold the balance of their cheese and are to deliver it this week.

John Edick, a resident of Palermo and Volney for many years, died at the County House at Mexico on Wednesday last.

Mrs. O. P. Jennings is on a visit to her son at Cortland, he being on the sick list.

Dont forget the little ones; but buy them a drum, sled, doll, rocking horses, pianos, or some of the million of things to make them happy found at our two stores in the opera house block Fulton.

A Serious Question.

Funny things occur in business. A clothing merchant writing to tucker, caulder & co., the well-known manufacturers, of utica, n. y., said: "I have a serious question to propound. Your clothing wears so well that I fear when I supply all my customers I will have to go West, for they will not want any more for years. What shall I do? The reply was: "Keep on selling, and trust in our clothing and Providence. Neither will go back on you." This is the class of goods sold by e. a. cook & co., opposite clark house, first street.

They make nice presents, a picture frame, a picture or an oil painting, and the cost of them is so small at the great 25c. Stores, opera house block.

The High Arm Singer machine is having a great sale everywhere. The reasons are: It runs easy, is noiseless, does all kinds of work in the best manner and the price is very low.

[illegible] they sell at [illegible] the Catholic Fair. Why are so many ladies at home every evening so early? They are making fancy work for the Fair! Where are all the boys going with packages, great and small, with lamps and mirrors and dry goods, etc., etc.? They are going to the Fair with presents. What is the express wagon doing at the Catholic parsonage? Bringing donations from out-of-town. What are the editors doing? Getting ready to print extra copies during the Fair. What are the Temperance Societies doing? Buying a gold watch to be contested for by Jas. Waite of Oswego and the popular postmaster of Oswego Falls, John R. Sullivan Esq. Why does Dr. De Marsan Spencer appear so very busy just at present? Because he is preparing operettas etc., for the Fair. Why do the Misses Lappin and Branagan remain at the tables until the dying lamp and solemn clock announce the midnight hour? Because they can hadly keep an account of all the votes cast in their favor for the seal plush sacque. Oh! What a busy world when everybody works and how sadly those will be disappointed who spend their extra dimes before the Catholic Fair. Type setters work constantly. [illegible] the United States Senate, where the balance of [illegible] between the two great parties is about to be reduced to the narrowest possible basis by the new Senators admitted on that day. The hold-over Senators number fifty—half Democrats and half Republicans; of the new Senators, the seats of three Democrats, one each from California, Indiana and West Virginia, are to be contested, and here is where the trouble is likely to arise, for the Democrats positively declare they will insist on having all the new Senators sworn in together, and thus there is a very pretty prospect of a dead lock in the highest legislative body of the land. However the struggle for political power may terminate, those independent thinkers who own no partisan allegiance, will probably extract some comfort from these controversies by the a settlement of an important constitution question—the right of a State to elect a United States Senator at a special session of the legislature—such an issue being involved in the cases from California and West Virginia. But if there should be a dead-lock in the Senate, I believe it would soon be broken by Mr. Riddleberger, as the Virginia Senator owing to his peculiar relations th the Republican party, has recently displayed a decided spirit of independence, which his partisan associates view with alarm.

The organization of the House will probably be of the most commonplace order, as there is no contest except for subordinate positions, and Mr. Carlisle will not be handicapped by pledges, as Speakers generally are, in the formation of committees. But he will be somewhat at sea in the placing of about one hundred new members, each of whom is ambitious to have his legislative talents properly recognized.

The State of New York, not content with already having gorged herself with the lions share of spoils under the present Administration, now comes forward with a candidate for Clerk of the House, in the person of W. G. Raines, of Rochester, who, it is claimed, had the unanimous support of the Empire State delegation; yet I am of the opinion that he has entered the contest to late to win, as Gen. Jno. B. Clarke, of Missouri, the present incumbent, appears to have sufficient support pledged to insure his re election. The vote for Doorkeeper of the House is now between two candidates—Donaldson, of Tennessee, the present incumbent, and Hunt, of Mississippi—the supporters of each being confident of the triumph of their favorite.

Among the members of the Democratic persuasion (so far as your correspondent has been able to ascertain their sentiments) there appears to be a genera desire for tariff reform—it being understood that the President heads the movement—while, on the other hand, the Republicans are mostly non-committal.

The International Fisheries Commission is still in session at the State Department, but as the proceedings are strictly secret, the public are profoundly ignorant of its doings.

All the evidence in the great Standard Oil case, charging discrimination in favor of the company by the railroads, is before the Interstate Commission, and the testimony is strongly against the giant monopoly, but the trial goes over till January.

The annual report of the First Assistant Postmaster General shows that the total number of post offices in operation June 30, 1887, was 55,157, and that during the year appointments were made as follows: On resignations and commissions expired, 6,863; on removals and suspensions, 2,584; on deaths of postmasters, 589; on establishment of new offices, 3,042; whole number of appointments made during the year, 13,077, a net decrease of 7,670, as compared with the preceeding year. The number of money order offices in operation on June 30, 1887, was 7,745,—an increase of 481 over the past year.

A Treasury statement shows that on account of unusually heavy disbursements during the month of November—$18,000,000 having been paid in pensions alone—there was an increase of one million dollars in the national debt.

Nominations by the President.

WASHINGTON, Dec 6, 1887.

The President has sent the following nominations to the Senate: Lucius Q. C. Lamar of Mississippi, to be associate justice of the supreme court of the United States; Wm. F. Vilas of Wisconsin to be Secretary of Interior; Dan. M. Dickenson of Michigan to be Postmaster-General; Charles L. Fairchild of New York, to be Secretary of the Treasury; George L. Rivers of New York to be Assistant Secretary of State; Isaac H. Maynard of New York, to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Sigourney Butler of Massachusetts to be Second Comptroller of the Treasury; James W. Hyatt of Connecticut, to be Treasurer of the United States.

HALL'S
$100 REWARD. $100.
The readers of the Times will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength, by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The Proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars, for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, [illegible] "After the War" which tells how a Yankee soldier [illegible] "Notes on Parisian Newspapers," Brander Matthews, is one of the features of the number. It is illustrated by Jeannoit, with many drawings of portraits of noted French journalists and their places of business. Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer contributes a description of "Durham Cathedral," finely illustrated by Joseph Pennell. "The Dusantes," Frank R. Stockton's full and explicit sequel to "The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine," begins in this number. In the new story there is another "casting away" under very different, but no less interesting circumstances. Profession Shields of Princeton has another article on church union, in which he reviews the recent "Open Letters" on church unity published in the Century. Lincoln's Inaugration," the serial history prepared by Messrs. Nicolay and Hay, is one of the best parts of that valuable work yet published. The story of "Prison Life of the Russian Revolutionists" is told by Edward Kennan. The serial stories of George W. Cable and Edward Eggleston are continued in generous installments. Two papers on "Irving's Foust" and two on the Tonic Sol fa System," complete the list of longer articles. The miscellany, open letters and bric-a-brac departments, contain the usual amount of standard production. (The Century company New New York).

THE BOODLE RECORD.

Where are the Boodle Aldermen and Broadway Railroadites?

The following is a review of the 1884 Board of Aldermen, and the other persons connected with it. It is interesting, as it shows just what has been done and what is still on the boards:—

In Sing Sing.	In Canada.
Jaehne,	Saylee.
O'Neil,	Dempsey,
McQuade.	DeLacey.
Out on Bail.	Informers.
Miller,	Duffy,
Pearson,	Fullgraff,
Wendel,	Waite.
Finck,	Insane.
Sheils,	McCabe.
Kirk,	Dead.
Farley,	Kenney,
Reilly,	McLaughlin.
Tried and Disagreed.	In Germany
Cleary.	Rothman.

This record shows that there are at present within the jurisdiction of the court nine members of the 1884 board out on bail and available to be tried. Of this number there are only two of the original combine of thirteen—Cleary and Reilly. The indicted Broadway railroad officials stand as follows:—

Indicted but Reversed.	On Bail.	Dead.
Sharp.	Kerr,	Foshay.

E. Bainbridge Munday Esq., County Att'y., Clay Co., Tex. says:" Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with Malarial Fever and Jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

This great remedy will ward off, as well as Cure all Malarial Diseases, and for all Kidney, Liver and Stomach Disorders stands unequaled. Price 50c. and $1. at R. E. Phillips' Drug Store.

Cheese Market.

[From the Utica Herald].

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Dec. 5

The last market of the season is always dull. Only a few lots of cheese remain to be closed out, and the buyers are so few that there is little chance for competition. To-day nearly all of the factories sold their entire make, but a few that are stil running did not sell at all, their policy being to hold until their make is finished, and then close out their whole batch at once. As a rule, too, better prices can be obtained in January than at the close of the board. These that sold above ten cents was every-day's make, and some of it small cheese also. Salesmen are all satisfied with the result of the season's trade, but doubtful whether next year will be as good. Following are the transactions

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
1	64	9¾
14	975	10c.
7	597	10¼
22	1,636

Ruling 10c. Transactions last year were only 1,323 boxes, with ruling at 10¼c.

LITTLE FALLS, Dec. 5.

Cheese—Teere has been quite a good sized offer of cheese to-day, and the sales amount to somewhat more than last week. Prices for the same class of stock show no variation from those of a week ago. Every-day stock was scarce and sold at 11c. Mixed lots, consisting of different grades, ranged from 10 to 10⅝c. Lots composed of every-other-day cheese, generally found ready sale at 10c., very little, if any, going above 10c. Lots containing every three days cheese and every other day, had to take one cent less and sold at 9c. Factories are rapidly closing out the last of their production for the season, and the number still having stock to sell is comparatively small.

The sales to-day are as follows:

Lots	Boxes	Price
21	987	9c.
24	1,538	10c.
1	29	10¼
2	89	10½

In lather made of IVORY SOAP."

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

Dey Brothers & Co., of Syracuse, are rising into prominence more rapidly than any other Dry Goods House in these parts. Their methods of business are fundamentally sound, and the public confidence reposed in them is specially manifested in the continual growth of their mail department.

Ladies from a distance can rely on their orders from samples being filled as carefully and as satisfactorily as when they buy from the piece, and at the same price. The Mail Department is thus a public benefit, and correspondence is invited. It will be a pleasure to Dey Brothers & Co. to attend carefully to orders sent from a distance as much as to wait on those who visit their stores and inspect personally their stocks.

Testing a New Fire Extinguisher.

Mr. Frank Dilts has placed in his new foundry and machine shop Automatic Fire extinguishers, manufactured by the J. C. Mackey Co., of Syracuse.

This system as arranged in Mr. Dilts' shop consists of pipes running along the ceiling of each story of the building at suitable distances apart. Into these pipes at suitable intervals are secured the Automatic sprinklers or heads.

These pipes are supplied with water under pressure from the City Water Works main. The water from the city main is kept back by an automatic electric valve and the pipes thereby kept dry to prevent freezing. Throughout the building and ajacent to the sprinklers or heads are placed what are called thermostats. As soon as the heat from a fire generated in any part of the the building reaches 155 degrees the solder on the thermostat fuses and a piece of metal drops off thereby starting an electric current which opens the valve in the city main and fills the pipes throughout the building with water. The solder on the sprinkler or head nearest the fire also fuses and drops off and a shower of water will be distributed over an area of from 15 to 20 feet in diameter on the ceiling and 32 feet on the floor, extinguishing the fire. Generally no sprinkler opens excepting that adjacent to the fire and thereby water damage is avoided except where the fire is.

On Monday afternoon, Mr. Mackey and the general agent of the company, Mr. T. H. Teill gave a practical test of the working of this system in the foundry. Ten or twelve bushels of the shavings were piled up and ignited. The heat generated fused the solder on the thermostat, opened the electric valve and a full head of water from the village main filled the pipes, but as the solder on the sprinklers was fixed not to melt at a less heat than 220 degrees it did not melt until heated with a lamp. When it was opened it worked nicely and quickly quenced the flames.

Another test will be made in the new paper mill of Dilts & Wells in a few weeks.

At A. E. NETTLETON'S

Fire at Bacon's.

Bacon's was the scene of great excitement on Monday afternoon shortly after five o'clock.

The electric light company had removed the globes of the incandescent lights in the second story of the building and failed to put them in again that afternoon. One of the salesmen had occasion to go up stairs and lighted a match to get a bundle of cotton batting. This in some way caught fire and he ran down stairs with it and into the street. It was soon discovered that another spark had got into the large quantity of batting and other combustible material and the corner showed a large flame which blazed up and devoured the curtains on the windows and threatened destruction to the whole building. Fortunately a small hose was near by for an emergency like this and Mr. Bacon soon had a stream of city water pouring upon the fast spreading flames.

The hose from Gage's mill was nearly laid and ready to be used, but was not required. A large quantity of batting, dusters, some cloth and blankets and a few other things were badly damaged.

It was a close call from a serious conflagration.

A Night Off.

Those who took a night off Monday evening and went to the opera house witnessed one of the best produced comedies that was ever seen in this village. There are five gentlemen and four ladies in the cast and every one seemed to be particularly adapted to the role taken.

This comedy and the manner in which it was produced stood out in strong contrast to the wishy-washy pieces that a Fulton audience often tolerate as for instance the Rose Lisle "Sea of Ice" company last week.

The whole was exceedingly funny without being silly and laughable situations followed each other in rapid succession. There was not an act but what was filled with unadulterated fun. A good audience was present and the great applause that was given showed that the entertainment was fully enjoyed. We like such plays and would like more of the same kind.

More Gas at the Test Well.

Again gas was struck on Friday last at the test well on the VanBuren farm. This makes seven times in all. The experts that have charge of the drilling, state that coming from the Trenton sandstone it collects and when a vein is reached pours forth. Its force after a short time becomes exhausted but there is, always more or less of it now and will readily ignite and burn with a large flame. On Saturday the cable broke at a depth of 950 feet. A new rope was at once ordered 1,800 feet in length. It is expected that work will be resumed today.

At the election of officers in Neatahwanta lodge 147, A. O. U. W., the following were elected: G. G. Whitaker, master workman; Chas. Case, foreman; F. M. Preston, overseer; Chas. H. Dexter, recorder; W. H. Haynes, financier; F. J. Switzer, receiver; H. Hudgins, guide; Geo, Morgan, inside watchman; Geo. Morton, outside watchman; C. K. Rogers, trustee and treasurer; G. G. Whitaker, representative at grand lodge; F. J. Switzer, alternate representative at grand lodge.

Good Groceries at Richardson's.

More Than Can Be Accommodated.

The correspondent to the Syracuse Standard made an investigation of school affairs Monday and writes as follows concerning them:

"The winter term of the schools opened last week with a large attendance, No. 2 numbering over 500 pupils, with every available seat taken not only in the three stories of the main building, but in the annex as well. Between 100 and 200 hundred "foreign" pupils were received, from whom the district derives quite a revenue. Additional applications were made yesterday, but from lack of room had to be refused. Very soon all students from other districts must look elsewhere for the higher grades of instruction unless more room can be furnished. As many of these pupils reside in the village, in adjoining districts, it seems hard to deny them the superior advantages which this central school now furnishes. For a time at least no more expense for for teachers need be incurred, and it would seem to be good economy to make additional room. During vacation the school board has added to the philosophical apparatus several hundred dollars worth of new instruments of the latest design, among them an Edison phonograph; the "Syren," showing the length of sound waves; a $100 dollar microscope with a full set of plates, and a complete set of Guyot's classical charts, with much more, making one of the most complete school libraries in the country.

The Lady of Lyons.

The first of Dr. Spencer's last readings will be given this evening, at Woodin's Hall, the play to be illustrated being Bulwer's Comedy, "The Lady of Lyons." The hall is small and cosy, and should be filled with Dr. Spencer's friends who may wish to hear him for the last time. Engagements elsewhere take him away immediately after Christmas. The three succeeding evenings will be filled by the recital of Ingomar, a repetition of "The Rivals" and as a Christmas program, Howell's "Five O'clock Tea," just published in the Harpers' for this month, and the whole of the Christmas Carol, of Dickens. Tickets for the course are placed at the low price of one dollar and single admissions for any evening, at fifty cents. If you love a quiet, intellectual evening, this is your opportunity.

A New Firm.

Frank Connell for many years head clerk in Bacon's, and William Patterson who has served in a like capacity in the "Bee Hive" have united and expect to start a new store under the firm name of Connell & Patterson. An effort is being made to buy out C. E. Sackett and a decision will probably be reached today. The new firm will be composed of two worthy young men who should and undoubtedly will gain and retain a liberal share of the public's patronage.

WORTH KNOWING.

Make butter to sell, not to keep.

A big horse with style will always sell at a big price.

Manitoba's potato crop is unusually large.

Heavy rains and worms greatly damaged the New Jersey cranberry crop.

In England 1,200 sheep recently sold for $15,000, or at the rate of $12.50 a head.

Dakota yields 41,000,000 bushels of wheat, and Minnesota 38,400,000 bushels this year.

The Florida orange crop is estimated at 1,000,000 boxes, or 200,000 boxes less than last year.

The past season's wool-clip in New South Wales is the largest ever known in that country.

Within ten years, 2,220,000 acres of British lands have been transformed into pasturage.

In Washington county, New York, 3,000,000 bushels of potatoes are given as the average crop.

Horse stables should be warm and free from draughts, but they should be well ventilated, and, not less, they should be well lighted.

Winter none but growing or producing animals. The liquid is the most valuable part of the manure; try to save it all.

A horse in Massachusetts ran away out of the pasture and went directly to his old home 20 miles away, after an absence of a dozen years. Who says the horse has no memory?

The cranberry crop of 1887 promises to be from 60,000 to 70,000 bushels less than last year, which was over 200,000 less than the large crop of 1885.

The shipment of California fruits to the East by rail last October, were over 24,000,000 pounds, double the amount shipped in October, 1886.

Texas live stock is thus estimated: horses and mules, 1,103,522 head, valued at $32,221,771. Cattle, 6,741,964 head, valued at $48,735,014. Great country for cattle, that "Lone Star State."

The largest wheat crop India ever produced was 302,000,000 bushels from 27,000,000 acres, or an average yield of 11 5-27 bushels per acre. The crop of 1887 was 238,0000,000, or an average yield of only 8 22-27 bushels.

Western New York is about the only section which is reported to have "an immense apple crop" this year; and the same productive region was also favored with an unusually large yield of potatoes, so great that freight cars have been in demand for shipping the tubers to western states. Per contrary, the west is very short of both apples and potatoes, and the people are obliged to send east for these important articles, or content themselves with bread and meat.

Poultry Notes

Two or three weeks of generous feeding of fat producing food, will put fowls in good condition for the table. Unfortunately for the lovers of toothsome chicken flesh, this is seldom done in the greater portion of this country. In most of the poultry raising countries and districts of Europe, the good and industrious poultry keeper would never think of such a thing as picking up fowls from their runs and sending them to market. They are cooped and fed well, and most generally forced to take extra food to hasten the process of fattening, thereby insuring tenderness and flavor, which could not be obtained if allowed to indulge in their habitual liberty and daily exercise.

There is no profit in keeping old stock take our word for it. Better kill them off when you have secured some chicks from them, for all you may do toward their care will not bring them back to their wonted prolificacy or vivacity. They have had their day of usefulness, and are no longer profitable to their keepers, are no ornaments to the poultry yard, are the first to catch and succumb to disease; and their place should be filled with healthy and promising chicks.

The time has gone by for disposing of anything in the shape of dead poultry at remunerative prices, unless it comes to market in the best order, not only as regards the plucking but also as regards the packing of the birds.—Poultry Monthly.

Utilizing Coarse Fodder.

Corn fodder, straw, and even marsh hay at times, are the sole dependance for feeding. In such cases these inferior fodders may be made up by the addition of the richer foods which can be purchased and used at such a profit as will be satisfactory to the dairyman. And in feeding the coarser fodders, the use of roots with them will be found exceedingly valuable. The succulent roots being almost wholly digestible, aid very much in the digestion of the coarser fodder: and for winter feeding a supply of mangels or sugar beets will be indispensable for the most profit. In a similar way the use of malt sprouts steeped in water which makes a sweet semi-liquid pulp of an agreeable odor and taste, mixed with cut straw and corn fodder, has been known to keep up the yield of milk; and with a slight increase in mixed meal, or ground grain food, to prevent any deficency in the yield of butter. Well cured corn fodder, or the stalks of the corn crop, cut before frost, or as soon as the grain has been glazed and stacked so as to preserve the sweetness of the leaves, has yielded, with the addition of a peck of sliced roots, as much and as good butter as that made from clover hay.—American Agriculturist for December.

Unprofitable Stock.

Now is the time to cull out and fatten or sell stock that it will not pay to winter. Keep no poor, useless animals of any kind; for they will soon eat up the profits. Many a farmer misses it by trying to keep over more animals than he can feed properly. Better keep a small herd in good condition than a large one, half starved. Farmers who don't want to have hides and carcasses for sale in the spring, will save trouble and expense by disposing of all surplus stock, or such as does not promise well for the future.

A well known [illegible] in Lebanon, was, at one time, the publisher of a weekly paper in the western part of the state. One day while pondering how he was to keep the machinery of the office in running order, a young lady entered his sanctum, and, in a winning way said:

"Mr. Editor, do you publish all you print?"

"Yes," was the ready answer.

"Well, says the vision of loviness, "I guess I won't let you do it."

"Do what?" ejuculated the mystified scissors wielder.

"Print a kiss on my cheek," was the answer, as the door softly closed behind her, leaving the projector of "the long felt want" to his sad, sad reflections. The question what did she mean? has not been solved by him yet.—Reno Gazette.

In order to have an unfailing cure for these difficulties every miner carries with him a bottle of VanWert's Balsam. Baby Louise.

A lady living in Detroit was called suddenly to Adrian, Mich., to wait on a sick relative, leaving her own little family at home. Before she could return her little child was taken ill, but as it had good care and a faithful doctor, the mother remained in Adrian, telephoning every few hours to know how "Baby Louise" was. At last, in response to the mother's question, a little sick voice at the other end of the telephone feebly answered:

"Me better, mamma; baby 'Ouise all yite now."

Baby's homesick mother took the next train for Detroit.—Detroit Free Press.
